Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: I think that is all.

Mr. Campbell: Nothing further.

WILLIAM GRAHAM

a witness for the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Q. Mr. Graham—I may be hazy on this, you may have answered this question at the previous examination—were you acquainted during his lifetime with a man by the name of J. B. Scarlett, also known as Jack Sullivan? A. Very well.

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Scarlett, also known as Sullivan, was associated with you in business enterprises? A. For many years.

Q. In Reno. Now during the year 1946, I believe you have already testified that negotiations were undertaken, whereby you and another business associate of yours, Mr. James B. McKay, were selling your stock in Cal-Neva Lodge corporation to the defendant in this case, Mr. Remmer, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And by whom was that transaction being handled? [2635]

A. By George Thatcher, the attorney.

Q. By the way, Mr. Graham, is Mr. J. B. Scarlett, also known as Jack Sullivan, still living?

A. No, he is dead.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

Q. When did he die, if you recall?

A. Last year.

Q. Here in Reno? A. Yes.

Q. Now in the course of the negotiations for the sale of that stock belonging to you and Mr. McKay to Mr. Remmer, I believe I am correct in my recollection that you previously testified that there were some personal accounts owing from all three of you to the Cal-Neva corporation that had to be cleaned up and paid? A. That is correct.

Q. And that was also being handled through Mr. Thatcher's office? A. Mr. Thatcher, yes.

Q. And directing your attention to about that time which, if my recollection serves me, was in May or June of 1946, I will ask you whether or not you had a conversation with Mr. Scarlett, also known as Sullivan, regarding a loan to Mr. Remmer?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to; calling for hearsay, if the Court please. [2636]

The Court: Objection will be sustained.

Q. Well, did you have a conversation with Mr. Scarlett at or about that time when the Cal-Neva transaction was being conducted in 1946, May or June?

The Court: You may answer that yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. I wanted to add something to the question.

The Court: Pardon me.

Q. This is a specific conversation I am seeking to identify, a conversation regarding Mr. Remmer?

A. Yes.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as calling for hearsay.

The Court: The answer may stand.

Mr. Gillen: Now, may it please the Court, at this point I think I should seek your Honor's direction as to your Honor's policy. We are about to encounter a situation similar to a matter discussed earlier this morning and I want to know what is your Honor's policy.

The Court: Do you want to take it up in the absence of the jury?

Mr. Gillen: If your Honor thinks that is advisable.

The Court: Yes, I think it is.

(In the absence of the jury.)

RE: OFFER OF PROOF LOAN TO SCARLETT

(Feb. 7, 1952—Notebook No. 341—P.P. 26-48.)

Mr. Gillen: Would it be your Honor's pleasure that I present this matter in the form of offer of proof first?

The Court: I hardly know what you have in mind.

Mr. Gillen: We have in mind regarding the same type of transaction Mr. Thatcher was testifying to this morning. We desire to offer evidence of admission against interest on the part of J. B. Scarlett, also known as Jack Sullivan, with regard to a $25,000 loan made by him to Mr. Remmer and the repayment of that loan, and with regard to his expressed and committed intention to make that loan taking place on two separate occasions.

BLURRED COPY

Now we offer to prove, may it please the Court, through Mr. Graham that at the time in 1946, May or June, that the sale of the Graham and McKay interests to Remmer was under negotiations, that each of the three persons involved in the transaction were required to liquidate, or pay up, certain obligations that they personally owed, or were chargeable to them personally by the Cal-Neva corporation. I think your Honor will recall there is some testimony already in the record that Mr. Graham at that time owed the corporation some four thousand dollars, Mr. McKay owed the corporation three thousand odd dollars and Mr. Remmer owed the corporation some seventy odd thousand dollars, and that that money had to be paid into the corporation before the transfer of stock and so on and the account cleared off.

We offer to prove that at that time that Mr. Scarlett communicated personally with Mr. Graham and stated to Mr. Graham, "I have just promised Bones Remmer that I would loan him $25,000. He says he needs it to clean up his account with Cal-Neva, is that true?" That Mr. Graham stated to him yes, it was true, that they were all cleaning up their accounts with Cal-Neva. That Mr. Scarlett then said to Mr. Graham, "Well, is it all right to give it to him? Will I get my money back?" and Mr. Graham said to Mr. Scarlett, "You will get some money back; when he makes money or sells the place, you will get the balance of it, that is how we are going to get our money, that is how we are going to get our money back," and Mr. Scarlett said to Mr. Graham, "All right, then, I promised him I will loan it to him and I will."

We offer to prove that on a number of occasions between 1946, May or June, and 1949, March, that Mr. Scarlett spoke to Mr. Graham and asked Mr. Graham when and if Mr. Remmer had sold or planned to sell or had arranged to sell Cal-Neva, because he wanted to get his 1946 loan back, his money back, and that Mr. Graham on those occasions told him that Mr. Remmer was looking for a buyer for Cal-Neva.

We offer to prove that Mr. Scarlett told Mr. Graham that he had asked Mr. Woodburn, the lawyer, to protect him on the return of the $25,000 loan in 1946.

We offer to prove, may it please the Court, that in October, if I recollect correctly the month, of 1948, the sale of Cal-Neva by Remmer to the Adler interests was in the process of negotiations and that there was to be an escrow at the First National Bank of Nevada and on that occasion Mr. Scarlett spoke to Mr. Graham and asked him concerning the getting back of his money and that Mr. Graham said, "When the money comes through, you will get your money."

BLURRED COPY

We offer to prove further that although the sale was consummated, if I remember correctly, in October or November of 1948, the escrow was not perfected and the money was not payable until March of 1949, and that on March 2, 1949, Mr. Graham was paid, as was his associate, Mr. McKay, a large sum of the money out of the first money that was paid by Adler to Remmer in escrow at the First National Bank of Nevada, and upon receiving his money, that Mr. Graham communicated with Mr. Scarlett, or talked in person with Mr. Scarlett, also known as Sullivan, and said to Mr. Scarlett, "The money is ready. They are paying it out of the escrow. I got mine; you had better get your loan for 1946 note now. Go over to Woodburn's office," and that Mr. Scarlett said to Mr. Graham—It is disturbing to have counsel laughing when I am trying to talk. There has been a lot of snickering going on in this case and I have noticed it.

The Court: I haven't seen any of it getting to the jury and I don't know what took place.

Mr. Campbell: I don't know to what counsel is referring.

The Court: I hadn't noticed any matter of that kind. If I had and it occurred to me it was derisive, I would ask counsel to desist. I can not believe counsel would do that.

Mr. Gillen: I believe my eyes and I believe the eyes of my associates, who have seen the same thing.

Mr. Avakian: I might say to your Honor on about two occasions——

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: There are a lot of things I don't like.

Mr. Gillen: I hope you are not speaking to us.

The Court: I notice when the jury is out that counsel go back and forth to speak and converse with jurors. I do not say they are conversing with them about the case, but I do not believe it is the proper thing to do.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think you have found any reason to find fault with me, your Honor. I have religiously avoided——

The Court: I think we ought not to fraternize.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think the defense has. If they pleasantly, it is just common courtesy.

The Court: I just want to mention things that happen, as long as you are mentioning a few things. I do not think counsel would knowingly offer any derision. I have not noticed any such disposition on the part of counsel on either side, so I hope you are wrong in your assumption, Mr. Gillen.

Mr. Gillen: I hope I am, too. I hope they are thinking up a joke they heard a week ago.

The Court: Yes, I hope so.

Mr. Gillen: Mr. Scarlett said to Mr. Graham at that time: "Well, I got my money. Woodburn took care of it for me."

Now, may it please the Court, this testimony is connected up with the three documents which were offered in evidence yesterday, which were in for identification, and now let me ask you, Mr. Graham:

Q. Would you so testify? You have heard what I offer—would you so testify?

BLURRED COPY

A. I would so testify, the same as you said.

Mr. Gillen: That connects up with that order or assignment to the escrow holder, I think it is D-1, E and F, the escrow order, the cashier's check from the Nevada National Bank, and the receipt signed by Mr. Scarlett, which was handled in Mr. Woodburn's office.

The Court: I understand you are through now. Before you proceed I would like to have you read a little of the first part of this over.

Mr. Campbell: My objection is that this is calling for hearsay and the testimony is hearsay and further, primary evidence is available, whether or not the loan was made and over what period of time it existed. The primary evidence, of course, would be evidence of the parties to the loan. It is true the evidence would show that Mr. Sullivan is deceased. However, the evidence of the other party to the loan is available to the defense. Under the circumstances, I believe that this hearsay testimony should not be admitted, and I make my objection upon that ground.

Mr. Gillen: I might say Mr. Campbell has already committed himself in previous argument to this very situation. In Corpus Juris Secundum, your Honor, Vol. 31, found at page 217, we find this language under the "Evidence" Chapter: (Reads.) Now it is the best available or primary evidence. The statement counsel made regarding best available or primary evidence means best obtainable or primary evidence of the declarant's declaration, not of the transaction.

The Court: Let me ask you a question. I had a purpose in having that read back to refresh my memory as to what this offer involves. First, it seems to involve, or to be concerned with, a conversation occurring in 1946.

Mr. Gillen: That is right.

The Court: In which Mr. Scarlett advised with Mr. Graham as to the feasibility of making a loan which he promised to Mr. Remmer.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, he had promised it, he had committed himself.

The Court: All right. Then the next conversation in July of 1946, or some time around there, "When is the sale going to be made so I can get my money back?"

Mr. Gillen: That was intervening.

The Court: Yes, that happened some time in 1947, 1948, or 1949, in regard to an escrow proposition. Where is there any declaration here against interest? How could a man say that when he inquired of John Doe, "Shall I loan money to Bill Smith," that is a declaration against interest?

Mr. Gillen: No, it is a little different than that, may it please the Court.

The Court: That is the only basis on which you ask to have evidence admitted as his declaration against interest.

Mr. Gillen: But it is a little different than that. When a man commits himself, makes an agreement to do something, he is making a declaration against his interest. If I agree to wash your Honor's car, I am making a declaration against my interest. I am obligating myself. Now his conversation with Mr. Graham was a declaration against his interest that he had already made a promise to Mr. Remmer that he had loaned money and was doing was merely conferring with Mr. Graham, as the language would indicate, whether or not the representations that had been made to him by Mr. Remmer—he was committed to the promise to loan Mr. Remmer $25,000—were true or untrue, in that Mr. Remmer stated he needed money to square up his account with Cal-Neva corporation, and he asked Mr. Graham if they were true or untrue and then in addition, in the same conversation, he asked Mr. Graham about how he would get the money back and Mr. Graham told him what he was doing, he would have to wait until Mr. Remmer either made money or sold the place, Mr. Graham saying, "That is the way we are going to get our money." Now the intervening conversation merely does show the existence of the obligation, the life of the obligation, still being alive. Now may I say very frankly to your Honor that as to the intervening conversation, in the occasions intervening between the first conversation in 1946, May or June, and the ultimate conversation in which he says the obligation has been cleared, I think is properly to be excluded as hearsay, because it is merely a matter of inquiry, "Where am I going to get my money?", no declaration of interest, so I believe that would properly be excluded. However, ultimately we find the situation where Mr. Scarlett then being advised the money is now available and of the debts being paid out of the escrow—"I got mine. Go over to Woodburn's and get yours"—and this is all referring to the 1946 loan—and at that point Mr. Scarlett makes the declaration against interest, to wit, "I have already been paid." In other words, Mr. Remmer is no longer obligated to me, I have my money.

BLURRED COPY

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: When was that conversation had, that he said he got his money?

Mr. Gillen: That was had in 1949, on March 2nd, when Mr. Graham and Mr. McKay collected their money.

The Court: Well, that was way after the time stated in the indictment.

Mr. Gillen: Well, that wouldn't make any difference. We have lots of things in this record after the time stated in the indictment but inclusion of matters that occurred during the indictment period.

The Court: I can't see where a conversation which began in 1946, was declaration against interest.

Mr. Gillen: May I point to another point in the same volume I just read to your Honor, Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 31 on Evidence. It says: "Thus the declaration is admissible * * *"

The Court: This conversation only had to do with solicitation of advice of Mr. Graham whether he should make this loan.

Mr. Gillen: The 1949 conversation.

The Court: 1946. Let me get that 1949 conversation again.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Gillen: May I straighten out your Honor on 1946. If I said to your Honor, "I have just signed a contract, or entered into a contract, to build three houses" and at some later time, when I was incapable to go ahead, for whatever reason, and you were called upon to determine whether or not I had ever made a declaration against my interest, that I had obligated myself by contract or otherwise to do a certain thing, that would be a perfectly proper instance of a declaration against my interest. Now as to 1949, may it please the Court, the reverse is true. The man then says, "I am obligated to do something for some one," but the reverse is true in 1949—he says, "I no longer have an obligation against Mr. Remmer. I got my money. I am paid."

The Court: You said a little while ago that that was obviously hearsay, that later conversation?

Mr. Gillen: No, it is the exception. Now, your Honor, in regard to the 1949 conversation, your Honor will remember that Mrs. Badovinatz testified to something that occurred in February in 1947.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Gillen: You remember she said in February, 1947, her husband said to her, "I am going to the bank to get a cashier's check to pay Bones Remmer back some money I owe him." She may have mentioned $5,000, I don't recall. That was supplemented by records of the bank, showing on February 7, 1947, he did in fact purchase a cashier's check made payable to Mr. Remmer, which, of course, your Honor's ruling was perfectly proper, with the exception, and we still take the exception, that it does not show whether the obligation was incurred during——

The Court (Interceding): We will postpone this argument now. I have three or four matters at one o'clock. We will be in recess in this case until quarter to two.

1:45 P.M.

(Defendant present. Jury absent.)

Mr. Gillen: Shall I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Gillen: May it please your Honor, to summarize the rule that covers the situation that confronts us here, may I respectfully invite your Honor's attention to Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 31, on the subject of "Evidence," the language found at page 959, Section 217. Under the heading of "Requirements for Admission of Declarations," we find the following language, based on summarization of what appears to be the universal rule. The language reads as follows (Reads.) Now, of course, we have that situation here. The declarant, it has been established, is deceased, therefore unavailable as a witness before this court. (Reads (2).) And we have that situation here. We have these three conversations, yes, more than three conversations, but we have the conversation of 1946, May, between Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Graham, Mr. Scarlett being the deceased declarant, in which Mr. Scarlett makes a declaration against his interest, to the effect that he has committed himself to make a loan, and then further conversation relates to the verification of the representations that were made to him when the proposal of the loan was made and when his commitment to make the loan was obtained. Then there were intervening, as I pointed out to your Honor this morning, conversations that we referred to in the course of the next ensuing two years, which I said to your Honor quite frankly were not declarations against interest and should properly not be admissible conversations, wherein Mr. Scarlett asked Mr. Graham whether or not any money was available or whether Cal-Neva was going to be sold and when he could expect to get his money. Those were merely inquiries and I do not believe properly declarations against interest. And then finally we have the March, 1949, conversation, wherein Mr. Graham advised Mr. Scarlett that the money is now being paid out of the escrow and Mr. Graham has received his money and Mr. Scarlett should go and receive his, a declaration of Mr. Scarlett against his interest that he has already been paid the 1946 loan by Mr. Woodburn and that Mr. Remmer is no longer obligated to him. (Reads (3) from CJS.) Certainly Mr. Scarlett, having discussed these things, was cognizant of the facts relating thereto. (Reads (4).) The same general philosophy that is noted in denying declarations.

Now if I may invite your Honor's attention again to the second declaration, to the second ground—and I will read it again to your Honor: (Reads (2).) Now at page 963 we find a clarification of that second necessary ground and that clarification is found in the following language: (Reads.) And that is the situation that we have here. In fact, we have both situations. The first situation, the conversation of 1946, Mr. Scarlett makes an acknowledgment or declaration of an indebtedness to another. In other words, by the commitment of agreeing to make the loan, he had obligated himself to fulfill his promise to Mr. Remmer to make the loan, and then in 1949, we have the reverse of the situation, where he acknowledges that the obligation has been paid, liquidated and paid and that the man to whom he made the loan was no longer obligated to him, that he had nothing coming on that account.

Now in regard, may it please the Court, to the sanctity of such things, as indicated in the fourth ground I mentioned to your Honor, we find this language which appears to amplify that rule, under the heading of "Statements Against Interest, Wigmore, Vol. 5, Section 1465," and I quote: (Reads.) In other words, boiling it down to ordinary straight language, it appears that the man at the time had no reason to tell any fibs, had no reason to lie about his own interest and his declaration, therefore, is true, would have the sanctity of being accurate and truthful, because there was no reason for it to be otherwise.

Now that is our situation, your Honor, and your Honor did mention this morning that the 1949 conversation a declaration of interest took place after the end bracket of the time period involved in the indictment, and I say to your Honor that that makes no difference, for this reason—if the obligation was incurred within the time period of the indictment and was repaid, it would be practically a washed transaction; in other words, it would have no effect on net worth. A man has $100 by borrowing within the time period and pays back $100, it is a washed transaction because at the end of the year it hasn't changed his situation. It makes no difference. But it is where a situation arises where payment is made on an earlier obligation at a later date—and I again refer to the situation of Mrs. Badovinatz, where the statement was made regarding the conversation that was held between her husband and herself in 1947, in February, some two months after the close of the indictment period December 31, 1946, and her husband said, "I am going to the bank to get a cashier's check—whether she mentioned the amount or not, I do not recall—to pay the money I owe to Bones Remmer," and I believe that he did in fact go and get a cashier's check and it was in fact made payable to the defendant in this case. So I say to your Honor that we have fully met the four requirements laid down by the universal rule.

Counsel has said something about another party to the transaction being present and this is not the best available evidence. It is not only the best available evidence, but it is the only evidence of the declaration. We are concerned here not with the facts so much as the declaration against interest. That is the concern of your Honor in your Honor's contemplated ruling. Now I know what counsel is talking about. He is talking about the possibility that Mr. Remmer, having been present, that he could take the witness stand and testify whether he owed money or not. That is not the situation we are confronted with here. As a matter of fact, the witness could take the witness stand and say things that the other party to the transaction could deny, but here we have the other party to the transaction admitting, and admitting what? That he had agreed to and did lend money to the defendant and admitting that at a later time that he had been repaid the money and there was no further obligation. Now to whom did he make this declaration against his interest? To Mr. Remmer? No, to Mr. Graham, and Mr. Graham is not only the best available evidence, but the only available evidence as to those two conversations, because they were made directly with Mr. Graham by the deceased declarant, and we submit, your Honor, having met all requirements and being so closely related, except in a stronger position that that in the case of Mrs. Badovinatz, that both conversations should be admitted from the Witness Graham.

Mr. Campbell: May I be heard very briefly, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Campbell: It seems to me that we may be losing sight of the ultimate fact which counsel apparently is attempting to prove here.

I understand from counsel's statement that he is attempting to prove that a loan was made by Mr. Scarlett, or Mr. Sullivan as he was known in a business sense, to Mr. Remmer in 1946, which loan was subsequently repaid in 1948, or 1949—1949. Now in support of that contention he is offering these declarations purportedly made by Mr. Scarlett to Mr. Graham.

BLURRED COPY

What do those declarations amount to? In the first place, the first conversation, the one occurred in 1946, according to the offer of proof, is Mr. Scarlett says to Mr. Graham: "I am thinking about, or considering, making a loan."

Mr. Gillen: He said, "I promised to make a loan."

Mr. Campbell: That is not my understanding.

Mr. Gillen: Well, let us read the record.

Mr. Campbell: Well, whatever it is, at any rate he was contemplating a loan which had not been made at that time and he was inquiring, according to the offer, as to the repayment——

Mr. Gillen: I think counsel is misquoting the offer, and if counsel is going to do that, it is going to be confusing and we ought to have the offer of proof read.

The Court: I take it the offer of proof is that Mr. Scarlett stated he had promised to loan the money.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: I understand that.

Mr. Campbell: Supposing the testimony would be that Mr. Scarlett told Mr. Graham, "I have promised Mr. Remmer that I am going to loan him some money," now is that a statement against pecuniary interest? It is not a statement which in and of itself would bind legally Mr. Scarlett to loan money. It might be corroborative of evidence, if it were available, that such a promise had been made to Mr. Remmer, but that is not what this evidence is. He says: "I promised to loan him this money. What are my chances to get it back?" Then at a later date he tells Mr. Graham, "I got my money back. Mr. Remmer doesn't owe me any longer." He can testify to the ultimate facts, but to prove the loan and the date upon which it was made, none of this is in the offer of proof through Mr. Graham. From that conversation it does not follow that the loan was made or that it was contemplated in that conversation, nor that the loan was made in 1946.

Now I think this is true—take, for example, a conversation as between the two individuals—the primary evidence of what took place in that conversation must be obtained from the participants themselves.

Mr. Gillen: That is in contradiction to the rule.

Mr. Campbell: May I finish my argument, Mr. Gillen.

Now as to whether or not a loan was made and when it was made and whether or not the documents which have been marked for identification here would show the assignment of some $25,000 in 1949, to Mr. Scarlett relates to a loan, the primary evidence of that loan, the terms under which it was made, the conditions surrounding it, is necessarily the testimony and evidence of the parties to the transaction. Now it is true that one party to that transaction is deceased. His testimony is not available. The conversation he had with Mr. Graham does not supply the ultimate fact sought to be proved here, as to whether or not, after that conversation, a loan was consummated and was consummated in 1946. However, if such loan were made, as I stated before, the direct evidence of the making of the loan and when it was made and the conditions surrounding it is available to the defendant, so that it is not necessary to resort to hearsay evidence in the first place, and in the second place, it does not render hearsay evidence admissible, and in the third place, the evidence relative to the conversation in 1946, does not meet the requirements as set forth in law as read by Mr. Gillen.

Now a statement—for example, let us take it a step farther and say that Mr. Scarlett said in 1946, that "Remmer owes me $25,000," or Remmer owes me $50,000 or $100,000. That is not a statement against pecuniary interest of Mr. Scarlett. That is a statement in favor of his pecuniary interest, which is the ultimate fact that counsel is attempting to prove, that Mr. Remmer did owe Mr. Scarlett $25,000.

Now as to the conversation in 1949, if that is admissible—that is to say, the conversation in which Mr. Scarlett stated, "I have now received my money"—if that is admissible under the provisions of the exception to the hearsay rule, nevertheless it, standing alone, would be immaterial, unless it were shown that the conversation related to a loan which had been made in 1946, and which was an outstanding indebtedness as of December 31, 1946, none of which matters this conversation purports to supply; and I, therefore, renew the objection to the proffered evidence upon the grounds that it calls for hearsay and is not within any exception to the hearsay rule, and secondly, that the proffered testimony is immaterial to the issues before this Court.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: May I be heard in reply to counsel.

May it please the Court, what counsel is trying to say, is trying to enforce upon your Honor, is something that is at cross-purposes with the problem that confronts your Honor at this time. In other words, he says if there is a party to the transaction living and available, then you can never use a declaration against interest, which is not the fact. What he is trying to say, the defendant is here, so the defendant, if he wants to prove that, has to take the stand and prove it himself. Now, as a matter of fact, the jury might not believe the defendant, the jury might not be as willing to accept the defendant's testimony concerning the fact that he had borrowed $25,000 at a time when it was very important for him to acquire $25,000, or any amount of money, they might be less willing to receive and believe such testimony coming from the defendant than to believe testimony of a disinterested witness who comes here and says that the party to the transaction on two different occasions when there was no rhyme or reason for him to make these declarations against his interest to him concerning his obligations to or obligations from the defendant in this case. The problem that concerns your Honor here is whether or not declarations against interest have been made and meet requirements that have been summarized here as the universal rule, not the fact whether the transaction took place or how many parties may be living to the transaction or whether or not we have presented here, in the person of Mr. Graham, the best available witness and evidence as declaration against interest made by a declarant who is now beyond the reach of the court by reason of his demise.

Counsel says another thing. Counsel says there is no evidence of when the obligation was incurred. Well, in the Badovinatz matter, there was no evidence when the obligation was incurred, either. That does not make any difference, but as a matter of fact, we have offered here by declaration against interest, we offer these two conversations in which reference is made to when the obligation was incurred, to wit, in 1946, and that attaches itself to a specific milestone in this chain of events, that milestone being the occasion when Mr. Graham and Mr. McKay were selling their interests to Mr. Remmer and when it became necessary for all of them to raise some money to pay their outstanding accounts to the corporation, so there was the milestone in connection and the reason why Mr. Remmer borrowed $25,000. He probably borrowed money from other people to meet the $70,000 obligation to the corporation.

Now counsel also mentioned that this 1949—I don't quite follow—conversation standing alone meant nothing. Well, I disagree with him that it means nothing. It is a declaration against interest by a deceased person, related by a disinterested person not a party to the transaction——

The Court (Interceding): You must keep in mind Mr. Scarlett did not tell Mr. Graham about a loan. He told him he contemplated a loan.

Mr. Gillen: That is correct.

The Court: There is nothing in any conversation of Mr. Scarlett's that would indicate whether or not he ever did loan money.

Mr. Gillen: In 1949, there was, your Honor.

The Court: He said he got some money, but nothing in the conversation of Mr. Scarlett's that would show that in 1946, he loaned any money to Mr. Remmer.

Mr. Gillen: In 1946, it is true he did say, "I loaned," he said, "I have agreed, or promised, to loan money, $25,000." He further inquired as to the truthfulness as to the representations, he said, "He said he needs it for Cal-Neva, is that true?" Mr. Graham assured him the money was needed for Cal-Neva by the three stockholders, then he said something to the effect about when he would get the money back and Mr. Graham said, "When he makes money or Cal-Neva is sold."

There were intervening conversations, concededly not declarations against interest, merely inquiries, but the next conversation in 1949, that the money is made available in escrow, ready to be paid, Mr. Graham gets his money, Mr. Graham goes to Mr. Scarlett and says to him, "I just got my money. If you want to get your money on the loan you made in 1946, go over to the lawyer's office and get it," and Mr. Scarlett didn't say, "I didn't loan any money in 1946," or anything of the sort. Mr. Scarlett said, "I have already been taken care of. Mr. Woodburn has already given me my money," or "I have already got my money from Woodburn. It has been paid." Supplementing that we have the transaction in Mr. Woodburn's office, the same amount, we have the assignment out of the proceeds of the escrow in the Adler transaction, prepared by Mr. Woodburn in his office, wherein Mr. Remmer directs the escrow trust department of the bank to pay out of the first money that comes in from Adler to Mr. Scarlett the sum of $25,000. We have the check that was paid, bearing the same date as Mr. Graham got his money, March 2, 1949, for the same amount, $25,000, and Mr. Scarlett's receipt and release to the escrow or trust department that he had received that money, his endorsement on the check, check made payable to him, endorsed by him, and the check obviously has been cancelled, paid off. And I say, your Honor, that we have met every single requirement under the rule and that both of these declarations against interest should go before the jury, and we say the position we are in here is much stronger than the position in which we concede your Honor was right in allowing the declaration in the Badovinatz matter.

BLURRED COPY

The Court: Objection will be sustained. Call in the jury.

resumed the witness stand on further

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Mr. Gillen: In view of the Court's ruling, I take it I can not pursue the subject that left at the recess taken by the Court this morning.

The Court: No.

Q. Now, Mr. Graham, you previously testified, it is my recollection, that you, in the year 1946, loaned to Mr. Remmer the sum of ten thousand dollars in the form of a check, which loan was paid back in either 1947, or 1948, do you recollect that?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you have the check that you issued to Mr. Remmer with you? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Gillen: May I see it, please? May I have this marked for identification?

Q. Mr. Graham, you handed me your check that you issued in favor of Elmer Remmer on February 2, 1946, for the sum of ten thousand dollars?

A. Yes, that is the check.

Mr. Gillen: I offer this check, may it please the Court, [2638] as defendant's exhibit next in evidence.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

Mr. Campbell: No objection.

The Court: It may be admitted, H-1.

Mr. Gillen: The exhibit is now known as Defendant's Exhibit H-1. With the Court's permission, I shall read it to the jury.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gillen: (Reads Exhibit H-1.)

Q. Now, Mr. Graham, were you acquainted, during his lifetime, with a man by the name of Robert Jeffers? A. Yes.

Q. Mr. Graham, directing your attention to the month of July, 1947, do you have a recollection of having telephoned long distance to Elmer Remmer concerning Mr. Robert Jeffers? A. Yes.

Q. And what was the occasion of your calling Mr. Remmer concerning Robert Jeffers at that time? A. He owed the Bank Club.

Q. How much money did he owe the Bank Club?

A. Twenty some thousand dollars.

Q. Who was it that owed the Bank Club twenty some thousand dollars? A. Bob Jeffers.

Q. Let me ask you, does it refresh your recollection that it was twenty-three thousand? [2639]

A. Twenty some thousand, I don't know.

Q. What was your conversation with Mr. Remmer on that occasion concerning the twenty some thousand dollars that Mr. Jeffers owed the Bank Club?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent.

The Court: Objection sustained.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

Mr. Gillen: I do not think it is incompetent, your Honor. It is further evidence supporting the matter that is already before the jury, that was brought out from the prosecution's witness, namely a Mr. Perkins, who was the bookkeeper or accountant for the Bank Club. Your Honor will recall Mr. Perkins testified concerning——

The Court (Interceding): We had better have our arguments in the absence of the jury.

Mr. Gillen: This is not an argument, just calling your Honor's attention to some testimony that has gone before the jury.

The Court: The ruling will stand. If you want to argue, I will give you an opportunity.

Mr. Gillen: I am sorry to discommode the jury, but it is important.

(Jury and alternate jurors admonished and excused at 2:25 p.m.) [2640]

RE: CHECK FROM BANK CLUB

(Febr. 7, 1952—Notebook 341—P.P. 50-57.)

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, as your Honor knows, the introduction of evidence on the subject matter or topic is not like the one-horse shay, it can not all be done at once; I mean, it must be presented as points are presented.

I will remind your Honor there appears—and that is what I said in argument before the jury only making reference to testimony already in the record and heard by the jury—your Honor will recall that the prosecution called to the witness stand Mr. Perkins, who was accountant at the Bank Club, and Mr. Perkins gave testimony concerning the issuance of a Bank Club check to Elmer Remmer in the sum of $29,979, which money was to pay for certain Burton & Gallagher whiskey. Your Honor will recall that he testified that that check was required to be and was endorsed and cashed at the Bank Club by Mr. Remmer and that there was retained by the Bank Club out of that 29 thousand dollar check the sum of 23 thousand dollars to cover an obligation by Mr. Jeffress to the Bank Club for 23 thousand dollars which Mr. Remmer had previously agreed to underwrite.

Now, the testimony that I am seeking from Mr. Graham now is merely rounding out the picture of that particular transaction, wherein Mr. Jeffress, it will appear, had been gambling at the Bank Club and desired to put in a marker for some money and he wanted to put in markers to the extent of 23 thousand dollars and he stated to Mr. Graham, who was called up to OK whether this should be done or not, that Mr. Remmer owed him in excess of 23 thousand dollars. This grows out of the 50 thousand dollar loan. That evidence is before the Court, the promissory note for $50,000 that was testified to here and introduced, that Mr. Graham, to substantiate the representation, telephoned long-distance to Mr. Remmer and stated to Mr. Remmer, "Bob Jeffress is here. He says you owe him more than 23 thousand dollars. He wants to put in markers. Will you stand good for it?" and Mr. Remmer acknowledged his indebtedness to Mr. Jeffress in excess of 23 thousand dollars and agreed to stand good for it and that thereafter—this telephone conversation was had in July of 1947, obviously prior to July 30, 1947, because the check that we have in evidence under designation of plaintiff's 147A, bears the date of July 30, 1947, and then we have the testimony, as I have stated, of Mr. Perkins that that check was presented to Mr. Remmer for his endorsement, was cashed, 23 thousand dollars retained out of it to cover Mr. Remmer's underwriting of the Jeffress obligation, and that Mr. Remmer was given the difference on that check. Now, it is competent, relevant, and material and in verification of the entire transaction.

The Court: What do you expect to receive in the way of answer to this question? What do you intend to prove?

Mr. Gillen: I intend to prove, may it please the Court, in further substantiation of the fact that Mr. Remmer had borrowed $50,000 from Mr. Jeffress and that was the $50,000 needed for the Cal-Neva account, that $50,000 was still outstanding, or outstanding at least to the extent of $23,000, in July of 1947, and, of course, that would affect the net worth as of the end of December, 1946; and that Mr. Graham will testify that he in effect said, "Jeffress says you are obligated to him for more than 23 thousand, he owes us 23 thousand, or wants to become obligated to us—will you stand good for it," and Mr. Remmer said, "Yes, I owe him more than 23 thousand and I will stand good for it. Give it to him and I will pay it," and that he did in fact pay.

BLURRED COPY

The Court: I would suggest you propound this question to this witness and see what his answer is in the absence of the jury.

Mr. Gillen: All right.

Q. (By Mr. Gillen): Mr. Graham, in the month of July, 1947, did you have a long-distance telephone conversation with Mr. Remmer concerning Mr. Robert Jeffress? A. Yes.

Q. Will you just relate to the Court what the telephone conversation was with Mr. Remmer, what you said to him and he said to you?

A. I asked him—I said, "Bob Jeffress is in heavy, in some 20 thousand dollars, and I spoke to Mr. Jeffress and he says 'Bones owes me more than that,'" so I said, "Do you owe him?" He said, "Yes, I owe more than that to him; I will stand good for it."

Q. Did you mention the amount?

A. Twenty thousand, because I tried to stop Bob at ten thousand and tried to stop him at 15 thousand and he wouldn't stand for me stopping him.

Q. And Mr. Remmer said he owed Jeffress money and he would stand good for it?

A. Yes.

The Court: That conversation was with Mr. Remmer?

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor.

The Court: What is your objection to that?

Mr. Campbell: My objection is that it is incompetent, if the Court please.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: Just what do you mean? On what grounds?

Mr. Campbell: And further it is immaterial. This conversation is certainly, in the first place, not the best evidence of an obligation or the fact an obligation did exist or that if an obligation existed, that it existed as of December 31, 1946. That is the basis for my objection. I think further it is a self-serving declaration under the circumstances.

The Court: Fix the time of that conversation.

Mr. Gillen: I fixed it as of July, 1947, prior to July 30, 1947, which is the date Mr. Remmer made good the obligation of 23 thousand dollars out of this check, prosecution's Exhibit 147A.

Would your Honor care to hear on the other factors? Counsel stated a couple of things I think are misleading. In the first place, he said this was no evidence of indebtedness. As a matter of fact, your Honor, we have before your Honor evidence of the indebtedness in the form of Mr. Remmer's promissory note, dated in September of 1946, for the sum of $50,000 to Mr. Jeffress. Then we have—and counsel said it would be irrelevant—of course your Honor can readily see the relevancy—if the entire obligation was paid before December 31, 1946, as I mentioned in the other offer, it would then be a washed transaction, the money would have been obtained during the year and paid back during the year and leave nothing, it would be balanced off, evened up, but the obligation still existed at December 31, 1946, the closing date of this indictment, and it is very evident that the obligation still existed at that time because Mr. Jeffress tells Mr. Graham that Mr. Remmer owes him that amount of money, and Mr. Campbell then says it is a self-serving statement, and he mentioned that as an afterthought, on Mr. Remmer's part. Well, may it please the Court, it is certainly not self-serving statement at the time it was made. It may prove to be self-serving in character now but at the time it was made it was not certainly self-serving, when Mr. Remmer said, "Sure, give him 23 thousand and I will stand good for it." That was admission of an obligation to a man in the sum of 23 thousand dollars. That was a statement against interest at that time.

The Court: I am going to permit you to ask this question.

Mr. Campbell: May I make one observation?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Campbell: I wish to point out to the Court that in this instance, for example—and I presume it may occur in subsequent instances—it is an attempt, or it would be if allowed, the testimony of a witness to be entered without that witness taking the stand. Now, if this is used to establish the obligation, there is no manner in which cross-examination can be had——

The Court (Interceding): I think so. There would be no opportunity to cross-examine the witness who is in effect testify. Mr. Remmer is testifying through Mr. Graham.

Mr. Gillen: Not at all, your Honor. There is Mr. Remmer's note here before the Court. There is a testimony from a prosecution witness——

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court (Interceding): We are getting something in this record, to the effect Mr. Remmer's statement in this record that he owed 23 thousand dollars to this particular individual, without having Mr. Remmer on the stand or an opportunity to cross-examine.

Mr. Gillen: No, there is more than that. May I respectfully say this to your Honor. It is my recollection——

The Court (Interceding): I think it is hearsay testimony.

Mr. Gillen: No. May I show your Honor the transcript of Mr. Perkins' testimony. Your Honor, if I am not very badly mistaken, Mr. Perkins testified as to the reason for withholding of that 23 thousand dollars from the $29,000 Burton & Gallagher check; namely, that Mr. Remmer had gone good for an obligation of Mr. Jeffress, and this is merely filling that out, the circumstances under which he did that.

Another thing, your Honor—I think we lose sight of, and I think I can demonstrate to your Honor the foolishness of Mr. Campbell's last remark—Mr. Remmer may not go on this witness stand in this trial and testify that he told Mr. Graham that he was obliged to Mr. Jeffress in excess of 23 thousand dollars and that he would go good for him. That would certainly be counsel's example of self-serving statement for Mr. Remmer to take the witness stand and say——

The Court (Interceding): Suppose Mr. Remmer did testify he borrowed 50 thousand dollars, wouldn't he also be allowed to testify as to whether he paid him back and if he paid it, or any portion of it, wouldn't he be able to explain how he paid him back?

Mr. Gillen: I suppose he would, yes, but we have here evidence from a disinterested witness, interested only to the extent of getting that money, regarding this matter and this situation was introduced not by us, but by the prosecution, that there had been issued to Mr. Remmer a 29 thousand dollar check, and then their own witness explained 23 thousand was withheld because Mr. Remmer had gone good on an obligation for Mr. Jeffress. Now, Mr. Graham is here to testify from first-hand knowledge——

The Court: I would like to look at Corpus Juris on the question of self-serving declarations. We will take a recess until three o'clock. Recess taken at 2:40.

2:55 P.M.

(Defendant present.)

(Jury absent.)

The Court: The objection is sustained. If the Court ruled otherwise, it would be permitting Mr. Remmer to testify without sanctity of a note or subjecting himself to cross-examination.

Mr. Gillen: I think we found some testimony, your Honor, where there was reference made——

The Court: Yes, but I have my mind made up about this matter. I am not going to allow Mr. Remmer to testify from the mouth of another witness.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: No, the testimony of Mr. Perkins—testified to the obligation. Would your Honor listen to it? It is very short.

The Court: Yes, but it wouldn't make any difference as to the admissibility of this question, would it?

Mr. Gillen: Mr. Perkins testified that he withdrew this—well——

The Court: The ruling will stand. Call in the jury.

3:00 P.M.

(Defendant present with counsel.)

(Presence of the jury and alternate jurors stipulated.)

MR. GRAHAM

resumes the witness stand.

Mr. Gillen: In view of the Court's ruling, no further questions of Mr. Graham.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Campbell:

Q. Mr. Graham, referring to the check which you produced here, relative to the ten thousand dollar loan which you made in 1946 to Mr. Remmer, and concerning which you also testified when you appeared here before, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At that time I do not believe you had the check with you, is that right?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

A. Yes, I had the check with me. You told me to bring everything I had in the case.

Q. Now, calling your attention to the check and to the notations appearing on the back, the signature Elmer Remmer and the memorandum here C-CK 75107378, and particularly calling your attention to that last notation, was that on there when you received the check back from your bank?

A. I didn't notice that. I never paid any attention to that. I don't know whether that was on there; I don't know anything about it.

Q. That wasn't a number which you placed on there? [2641] A. No.

Mr. Campbell: This CK usually refers to cashier's check.

Mr. Gillen: CK refers to cashier check, I don't think so.

The Court: I think we have a lot of matters in there we are not interested in.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think counsel can characterize what it means. It is some kind of notation.

Mr. Campbell: Well, I withdraw the statement.

Q. Now, Mr. Graham, when was this loan paid back to you?

A. Well, paid back in '48, some of it paid back and some cash and some paid back I owed.

Q. That you owed?

A. A friend of mine rang me up from San Francisco and wanted me to loan him five thousand dollars. He said, "I am selling some bonds and will send it in a few weeks" and then—it was during the racing season—I said, "You go over to Mason Street and see Bones and I will ring him up and tell him to give you five thousand," it was Bill Hervey, and he went over to Mason Street and Bones gave him the five thousand.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of William Graham.)

Q. When was that?

A. That was in '48 during the racing. In the meantime, I rang up and told Bones to bet some horses for me, around three thousand dollars, and then when I went to San Francisco he gave me the difference to make up ten thousand dollars, in cash, so [2642] that is how I was paid back.

Q. In other words, you gave him credit that he paid out for you around eight thousand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the balance you got in cash?

A. I think $1,750 in cash; I am not quite sure. That is how I got it.

Q. That repayment all took place in 1948, is that right? A. Yes.

Mr. Campbell: That's all.

Mr. Gillen: No further questions.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Gillen: We might facilitate another matter. In view of the Court's rulings, it will be impossible for us to further examine Mr. Woodburn and unless Mr. Campbell would desire to cross-examine Mr. Woodburn insofar as he testified yesterday, there is no necessity of discommoding him and bringing him back.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Campbell: I have no cross-examination.

The Court: I understand Mr. Woodburn may be excused, is that satisfactory? A. Yes.

The Court: He may be excused.

Mr. Gillen: In relation to Mr. Vacchina, the trust officer who appeared here yesterday and identified certain [2643] records and photostatic copies in for identification, we are unable, in view of the Court's rulings, to proceed further with him and are willing he be excused, unless Mr. Campbell desires to cross-examine him.

Mr. Campbell: I did not understand the first part of counsel's statement. If counsel is withdrawing——

Mr. Gillen: We are not withdrawing, we are unable to proceed with further examination.

The Court: I think the effect of it, in view of the rulings he says there is nothing to be gained by calling him.

Mr. Gillen: That is right.

Mr. Campbell: I have no cross-examination.

The Court: Then Mr. Vacchina may be excused.

VERN WALDO

a witness on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Q. Will you state your full name, please?

A. Vern Waldo.

Q. Where do you reside?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

A. In Reno, 46 Raymond Drive.

Q. Will you state what is your business?

A. Assistant cashier First National Bank of Reno, Reno, Nevada.

Q. Have you been with that bank for some period of time? [2644]

A. I have been with them three years.

Q. And as assistant cashier of that bank, are the commercial accounts under your direct supervision? A. That is correct.

Q. And you have access to them in the ordinary course of your business as assistant cashier, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Were you subpoenaed to appear here to bring with you certain records of the commercial account of Cal-Neva Lodge?

A. That's right.

Q. Will you produce the originals of those records, please?

Mr. Campbell: Did you say Cal-Neva Lodge or Cal-Neva, Inc.?

Mr. Gillen: I think it is Cal-Neva Lodge on the account.

Q. May I ask if you have photostatic copies of these original documents? A. Yes, I have.

Mr. Campbell: I have no objection to using photostats.

Mr. Gillen: I wonder if I may inquire through the Court of counsel if there is any objection, they having examined them, to offer photostats in lieu of the original of these bank statements?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

Mr. Campbell: No, no objection.

Mr. Gillen: I will offer then as an exhibit or exhibits, however it serves the convenience of the Court, six [2645] sheets of photostats and will have them marked in whatever manner that may be convenient. When I say six sheets, may it please the Court, one of those sheets is made to represent the reverse side of the ledger sheet, so really five sheets if that is called one sheet together.

The Clerk: Exhibit I-1.

Mr. Gillen: We offer them in evidence.

Mr. Campbell: No objection.

The Court: Admitted in evidence, I-1.

Mr. Gillen: It might be advisable, your Honor, before counsel cross-examines, so the jury will follow the evidence, that I read them to the jury, with the Court's permission.

The Court: Yes, certainly.

Mr. Gillen: (Reads first sheet of exhibit.)

Q. I take it, Mr. Waldo, that that document is a telegraphic order written in code, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Campbell: I will stipulate there is a document giving the full translation of that document.

Mr. Gillen: The next document of the exhibit is entitled "Translation of telegram received from Bank of America National Trust and Savings Division, Day and Night Branch, San Francisco, California." (Reads document.)

Q. That means it was transmitted by teletype, is that correct? A. Correct. [2646]

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

Mr. Gillen: The message reads as follows: (Reads from exhibit.)

Q. "Col. Dept.," that means Collection Department, does it not? A. That is right.

Mr. Gillen: (Continues reading exhibit.)

Q. Now that means, does it not, that your bank received from the Bank of America, Day and Night Branch, an order to put into the account of Cal-Neva account, as per instructions of Elmer F. Remmer, the sum of 50 thousand dollars?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is what you call in banking terms a telegraphic transfer of funds? A. Yes.

Q. In other words, the Bank of America in San Francisco stood good for that order that you followed, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Mr. Gillen: Now the next document in this exhibit reads: "Main Office Branch No. ——" (Reads.)

Q. "TT," I take it, Mr. Waldo, would mean telegraphic transfer? A. That is correct.

Mr. Gillen: (Continues reading from exhibit.) And there are numerous transactions reflected, which I will not take the time of the jury or the Court to read, but there appears at the top of the sheet, on the face of the sheet, under date [2647] September 28, 1946, a deposit of 50 thousand dollars, and I take it, Mr. Waldo, that would be a reflection of the telegraphic transfer and transaction referred to before? A. That is correct.

Mr. Gillen: I think that is all.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Campbell:

Q. Mr. Waldo, do you by any chance have the signature card of this account with you?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is the card which you have produced, which you just handed me, the signature card referring to the account, the ledger sheet of which is in evidence as Defendant's Exhibit I-1?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a photostatic copy of this?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you supply a photostatic copy of this, Mr. Waldo? A. I can.

Mr. Gillen: No objection to its being put in evidence.

Mr. Campbell: I am going to offer this in evidence with the request that it be withdrawn and returned to this witness if he will send down a photostatic copy of the document, and we will leave the original here.

Mr. Gillen: We will be agreeable and will be glad to bring it over from Reno, if that will facilitate matters when [2648] Mr. Waldo photostats it.

The Court: Is that marked in evidence?

Mr. Gillen: We have no objection to the exhibit being withheld until the photostat arrives.

The Court: We will give it a number, Exhibit 185. The photostat will be admitted when it is produced.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor, no objection.

Mr. Campbell: Reading from this exhibit, shows the account as having been opened on 9-29-46; there are signatures appearing thereon, being that of Elmer Remmer, James B. Jeffers and Harold H. Maundrell.

Q. Now referring to the ledger sheet, which is a portion of Defendant's Exhibit I-1, I call your attention to the fact that the name of Harold Maundrell, Crystal Bay, Nevada, has been scratched out and in pen and ink written 541 Elko Avenue, Reno. Do you know when that change took place in that account? A. I can't answer that.

Q. Do you know whose writing that is?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recognize it as the writing of any of the bank boys? A. No.

Q. Do you have anything in your file that you have with you indicating the time at which that change was made? A. No, sir.

Q. Now your attention has been directed to the deposit as [2649] shown by the deposit book on the ledger sheet of 50 thousand dollars by telegraphic transfer on September 28, 1946. That is the 50 thousand dollar item I believe you identified under the heading of "Deposits" on September 28, 1946, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And at that time the balance in the account, with that 50 thousand dollars, amounted to $50,-994.35, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Now I direct your attention, under date of

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Vern Waldo.)

October 1, 1946, there is shown a withdrawal of 50 thousand dollars as one of the items withdrawn on that date, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And that resulted in an overdraft, that together with another item drawn on that date of $3,379, resulted in an overdraft of $5,320.71, as of the close of business October 1, 1946, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. This ledger sheet further shows, does it not, that overdraft continued until October 26th, at which time a deposit was made in the account of some $47,300, is that right, sir?

A. That is correct.

Q. When I say "overdraft," I mean to say an overdraft continued in the account, did it not, because other items were also charged against the account? [2650] A. That is correct.

Q. Now I draw your attention to that deposit of $47,300 on October 26, 1946, and also to the next deposit on December 7, 1946, of $78,634.29. I will ask you if you have with you the deposit slips relating to those two deposits?

A. I do not, Mr. Campbell.

Q. Would it be possible for you, Mr. Waldo, to secure those slips, have photostats of them made at the same time you have the photostat made of the signature card? A. We can do that.

Q. Will you do that? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Campbell: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

MARYCE CHANEY MARTIN

Q. Where do you reside, Mrs. Martin?

A. I live in Beverley Hills, California.

Q. Can you give us the address?

A. 311 North Alpine Drive.

Q. With whom do you live?

A. My husband and two small children. [2651]

Q. What is your husband's name, please?

A. Hershey Martin.

Q. What is your husband's business?

A. He is a theatrical booking agent, for the William Morris Agency.

Q. That is a national theatrical booking agency?

A. Yes.

Q. And he is a member of the Act Department for that agency in this area?

A. Yes, that is correct.

Q. His activities in that capacity take place not only in California, but Nevada?

own? A. Yes, I was a professional dancer.

Q. Did you do any other type of work than professional dancing yourself?

A. Yes, I produced my dancing girls.

Q. Did you also engage in some other business enterprise with your husband in connection with the theatrical business?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: You may answer.

A. My husband had a theatrical booking agency of his own at [2652] one time in San Francisco and I assisted him.

Q. Now, Mrs. Martin, are you acquainted with the defendant in this case, Elmer F. Remmer?

A. Yes, I have known Mr. Remmer for about 13 or 14 years. He has been a very tried and true friend to me.

Mr. Campbell: I ask the last be stricken as not responsive.

The Court: It may go out.

Q. Under what circumstances did you first meet Mr. Remmer?

A. I worked at Cal-Neva Lodge. I believe I started in December of 1938, but I am not sure of the exact date.

Q. And did you in the ensuing years produce the shows at Cal-Neva Lodge?

A. I helped to do that, yes.

Q. Now in the years 1943, and 1944, did you ever borrow any money from Mr. Remmer?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Can you tell us when in 1943, you borrowed money from Mr. Remmer and when in 1944?

A. Well, I believe it was around September or October of 1943, and again in 1944, about the same time. I am not sure of the exact dates.

Q. And you were married when?

A. I was married in August, 1943; August 17, 1943.

Q. What was the amount that you borrowed, as you fix it, in [2653] September or October of 1943?

A. I borrowed $2,500.

Q. What was the amount that you borrowed, as you fix it, approximately the same time in 1944?

A. $2,500.

Q. Now do you recall in what form that money was given to you?

A. Well, I believe once it was given to me in the form of a check, once in cash, but I can't tell which time it was given in cash and which time in the form of a check, I am not sure.

Mr. Gillen: Now I have a cancelled check I would like marked for identification.

The Clerk: J-1.

Q. I am going to ask you, Mrs. Martin, under what name were you known at the time you worked as a professional dancer and also in the course of time you worked at Cal-Neva Lodge?

A. I was known as Maryce Chaney.

Mr. Thompson: I have no objection to this check.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

Q. Let me ask you this, Mrs. Martin, I will show you here Defendant's Exhibit J-1. I will ask you to look at this and tell me whether or not this refreshes your recollection as to which occasion of the two occasions mentioned of the $2,500 that you borrowed from Mr. Remmer that you received the loan in the form of a check?

A. Well, yes, I received the cash in 1943, and the check in '44.

Mr. Gillen: There being no objection from counsel, I [2654] offer the check in evidence as next in order.

The Court: Admitted in evidence, J-1.

Mr. Gillen: With the Court's permission, I would like to read the check.

Q. Mrs. Martin, I take it, that the reason you say your memory is refreshed looking at this check, that the check bears the date of August 30, 1944?

A. That is right.

Q. And you identify then that is the occasion on which you received the $2,500 loan by check?

A. That is correct.

Mr. Gillen: I might say to your Honor, so there may be clarification concerning this particular exhibit, this was withdrawn from the box that was brought into court at the Court's direction and removed from the Cal-Neva papers from the box in custody of the clerk of the Court. * * * I misidentified these—these were corporate records of Cal-Neva brought in voluntarily. This check reads as follows: (Reads exhibit.)

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

Q. Now, Mrs. Martin, the $2,500 which you borrowed in, I believe you said September or October of 1943, and the $2,500 that you borrowed August 30, 1944, did you repay those amounts to Mr. Remmer? A. Oh, yes.

Q. When, do you recall, did you pay the 1943 loan, or if you [2655] did not pay it all at once, when did you start to pay the 1943 loan?

A. Well, I believe, to the best of my knowledge, that I started in 1944, I started paying that probably in 1944. I am not sure of the date.

Q. Did you pay that first $2,500 loan all at once?

A. No.

Q. What is your best recollection now as to in what manner you paid that loan?

A. Well, my husband paid it off gradually. We tried to pay so much—sometimes it may have been $200 or sometimes more or a little less and at that time there may have been larger sums, but I am not sure, I can't remember.

Q. Then on August 30, 1944, you borrowed another $2,500? A. That is true.

Q. What is your best recollection now as to whether or not you had completed your payments of the indebtedness of the first $2,500 before you borrowed the second $2,500?

A. I do not think it was completed. I do not think we completed; as best I can remember, the entire amount by January, 1946, and the reason I remember that is that I had a baby in January,

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

1946, and we planned on getting our debts straightened out by that time.

Mr. Gillen: I think that is all. [2656]

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Campbell:

Q. Now as I understood your testimony, Mrs. Martin, you were employed at Cal-Neva Lodge in 1943, and 1944?

A. No, I wasn't; prior to that.

Q. Prior to that?

A. Yes, from about—I don't know what year I started, perhaps from the Cal-Neva records you could find out, but I think '38, and I believe I worked there in summers until about '41, but I won't be sure of the dates.

Q. Now in connection with either your professional performances or in connection with your shows which you were assisting producing, did you have any dealings with Cal-Neva Lodge in the years 1943, and 1944?

A. No, none with Cal-Neva Lodge, other than the fact that we visited there, but we had no business dealings.

Q. The first loan you said you secured in 1943, and you first stated you believed it was September of 1943, and the second loan in September of 1944, and then later——

Mr. Gillen: She said about the same time.

Q. (Continuing): ——and after refreshing your

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

recollection from this check, placed the date of the 1944 loan as August 30, 1944, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now does that also refresh your recollection as to when the 1943 loan was obtained? [2657]

A. Well, I was married on August 17, 1943, and I believe it was a few weeks after I was married because we wished to buy a piece of property at that time and I am not sure what date, but somewhere in there, I don't know the exact date.

Q. Now you negotiated these loans with Mr. Remmer personally, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. Where was it that you negotiated them, in San Francisco or Cal-Neva?

A. No, I was in Cal-Neva for my honeymoon and it was during that time.

Q. That was in 1943? A. Yes.

Q. And you say you received the money in cash at that time? A. Yes, I received it in cash.

Q. And did you sign a note or any other evidence?

A. No, he didn't ask me to sign any note.

Q. It was given to you in cash, is that correct?

A. Yes, gave it to me in cash.

Q. And in connection with the second loan there of August 30, 1944, you were also at Cal-Neva when that loan was negotiated?

A. I don't remember. I don't believe I was, but I don't remember.

Q. Did you on that occasion meet Mr. Maundrell, who signed that check? [2658]

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

A. Yes, I know Mr. Maundrell. I might have seen him in San Francisco or in Cal-Neva, but I am not sure.

Q. I take it you had known Mr. Maundrell from the time you had appeared at Cal-Neva?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mrs. Martin, at the time you negotiated those loans, or obtained that money, did you know whether or not the funds which were being lent to you were the funds of Cal-Neva, Inc.?

A. No, I didn't. I just asked Mr. Remmer if he could help me. I didn't know where the funds came from.

Q. So that you have no knowledge whatsoever on that subject?

A. No, other than the check just shown to you.

Q. That, of course, is drawn on Cal-Neva?

A. Yes, but I don't know whether he just asked them to give me a check or how he managed it.

Q. You talked with Mr. Remmer and you received the money? A. That's right.

Q. Now when you repaid it, did you repay by check?

A. No, I paid it in cash usually. I may have given him a check at times, but I don't remember, I am not sure.

Q. Where were those payments made?

A. Usually in San Francisco, because I was living there at the time.

Q. You stated you and your husband were conducting an agency there? [2659] A. In 1944.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

Q. Now did you maintain, or did your husband maintain, any record with relation to the repayment of these loans?

A. No, we didn't. We more or less kept track of it ourselves.

Q. Mentally?

A. Yes; I didn't keep any records of it. I didn't think it was necessary and it never dawned on me to keep any records.

Q. But do you now have any recollection as to the balance that you owed on these loans as of December 31st—that is the year end—of any of the years 1943, 1944, 1945, or 1946?

Mr. Gillen: As to 1946, that is assuming something not in evidence because the witness has stated that the entire loans had been fully paid by January of 1946.

Mr. Campbell: If that is her testimony, I think the objection is good as to the last date.

Mr. Gillen: Another observation should be made. Mr. Avakian calls to my attention, counsel mentions 1943. She said she started paying in 1944, the first loan.

Mr. Campbell: Well, I am cross-examining.

The Court: Well, you may proceed.

Q. Do you have my question in mind?

A. Yes, I do. I don't really have any recollection.

Q. As I understand your direct testimony, you do have definite recollection that you did not commence making any payments until 1944? [2660]

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

A. I don't believe we did. I believe we started in 1944, but that is quite a while ago and I don't want to say I remember the exact dates, because I don't.

Q. And you were quite definite that by January of 1946, you had paid off all the obligations?

A. Yes, and my reason for knowing that is that we tried to clear up our debts before our baby came.

Q. And your child was born in January?

A. January 24, 1947.

Q. Since then, of course, that event so definitely in mind, can you place when it was with relation to that event that you paid off the last of the money that you owed on these loans?

A. No, I really don't know.

Q. Could you state it was before or after the end of the year 1945?

A. I think probably at the end of the year.

Q. By the end of the year?

A. I believe so, but I can't really be sure. I don't want to say finally because I don't know.

Mr. Campbell: I think that is all.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Q. By the way, Mrs. Martin, you mentioned that on the occasion of the first loan that you obtained from Mr. Remmer in 1943, following your marriage, I believe you placed it at September or October, you said the reason for that loan was that you [2661]

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Maryce Chaney Martin.)

were desirous of buying a piece of property, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Did you in fact at that time buy a piece of property? A. Yes, we did.

Q. Can you tell us where that property was located?

Mr. Campbell: I think that is immaterial.

The Court: Why is that material?

Mr. Gillen: It substantiates the statement that she was making this loan for a specific purpose.

The Court: Well, she said she bought property, so I don't think it makes much difference where it is located.

Mr. Gillen: That is all.

government's next in order and will ask that they may be withdrawn at the end of today's session, in order that photostats may be substituted.

Mr. Gillen: That is agreeable, your Honor.

The Court: The exhibit will be admitted, No. 186.

Mr. Campbell: They consist of three cards, appearing to be ledger cards. If I may, at this time I will read into the record from these records.

Mr. Gillen: No objection.

Mr. Campbell: (Reads exhibits.)

Mr. Gillen: Shall we proceed then, your Honor? The defense will call Mrs. Robert Jeffress.

MRS. ROBERT JEFFRESS

a witness on behalf of the defendant, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

A. James Jeffress and Carolyn Jeffress.

Q. Now when you first went to live in that building, what flat did you and your sisters and brother occupy? A. The lower flat.

Q. And at any time in the intervening years did you move from one flat to another?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

A. I think it was the end of '45, or '46.

Q. Now Miss Carolyn Jeffress, how long did she remain with her father?

A. She remained until she was married. I think she was married in March of '46.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. And then Mr. Jeffress occupied the flat alone?

A. Yes.

Q. And you and your two sisters still lived downstairs? A. Yes.

Q. Your brother in the interim had passed away? A. Yes.

Q. After you and Mr. Jeffress married in August, 1947, did [2666] you move any place in that building? A. I moved upstairs.

Q. Did your two sisters continue to live downstairs?

A. They remained downstairs I think about a year and then Mr. Jeffress came up to the Lake and they moved upstairs with me.

A. Well, part time with his son and daughter.

Q. Did you frequently come up here on visits and live?

A. Yes, and then I moved up in August of 1949, to Mt. Rose.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, is Mr. Robert Jeffress still living or has he since passed away?

A. No, he passed away in November, 1950.

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, calling your attention to the month of January of 1947, I will ask you whether or not you recall the opening of a safety deposit box in a San Francisco bank by [2667] either of your sisters and yourself?

A. Yes, I do, my sister, Helen, and I opened a box at the Anglo Bank in January, 1947.

Mr. Campbell: I don't understand—do you mean rented a box or entered a box?

Mr. Gillen: Rented a box. I will clear that up.

Q. Is it your testimony that your sister, Helen Elliott, and you rented a box with the Anglo California Bank? A. Yes.

Q. In January of 1947, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did she hold that box or rent that box jointly with any one else?

A. Yes, with myself.

Q. By the way, is your sister employed?

A. Yes, she is.

Q. Where?

A. She is employed with the Internal Revenue in San Francisco.

Q. Did you and your sister maintain that box for any period of time jointly?

A. We still have the box jointly.

Q. Directing your attention to the year 1947, at some time between January of 1947, when you and your sister jointly acquired this safety deposit box, and the month of August, 1947, when you became the wife of Mr. Jeffress, do you have any [2668] recollection of an incident wherein Mr. Jeffress gave you or your sister a document to put in your safe deposit box for safe keeping for him?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

A. Yes, I remember that Mr. Jeffress gave my sister a note to keep for him. He gave her a note and said, "This is a note for money that Bones Remmer"——

Mr. Campbell: Just a minute—I object to conversation.

The Court: That part of the answer may be stricken.

Mr. Gillen: The part that would be responsive is that Mr. Jeffress gave her sister a note to keep for him.

The Court: As I understand.

Q. Now can you fix the approximate time or the occasion that that occurred?

A. Well, it was an evening in the early part of 1947, that my sister and I were having dinner upstairs in his home and he was looking for a paper or something, going through his dresser drawer and I was helping him find the paper and at the time he came across this paper and he took it out and then is when he handed it to my sister and he asked her——

Mr. Campbell: Just a minute.

Mr. Gillen: Don't tell what he said.

Q. Did you see the paper? A. Yes, I did.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. Did you read the paper?

A. No, I did not. [2669]

Q. Did your sister read the paper in your presence? A. No, she did not.

Q. Was the paper open or folded up?

A. It was folded.

Q. Can you describe how it was folded?

A. Well, I would say it was folded as an ordinary letter would be folded.

Q. I will show you here, Mrs. Jeffress, Defendant's Exhibit A-1 in evidence, which I will identify for the record as the 50 thousand dollar note from Elmer Remmer to Robert L. Jeffress. I will ask you to look at this document, fold it in any manner you wish, if you wish to, and tell us whether or not that appears to be the type or kind of paper that Mr. Jeffress on that occasion handed to your sister to keep for him?

A. Yes, it could very well be the same paper.

Q. Now you have folded it up and let me ask you whether or not the paper that was handed to your sister, to the best of your recollection, was folded in that manner or was folded in any other manner?

A. Well, when he handed it to her it was folded like this.

Mr. Campbell: May the record show that the exhibit indicates at this time two additional folds?

Mr. Gillen: The record may show, as described by Mrs. Jeffress, the document was folded over once and a second time.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Mr. Campbell: But there are also on the paper two [2670] additional folds.

Mr. Gillen: Stipulated there are two additional folds and stipulated they all appear to be old creases.

Mr. Campbell: They were on the exhibit before that came into evidence evidently.

A. Well, Mr. Jeffress gave——

The Court: Just a moment, please.

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, directing your attention to the month of July of 1947, that would be the month before you married Mr. Jeffress, do you have in mind an occasion when Mr. Jeffress went to Nevada from San Francisco?

A. Yes, I do, Mr. Jeffress went to Nevada the week of the 4th of July, 1947.

Q. Now on that occasion at that same time did you leave San Francisco for any visit to any friends?

A. Yes, I did, I went to Los Angeles.

Q. For what purpose?

A. To visit my niece.

Q. What is your niece's name?

A. Janet Elliott.

Q. What was the date of your marriage in August, if you recall? A. 23rd.

Q. Now when did you return to San Francisco from your visit with your niece for the 4th of July holiday in July of 1947? [2671]

A. I think we stayed four days.

Q. When you say "we"?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

A. Well, my two sisters accompanied me.

Q. Your three sisters went to visit your niece?

A. Yes.

Q. And you think you stayed four days?

A. I think we stayed four days.

Q. You returned then to your home in San Francisco? A. Yes.

Q. You have stated in your testimony that in the early 40s, I think you said 1941, Mr. Jeffress, Jr., left his father's home to go in the service and in 1946, his daughter, Carolyne, left her father's home at the time of her marriage. In the intervening time, between 1946, and the time you married Mr. Jeffress in August of 1947, did Mr. Jeffress live alone in the flat? A. Yes, he did.

Q. Now on your return with your sisters from Los Angeles in July, 1947, was Mr. Jeffress at home when you arrived?

A. No, he was not, he was still in Nevada.

Q. Do you recall how long it was after you returned that Mr. Jeffress returned to the flat on 11th Avenue?

A. Well, it could have been a week, it could have been ten days or it could have been two weeks. It was a short time.

Q. It was some days after your return? [2672]

Q. When did it come to your attention that Mr. Jeffress had returned home from Nevada?

A. Well, I was away from home and when I returned there was a note under my front door, asking me to come up and see him.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. At that time, in July of 1947, had you and Mr. Jeffress already perfected plans to be married?

A. Yes, we had.

Q. Had you set August as the time for your marriage? A. Yes.

Q. Did you, on returning to your flat and finding the note from Mr. Jeffress, go upstairs to see him? A. Yes, I did.

Q. Was he alone at the time? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at that time?

Mr. Campbell: May that be answered yes or not if the Court please?

The Court: Yes, answer yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. When you went to see Mr. Jeffress, what was he doing?

A. He was figuring, putting figures on paper.

Q. Was that conversation that you had with Mr. Jeffress pertaining to any financial loss on the part of Mr. Jeffress?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as leading and suggestive.

The Court: Objection sustained. [2673]

Mr. Gillen: Then, may it please the Court, we have arrived at a point in this direct examination where I must take up with your Honor the purpose of these questions.

The Court: Very well, then we will excuse the jury.

RE: CONVERSATION WITH MRS. JEFFRESS REGARDING NOTE

(Feb. 8, 1952. Notebook 341—P.P. 86-90. Notebook 342—P.P. 1-29.)

Mr. Thompson: I would like to suggest at the outset we have Mrs. Jeffress testify to the conversation. It may assist.

The Court: Very well.

Q. (By Mr. Gillen): I would like to have you state to the Court, if you will, what was the conversation that you had with Mr. Robert Jeffress on the occasion in July, 1947, when, in response to the note he left under your door you went upstairs and found him in his flat working at some figures on a piece of paper?

A. (Mrs. Jeffress): Well, when I went up he said to me that, "I have been foolish; I have been gambling in Reno and lost," "almost went broke" were the words he used. So in his conversation he was figuring and he said to me that "Part of the loss was taken care of by Mr. Bones Remmer from $50,000 that he owes me."

Mr. Gillen: Now, may it please the Court, we submit that conversation as a declaration against interest by Mr. Robert Jeffress in 1948, showing an outstanding obligation as of the end of 1946, as to repayment by Mr. Remmer as to a part, if not all, of that obligation in 1947. Of course, your Honor will have in mind that this is supported by the $29,000 check and the testimony of Mr. Perkins, that Mr. Jeffress had become obligated in the sum of $23,000 to the Bank Club and that Mr. Remmer had underwritten that obligation and that Mr. Remmer, upon receipt of the $29,000 check, growing out of the whiskey transaction, had endorsed the check and had refunded, or there had been retained by the Bank Club, to cover Mr. Jeffress' obligation, the sum of $23,000 out of the $29,000 check. Now, your Honor, I think we had quite a comprehensive discussion yesterday of the universal rule expressed in Corpus Juris that declarations against interest could either be a declaration with regard to the declarant owing some money or in regard to the declarant acknowledging that an obligation due him had been repaid. Each of them is declaration of interest in one reverse or the other.

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, we object to the conversation upon the ground it is hearsay and incompetent, does not come within any exception to the hearsay rule. If your Honor please, the conversation as testified to by Mrs. Jeffress, it is not an acknowledgement or statement by Mr. Jeffress that he owed anybody anything which would be a declaration against his interest. It is a statement to the effect that he had lost some money gambling, but did not owe that money, that that money had been paid, and it is also a statement to the effect that Mr. Remmer owed him some money. Taken together they are two statements in favor of his interest; first, that he had paid an obligation which he incurred at the Bank Club by reason of his gambling, and, second, that Mr. Remmer owed him $50,000. Both of those declarations are in favor of, rather than against, his interest.

Mr. Gillen: Your Honor, I would like to respond to that and first, if I may, so both your Honor and myself will follow the thought, I would like the reporter to read to your Honor the answer by Mrs. Jeffress.

The Court: Yes, read the answer.

(Answer read.)

Mr. Gillen: Now, here we have this foundation for the admission of this declaration against interest and exception to the hearsay rule from the evidence, your Honor: First of all, we find that Mr. Jeffress, the declarant, died in November of 1950; that in July of 1947, along the holiday, 4th of July holiday, that Mr. Jeffress went to Nevada; that he returned during the month of July from Nevada; that he had a conversation with the woman who is on the witness stand, whom he had already had arrangements to marry the following month—the arrangements had already been made—and he at that time declared—first of all, we might say we have, if your Honor will recall, the summarization of the indispensable elements of this matter—we might read the preamble to refresh our minds on it: "Requirements for Admission of Declarations" (Reads from CJS). Now, we have to establish in the record he passed away or was unable at this time as a witness. (2) We have a statement regarding his finances and regarding an obligation that was incurred by him as the result of a gambling spree and losses that had been incurred by him. (3) Now, this means only that the declarant must be acquainted with the facts and circumstances in the matter, which certainly he was. I mean, he knew he lost money and he knew out of the obligation owed him by Mr. Remmer, that Mr. Remmer had taken care of part of the loss. (4) Now, once again if we may refresh our memories on the type of cases that must be involved here, we find—I am reading from Corpus Juris Secundum Vol. 31 on "Evidence," we find in Section 219 on page 963 this language: (Reads.) Now, we have both here. We have the statement that he had become obligated to the club where he had been gambling, and we have here an obligation due him had been paid in payment of his obligation to another, so we have a round-robin. We have met all four requirements, and then, of course, your Honor has in mind the statement of Wigmore, the philosophy of making this an exception to the hearsay rule, so I submit, your Honor——

The Court (Interceding): What did we hear yesterday about one of these prerequisites, something about primary evidence being available?

Mr. Gillen: Well, the primary evidence means the primary evidence as to declaration made by the declarant, not as to testimony, but as to declaration made by the declarant and Mr. Wigmore says in his work: (Reads Vol. 5, Sec. 1465 Wigmore.)

The Court: Well, we have the situation—just assume the facts as they are introduced here—assume that there was an obligation of $50,000 due to Mr. Jeffress from Mr. Remmer——

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: There is evidence of that in the record already.

The Court: Say prior to the conversation, or prior to the incident recited in the conversation, the gambling loss, Mr. Remmer was indebted to Mr. Jeffress in the sum of $50,000. The effect of the evidence we have heard and the effect of the conversation, would amount to this, that just prior to this conversation, or shortly prior to it, Mr. Remmer had paid something on account——

Mr. Gillen: That is correct and that is declaration against the account.

The Court: ——something on account, therefore decreasing to that extent the total of that indebtedness, $50,000.

Mr. Gillen: That is correct.

The Court: Now, we have here in the language of Corpus Juris Secundum: (Reads) "On the other hand, the declaration against * * *." Well, if an individual owed a sum of money to me and by some arrangement had settled a part of it and paid part of it and I made a statement to that effect, I think that is a declaration against interest.

Mr. Campbell: But isn't it true the other part of the objection, that primary evidence is here available——

The Court: That is something I would like to have some authority on now.

Mr. Campbell: As I read Corpus Juris Secundum——

BLURRED COPY

The Court: That is the one point I am in doubt about.

Mr. Gillen: I might straighten your Honor and Mr. Campbell out on this. In this same volume is found the situation that some jurisdictions have held the admission of this type of evidence to a supreme court role and that the supreme court rule in some jurisdictions is this—they say, we will not accept declarations against interest merely because the declarant is not available to the court unless he is dead.

The Court: Yes, I read that.

Mr. Gillen: Now, the general and more liberal and universal rule is if he is beyond the jurisdiction of the court for any reason, so we have here complied with the strictest limitation of the rule.

The Court: I think we can safely say that the acknowledgment of a part payment of a debt certainly would be declaration against an interest.

Mr. Gillen: No question about it, your Honor.

Mr. Campbell: I wish to refer to page 942, paragraph 204, Corpus Juris Secundum Vol. 31 (Reads.)

Mr. Gillen: Before we lost our thought on the one point your Honor has in mind, that we are not entirely bereft of supporting evidence. There is included here some writing that will support this declaration; there is a note; there is a check; there is testimony by the prosecution's witness that part of the check, to wit, 23 thousand dollars, was retained for certain purpose, to wit, to pay an obligation of Mr. Jeffress, from Mr. Remmer.

The Court: Just the other way.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: Was retained by the bank to pay an obligation of Mr. Jeffress from Mr. Remmer; that is, Mr. Remmer paid an obligation for Mr. Jeffress—I put it awkwardly, I am sorry.

The Court: I see what you mean.

Mr. Campbell: It seems to me it goes back to the initial proposition. Here supposedly is a conversation of two people, one of whom is available and the other is not available. If evidence is to be put in in this fashion, through hearsay declarations, the government is bereft of an opportunity of questioning as to the true nature of the transaction, testing out the accuracy of the statements made by the decedent. Also I referred yesterday to page 943 as to the admissibility of a declaration and the elements. It says: (Reads) "Where declarant had adequate knowledge of the facts stated * * *."

The Court: Well if we can find a definition of primary evidence. It might be so simple that we ought to know it without any research, but it might be a good idea just to find out what it means.

Mr. Campbell: May I suggest the morning recess at this time.

(Recess taken at 10:55 a.m.)

11:15 A.M.

(Defendant present.)

The Court: I think, if you permit me to, I would like to give you some thoughts I have here now and then you can direct your arguments for or against the ideas that I might express here.

BLURRED COPY

First I would like to start off with this citation of authority you have on primary evidence. (Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 31, 942-943.) Well, this, of course, is hearsay evidence and proposed to admit it as an exception to the hearsay rule and in CJS we find this statement, on page 942, Section 204: (Reads.) So if we start out with the thought that before evidence of the kind offered here is admissible, there must be a possibility of obtaining what is called primary evidence—now note the original edition, Vol. 22, CJ 973, Section 1219: (Reads.) So I would take it that the best evidence and primary evidence meant one and the same thing. Reading on the same section: (Reads.) "The best evidence * * *." Now, on page 974 the best evidence rule: "The rule of evidence commonly known * * *." Now, in the next section there are limitations of that rule recited, page 975: (Reads.) Now, I think those are the rules of evidence and they apply no doubt to both criminal and civil cases, but in the article on Criminal Law, 16 C. J., original Corpus Juris, on page 611: (Reads.) Then in Section 1219 of the same volume on page 616, we find an article headed as follows: "Grounds for Demurrers to the Admission of Secondary Evidence." (Reads.) So my present thought is I will sustain the objection, in view of the principles which I find here.

Mr. Gillen: Then I have the answer to that, I am sure, your Honor. May I see Vol. 31 again. May it please the Court, I think I can state, without fear of being challenged by any one, that the best evidence of the fact that once Remmer owed Jeffress $50,000 and that Remmer had paid Jeffress back part or all of that $50,000, would be Mr. Jeffress himself taking the witness stand and saying, "Yes, Remmer owed me $50,000 but he has paid me back $50,000 and he paid it at a certain time," or he might even say "he paid me under certain circumstances." That would be by far primary and best evidence. Of course, I think, your Honor, the best evidence rule applies primarily, if not exclusively, to writings; in other words, secondary evidence as to what is in the writing, who prepared it or wrote it and was it destroyed and not available for any of numerous reasons we can think of, secondary evidence is now allowed by some one who had knowledge of that writing.

The Court: I notice that statement but I can't agree with that, that that applies to writing.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think it is going to confuse us, your Honor, in any event. Now, if I owed a man some money and I paid him back, I say again that the best evidence would be my creditor making the statement on the witness stand, "Yes, Gillen owed me some money but he has paid me back," because there the man is hurting himself, he is making declaration against his interest. That would be much stronger than if I would take the witness stand and say, "Yes, I owed John Jones some money but I paid him back" and you have nothing other than my word for that. You are far more liable to believe and it is far more convincing, to have the creditor say, "He now doesn't owe me any money because he paid it back." The debtor's testimony would be in the nature of self-serving statement.

The Court: That might be better evidence than the creditor's.

Mr. Gillen: Then what?

The Court: Than the other party's statement to the same transaction.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor, I think my statement as to the debtor would be self-serving statement, while the statement of the creditor would be declaration against his interest and would be far more convincing and have far more force by the triers of the facts.

Now, I think what is bothering us here could be cleared up in a word. What are we seeking the best evidence of here? We are seeking here the best evidence of what declaration was made by the declarant against interest. We are seeking the best evidence from one source, and I would like to read your Honor from the very page that Mr. Campbell read to your Honor. It is Section 204, Vol. 31, Corpus Juris Secundum, under "Evidence," at page 942, and under the general heading of "Impossibility of Obtaining Other Evidence," we find on that page a footnote and the footnote reads as follows and refers to a case which I will be happy to read to your Honor. The footnote reads as follows: (Reads.) Now, is that clear to your Honor? In other words, a fact is in dispute and this footnote says that the necessity that arises as an exception to the hearsay rule is not because there is no other source from which the same information concerning the fact may be obtained, but because there is no other authenticated way of obtaining it from the same source, the same source being the declarant who made this statement of declaration against his interest. Let me read that again, your Honor. (Reads.) The same source being Mr. Jeffress in this case.

Now, that footnote cites the case of In re Roders Estate, 193 Pac. (2), 631, and in that case, which was a case concerning intention, although there was evidence to the effect in writing, because it evolved around a will, a change in will, the point that we were concerned with was the intention and declaration against his interest that was made by the taxpayer in the case. The court says, in reviewing the matter, at page 634 of the decision, paragraph 2 of the decision: (Reads.) In other words, there may have been other sources of what apparently was the intent of the testator, but there was no other source but the testator's or somebody who had heard his declaration against interest, the same source as to his intentions. Now it says: (Reads.) "It is under this principle * * *" and it cites Wigmore on Evidence, page 155, Section 1421.

So now we are concerned with this, your Honor. What is the best available evidence at this point in the case of learning what Mr. Jeffress had to acknowledge concerning an obligation that was outstanding to him from another person. The best available evidence would be, of course, regardless of anybody else concerned in the transaction, would be Mr. Robert Jeffress himself taking the witness stand and saying, "Yes, this obligation was outstanding but on a certain date it was paid, therefore, the obligation is no longer due me," or part of the obligation, whatever the case might be—it is immaterial. Mr. Jeffress would then be making a declaration against his interest. It would be the most forceful and strongest evidence of the transaction that we could obtain. Now, Mr. Jeffress is unavailable to this court by reason of the phraseology that is within the limits of the very strictest rule, strictest interpretation of this exception to the hearsay rule, which as your Honor recalls, some jurisdicions say merely because he is not available is not enough, he has to be dead, while some jurisdictions say other circumstances of inavailability other than actual death are good enough. Now, in the absence of Mr. Jeffress, by reason of his death, what is the next best and most authentic evidence that we can obtain from that same source, regardless of the fact that there may be other sources who can throw some light on the subject, what is the best evidence that we can now obtain, in the face of Mr. Jeffress' death, from that same source, to wit, Mr. Jeffress, concerning a declaration against his own interest, and that source is a person who heard Mr. Jeffress make the declaration against his own interest.

Now, to me, your Honor, it is very clear, and let us just once more look at that language. The language says: (Reads.) And the language again here on the next page, 634: (Reads.) And of course the same source is the declarant, the man who declares against his own interest and if he is not here, then the next best evidence you can obtain from the same source, from the same man, from the declarant——

The Court (Interceding): Do you care if I ask a question or two?

Mr. Gillen: No.

The Court: What was the declaration which was offered in that will case, 193 Pacific (2)? What jurisdiction was that?

Mr. Gillen: That is New Mexico.

The Court: Now, tell me what was the declaration and question to be proved in the case? What was the main issue of the case?

Mr. Gillen: The question to be proved in the case by this, may it please the Court, the decedent, the testator had made a will. He had subsequently changed his will, changing thereby the interests of certain heirs, but in changing his will he had not executed the codicil, so the changed portion of the will was not in strict adherence to the probate rules and therefore the will was attacked for being not properly executed in form, and then the question arose—the probate court, as your Honor is well aware, trying to obtain the true intent of the testator—then the question arose as to the testator's intent in the premises and under the circumstances and his declarations of his desires were the circumstances there served as declaration against his interest and also enlightened the probate court as to what his true intent was, although the manner in which he did it did not live up to the strict letter of the law about the manner of executing a codicil to a will or making a change.

The Court: Wouldn't a reading of that case disclose that no evidence could be offered, no proof was available, of the decedent's intent except that declaration?

Mr. Gillen: No, there was a writing connected with it, but this is the writing which was objectionable.

The Court: That would prove the thing had not been legal, construction of the instrument, but other than the legal construction of the evidence, there was no evidence available except declarations of his intent?

Mr. Gillen: From that source?

The Court: No, other sources.

Mr. Gillen: No, the Court said there was evidence from other sources——

The Court (Interceding): A thought occurred to me now. Just suppose that the rule is advanced as the true rule that any declaration could be admitted that was a declaration against interest in any case where the declarant was dead?

Mr. Gillen: That is the exception to the hearsay rule.

The Court: Whether or not the best evidence?

Mr. Gillen: The court here indicated that although the question was raised, there were other ways that these declarations were objectionable, in that the court in this case stated this was not strictly declaration against interest because the man was giving away his property anyway. It was more declaration of his intentions but the court said, regardless of the objection raised, this was hearsay and not a true exception of the hearsay rule and there were other ways of getting at this same evidence. The court says: "Necessity we understand * * * from the same source."

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: Well, from the same source.

Mr. Gillen: From the same source. Now, here we have——

The Court (Interceding): I can't go along with that, Mr. Gillen. I am going to sustain the objection.

Mr. Gillen: May we have a few moments after the recess?

(Noon recess taken at 11:45 a.m.)

2:00 P.M.

(Defendant present.)

Mr. Gillen: Shall I proceed, your Honor?

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, your Honor made an inquiry of me this forenoon which I misunderstood and it was called to my attention by Mr. Golden. I miscomprehended what your Honor said and that was the question your Honor asked me if it were my contention that the declaration against interest of a dead or unavailable person could be used in all cases. I said yes, because I had in mind your Honor was relating to this same type of circumstances. The answer to that is no, but before I answer your Honor's question, there is another point that I think perhaps should be cleared up, and it is a matter that was raised by Mr. Campbell and if I may dispose of that first, your Honor, then I would like to take up the question that your Honor posed.

Mr. Campbell made one observation or contention to this effect—he said if this declaration is permitted, the prosecution is then deprived of the opportunity to cross-examine. Now, our contention is this, your Honor—the question to be probed into by the prosecution is whether or not the decedent or declarant, who is now dead or unavailable, whether he made a declaration against his interest. Now, as said by the witness on the stand, this decedent "made this declaration against his interest to me." That person is available for cross-examination to determine whether or not such a declaration was in fact made by the declarant now deceased, so he is not deprived of his opportunity to cross-examine.

Now, as to the declaration itself, the authorities and the rules have shown us that as to the truth of the declaration, or the declaration as to the truth of its contents, is authenticated by itself, because it is a declaration against interest and because, as the rule points out, one does not make a declaration against his own interest unless it is true. In other words, one does not deprive himself of pecuniary rights or gain or proprietory rights unless true, so the fact of the declaration against interest, the truth of it, is authenticated by the fact it is made against the interest of the person making it. Now, as to the proposition of whether he made it or not, of course, that is a matter that can be probed into by cross-examination of the person who contends that the declaration was made. So much for that.

Now, your Honor asked me this morning, and as I say, I miscomprehended because I thought your Honor was referring to this set of circumstances, where the circumstances were the same, whether or not declaration could be used in any case, and the answer is no. The declaration against interest of a deceased or unavailable person can be used when no higher or better evidence from the same source, or actually created by the same declarant, can be obtained or is available. In other words, the evidence that is created comes from a source. That source, of course, is the declarant. When no better evidence than the declarant's declaration against his interest can be obtained, or when no better evidence than that created by the declarant now unavailable can be obtained, then the declaration against interest, as an exception to the hearsay rule, can always be used.

Now, as to the matter of something better, some higher type of evidence created from the same source, let us take as an example when Mrs. Jeffress took the stand and stated: "My husband"—at such a time, at a time and place—"wrote me a letter and in that letter he stated * * *" thus and so, concerning either his declaration against his interest, as owing somebody some money, or as the obligation owed to him having been paid. Now, there the prosecution could readily object that better than her relating a declaration against that had been made to her, that the letter itself would be the best evidence, the letter in his handwriting, in which he made the declaration against his interest. Now, that not only is an illustration of declaration against interest, merely testifying, when there are available better evidence in writing by him, but it also is another example of the best evidence rule, limiting the use of secondary evidence; and in that regard, may it please the Court, may I invite your Honor's attention on that very subject to 5 Wigmore, third edition, at page 260, and it is Section 1456. The section is called the "Necessity Principle" and it says as follows: (Reads).

Now, you see why we should repeatedly come up with reference to this rule, your Honor. The rule does not say whether evidence on the same subject matter was available or whether evidence concerning the same transaction, it says the availability of other or better evidence from the same source. Now, what is the same source? The same source refers to the declarant, the person who has made a declaration against his interest. Let us read that again, your Honor, that subject of necessity of excepting to the hearsay rule. (Reads.) Of course, that is the most certain reason for the unavailability of the witness.

Now, if the unavailability of any other person to the same transaction were the rule, then, of course, you could never use the declaration against interest of one of the parties of the transaction. I do not know whether I am making myself clear to your Honor, but it is clear to me that the rule is that it is not whether or not you can obtain other evidence as to the same transaction, same topic, same subject matter, same incident, whatever it may be, that is not the test. The test is, is there any way of getting better or other evidence from the same source and when they use "source" they mean declarant, and when they say "declarant," they mean declarant unavailable by reason of being beyond the reach of the court, and better still and universally accepted, the fact the declarant is dead and certainly cannot be reached by the court, and then the only next better evidence that we can obtain of that declarant's or that source's information or declaration against his interest is a witness to whom he made that declaration during his lifetime and in this instance, of course, he made his declaration to his intended wife. He told her about his predicament, that he had been foolish, that he lost a considerable amount of money, became indebted and a man who was obligated to him had picked up some of his debt, and to me, your Honor, I do not think you can find, in the light of the wording of the rule, which is the universally accepted rule, you can find a stronger example for declaration against Mr. Jeffress' interest. I submit it.

Mr. Campbell: I would like to add one or two observations if I may. I disagree, of course, with Mr. Gillen's statement and implication of the law. Might I point out if his situation, or if his last contention, were true that by the same token it would be possible then for the government in this case, in instances of certain witnesses who were unavailable on account of health or on account of not being able to locate them by process, to put in evidence of statements, either in written form or in oral form, say he had made to the agents, which, of course, we know is not the law and cannot be done in that manner that the evidence must be produced here.

Now, our contention is simply this—in the first place, we do not concede that the statement made by Mr. Jeffress to the now Mrs. Jeffress was a statement against interest, and in the second place, assuming that it was, we do not believe that it is admissible in this case, in the absence of a showing that primary evidence, or the best evidence, is not available. Now, in criminal cases the usual instances of admissions against interest are admissions offered by the prosecution, admissions which have been made by the defendant outside of the court room and at various times, either before or after the occurrence of the offense and they are admissible because they were made against the defendant's interest and the defendant himself is not available to the government to call on the stand to attempt to produce the same admissions.

Now, in this instance the ultimate fact, I take it, which is sought to be proven, is the circumstance of a loan made from Mr. Jeffress allegedly to Mr. Remmer, which loan was outstanding, at least a portion thereof was outstanding, as of December 31, 1946. The note itself, as counsel pointed out, is here in evidence. Mr. Maundrell, on cross-examination, identified the note as having been made by him under the direction of Mr. Remmer, that he saw some money there, he did not count it, he did not know how much there was—a bundle of currency that was brought in—that he did not know when the money had been paid back, the loan, if, in fact, the loan had been consummated. So much is in the record. There is also some evidence in the record by Mr. Perkins that in July of 1947 that 23 thousand and some odd dollars of an obligation which the Bank Club owed to Mr. Remmer was, with Mr. Remmer's consent, applied on an indebtedness which Mr. Jeffress owed at that time to the Bank Club. I think that is essentially all that the record now contains as to that matter.

Now, the best evidence of a transaction or of an event is necessarily the evidence of the participants and of the eye witnesses. In this instance the best evidence of the existence of the loan, of course, as of the time the loan was made, would be the note itself, but as to the circumstances under which the document was drawn, the time which that loan continued, is a matter peculiarly within the knowledge of the principles. Now, I submit—I believe counsel alluded to this this morning—the evidence of Mr. Jeffress, if he was here and available, as to the payment of that note might be entitled to a little more weight than the testimony of the defendant here, because the defendant, of course, is an interested party to these proceedings. However, the testimony of both of them, or of either of them, is the best or primary evidence of what was done. Suppose there was a lawsuit which involved that note—now the evidence of either of them or of both of them would be admissible and each of them would be and would qualify to be the best and primary evidence of the events themselves. Now, it would be possible to carry this one step farther, for some one to take the stand and give any type of a story as to what some irresponsible, but now deceased, person—I do not wish to be understood as referring to Mr. Jeffress as an irresponsible person—I am using a hypothetical case—but what some irresponsible man said prior to death, such as saying, "Mr. Remmer owed me a million dollars and paid it back yesterday"—clearly that would not be admissible and would have no probative value. There would be no manner in which the government could test the truth of the statement. It would be possible, and this type of testimony would make it possible, for a defendant in a case to testify without subjecting himself to cross-examination and the test which the law requires.

Now, referring for a moment to the case cited by counsel this morning, the New Mexico case. In that case, which was a will contest—and I think the Court is thoroughly aware that special rules apply to the declarations made by a decedent at the time that he signs his will and has the witnesses attest to it—in most jurisdictions he makes a statement to the attesting witness that "I declare this to be my last will and testament" and they so certify—that is a declaration generally recognized and in proving the attesting witnesses come in and say, "We were both present and in the presence of each other he signed and acknowledged it to be his last will and testament." In this particular New Mexico case there had been presented a document for probate, the front page of which document contained certain changes. In the contest there was produced a will, as I recall, in which, as in the first document—both documents consisted of three pages—the second and third pages of both purported wills were exactly alike, all three pages in each case were stapled together, but the first page of the contested document and the first page of the document which was offered in evidence were different and the contestants of the will sought to show that the document offered for probate, as I recall—I am stating here facts from memory, I may be a little wrong, but I do not believe so—sought to show that after the execution of the will properly executed and in the presence of witnesses, as required by the New Mexico laws, which requires, as most other States do, the presence of two witnesses and attesting clause and declaration by the maker of the will—they were attempting to show that at some subsequent date the decedent had decided to make certain changes and that he apparently had made those changes and substituted them as the first page in one of the duplicate originals, without meeting the requirements of the law for a codicil, and in proving that these changes and that alteration had been made at a date subsequent to the attestation clause of the will, they were attempting to, and were permitted to, introduce these declarations of the decedent as to what changes he was going to make, and that was for the purpose of showing that the will, which had been admitted to probate, so far as the first page was concerned was not a valid document, because it had not met the requirements of the New Mexico probate law.

Now, I submit that this is an entirely different situation than is presented here. Here we are offered evidence of a conversation. Now, I take it the only material part of the conversation, and the part which counsel would indicate was an admission against interest, is the reference by him where Mrs. Jeffress says that Mr. Jeffress said, "I got myself into trouble gambling. I lost a large sum of money which was paid for me by Mr. Remmer on account of money"—I believe she used the sum $50,000—"on account of $50,000 which I loaned to him back in 1946."

Mr. Gillen: Which he owes me.

Mr. Campbell: Well, which he owes me since 1946.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think she mentioned the date.

Mr. Campbell: My recollection is she referred to the year 1946. Well, I don't think that makes any difference.

Now, as to money owed him by Mr. Remmer, I submit that this is not a statement against interest. That is a statement in favor of the pecuniary interest and on that grounds that statement, or that portion of the statement, would clearly not be admissible, even if proof were in the record here showing that primary or best evidence was not available.

Now, what is primary or best evidence? I am going to refer to some of the authorities set forth in "Words and Phrases," Vol. 33, the permanent edition, published in 1940 and which, of course, carries cumulative back parts, which volume I have in my hand, carrying back part through 1951. There is quoted here the case of Cavelle vs.———, 77 Pac. 55, a Montana case:

"Primary evidence is that kind of evidence which under every possible circumstance affords the courts certainty of the fact in question. Thus a written instrument is itself the best possible evidence of its existence and content."

Another authority quoted here, Best vs. Equitable Life Insurance Company, 299 S. W., 118, referring to page 120, and the note on that decision says:

"Best evidence or primary evidence is the particular means of proof which is the most natural and satisfactory of which the case admits and includes the best evidence which is available to a party and procurable under the existing situation, and all evidence falling short of such a standard and which in its nature suggests there is better evidence of the same fact, is secondary evidence."

Which, of course, is directly in line with the portion of Corpus Juris to which your Honor referred this morning.

Another case referred to, a recent case, is that of Pettit vs. Campbell, a Texas case, reported in 149 SW(2), 633 at page 635:

BLURRED COPY

"Primary evidence or best evidence is the kind of proof which affords greatest certainty of fact in question under any of its circumstances."

Now, the position of the government is first, that the proffered statement of Mr. Jeffress is not, upon analysis, a statement against interest, and, secondly, that even if it were, it is not the primary or best evidence of the facts which are sought to be proved through the proffered testimony.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, I think I can answer those points very rapidly.

Counsel is reading your Honor rules with which we have no quarrel. We have no quarrel with the best evidence rule as stated, and he has read rules and set forth what is recognized in law as primary evidence or the best evidence to prove a fact, but he is talking at cross purposes with the problem that confronts your Honor. He is quoting a general rule and he is shutting his eyes and ears and turning his back to and completely ignoring the necessity principle that has been related here in connection with the exception to the hearsay rule in the matter of exception of declaration against interest, because he is ignoring what the rule has to say and what is universally held in the words "from the same source."

Now, he has to admit himself that if the defendant in this case were to take the witness stand and testify that "I have paid an obligation that I owed to a Mr. Jeffress," or a part of it or paid all of it, that that wouldn't be as effective as the creditor himself taking the witness stand and saying, "The man is no longer obligated to me," because in the case of the debtor testifying, "I paid him," that is a self-serving statement and in the case of the creditor testifying that he paid, that is a declaration against interest.

Now, the question is not what is the best evidence as to the fact. These two people, the creditor and the debtor, were in different businesses altogether and on different planes. The question that we are concerned here with is what is the best evidence from this same source. The source means Mr. Jeffress, the creditor. The source means the declarant who made the declaration against interest. What is the best evidence available? Now, if there was a writing existing from Mr. Jeffress to the effect that he had been paid, I will concede readily that that would be better evidence from that same source than the testimony orally of Mrs. Jeffress that he told her that in person and vocally. But we have no evidence here of any written acknowledgment or any writing declaring against his interest that there was a note or an obligation to him.

Now, counsel said something that makes me think he hasn't been listening while we have been discussing things here. He says Mr. Jeffress' declaration, if we break down the testimony and analyze it, that it wasn't declaration against interest at all, because when a man says a certain party owes me money, that is declaration in his interest and not against interest. Conceded; but when a man says a certain party owes me money and he has paid part or all, the portion referring to the amount he declares the obligation has been paid, is a declaration against his interest, because he is directly depriving himself of claim for the money or property or whatever is involved.

The Court: I think I will go along on that branch of the argument.

Mr. Gillen: Thank you. In 20 Corpus Juris on Evidence, Section 557, to which counsel referred a moment ago, on page 469 we find this: (Reads): "A declaration against interest is admissible notwithstanding the declarant * * *." In other words, if there is conversation related, a declaration of a deceased person related, part of which is collateral to the declaration or part of a declaration against interest, the entire conversation that was had is admitted, if it is connected up with the ultimate declaration against his interest, so if a man says, "Jack Jones owes me"—or owed me or owes me—"a thousand dollars, but he paid $500 of it," it can not be knocked out because he says he owes $500, which is a declaration in his interest, and thereby defeat a declaration against his interest by adding to that sentence, in the same conversation, "but he has paid me back $500." That is exactly what happened here. Mr. Jeffress said to his intended wife, he said, "I have lost this money, I practically broke myself," and whatever else he said, and then he said, "Remmer paid my obligation from the $50,000 that he owed me." I don't have the exact words, but your Honor heard and remembered. There a man is saying a man was obligated to him but had liquidated, at least some of his obligation, and that part is declaration against interest.

Now, counsel has said another funny thing I don't quite follow. If your Honor lets this declaration against interest to go in, he says then in cases where witnesses, whom the government would like to have and did not arrive, because they were ill or for some other reason, and if they make statements to the agents, they could simply bring in these statements and put before the court. Well now, a statement that is taken by an agent of the Internal Revenue Department in an investigation matter of the person, is not a declaration against interest of the man who makes it. That would categorically be simply relating some facts within knowledge or answering some questions concerning facts by another person altogether and he would certainly have to show it was definite declaration against interest before he could introduce it. However, he did that very thing in the case of Mrs. Badovinatz and that very thing was this—Mr. Badovinatz told his wife in February of 1947, "I am going down to the bank to purchase a cashier's check to pay Remmer $5,000 that I owe him" and they introduced that evidence and that was, of course, undoubtedly a declaration against the interest of Mr. Badovinatz. Mr. Badovinatz was dead, he was not available, so they bring in the person to whom he made the declaration against his interest.

The Court: They couldn't offer any one else to prove that fact.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Gillen: They could offer exactly the same person they are contending we could offer here.

The Court: They couldn't offer Mr. Remmer.

Mr. Gillen: As a defendant, no. But could they offer anybody better to bring to your Honor's attention a declaration against interest from the same source? Those are the words that stick and those are the words counsel steps over and sidesteps from time to time, but they certainly mean something. From the same source in plain, ordinary language, means from the same place or same person. If you get a supply of groceries from the same source, that means you get it from the same store. If you get information from the same source, it means you get it from the same person; that is what the law means. What is the best evidence? It is the fellow who created it but is unavailable by reason of his death; then what is the next best place to get evidence he created by declaration against his interest? It is the person to whom he made the declaration.

The Court: I cannot reconcile that idea in my mind. I would like to hear a statement——

Mr. Gillen: What do you think the authorities mean by "from the same source"?

The Court: They are qualifying something that admits of no qualification because there can only be one class, the evidence from this lady here, this statement. It is the best and it is the worst that could be gathered from that source. It seems meaningless to me.

Mr. Gillen: What do they mean—I ask respectfully—when they say, "It doesn't mean that other evidence can be gathered from other sources, but from the same source." That same source would be other parties to a transaction.

The Court: Let us apply that phrase. I am trying to do a little thinking out loud. The best evidence from the same source, you mean from the same declaration. It admits of no qualification or anything of the kind. It is neither the best nor the worst. It is all you have.

Mr. Gillen: I do not think it means that at all.

The Court: What do you mean by best evidence from this declaration? If you can define that, tell me what would be the worst or something other than the best?

Mr. Gillen: I think the worst would be another party's statement which might be self-serving. I think the best would be——

The Court (Interceding): Let us take the situation we have here now. You know it was all right; if it wasn't, the lady wouldn't have mentioned it. That is all we have, is the statement of Mrs. Jeffress. How could you apply this or divide it into degrees or qualify it in any way?

Mr. Gillen: Because the rule says there may be other sources that you can get evidence concerning the same transaction from, but that is not the test. It is the test whether you can get it from the same source. May I read this note again to your Honor and read the distinction which is made in the New Mexico case. Here is what Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 31, that we read from this morning, Section

204, page 942, says. It speaks of necessity for pursuing the hearsay rule and admitting declarations against interest: (Reads.)

Now, your Honor, I have in mind in criminal cases we have other exceptions, the primary being the case of the dying declarant, the man found in a dying condition, and believing he is about to die, makes a statement which, because of the sublimity of the moment, the law says we can——

The Court (Interceding): I do not know whether necessity applies to res gestae or not. We are not concerned with the res gestae.

Mr. Gillen: Corpus Juris Secundum says: "Necessity should be based * * *" That is what is bothering your Honor. Your Honor seems to feel if there is no other evidence, then what are we going to do, but if there is other evidence, shouldn't we resort to that other evidence? This rule says no. This rule says: (Reads—"It is not necessary * * *") What is the point in question? Did or did not Mr. Jeffress receive some of an obligation due him from the defendant in this case? That is the point in question. (Reads.) Now, the same source is what? He said "He owed it to me but he paid it to me." That is the same source, and in the Roder case, which is cited in this note in Corpus Juris Secundum, we find the same situation stated with a little greater detail on page 634: (Reads—"Necessity as we understood * * *")

Now, what is being contended here is one of the parties to this transaction is dead, but there is another party to the transaction who still lives and so, therefore, there is available another source; whether it be a more reliable source or less reliable source, there is another source from which we can obtain some enlightenment as to the transaction; namely, whether or not any part of this obligation was paid back. Now, the same source is the declarant, the man who made the declaration against his interest—"He owed it to me but he paid it, therefore, he doesn't owe it to me any more." The decision goes on to say (Reads): "It is under this principle we have * * *." In other words, the rule says, admit it, don't lose it, and then if somebody wants to criticize and say it bears no great weight, let them do it, but admit it is better than to do it than to lose the information the declarant gave out.

As I say to your Honor, I do not want to appear smug or smart, but it is very clear to me what we are concerned with here is not, is there an opportunity for somebody else to give us some information about the transaction as to whether a man paid any part of the debt or not. There are probably fifty other people who can say something about it. The court and the rule says that is not it. The test is, is there any other way of getting better information from this fellow who says, "My obligation has been cleared," who says, "Here is my declaration against interest." I will concede if there was a letter in existence that this man wrote, or a receipt in existence, or his endorsement on a check, or some memorandum or notation, that would be the best evidence, if we could identify Mr. Jeffress' handwriting, better than his wife giving testimony he told her something, but the fact of the matter is there is no other evidence, there exists no such better evidence than her statement there was a declaration of interest.

What did Mrs. Badonavitz have? All we had in the Badonavitz case was this—a man says to his wife, "I am going down to the bank to buy a cashier's check to pay back Remmer five thousand dollars I owe him," and in support of that there appears here a banker who produced what? At approximately the same time a cashier's check that was purchased by Mr. Badonavitz and made in favor of Mr. Remmer for the amount of money involved.

Now here, may it please the Court, we have in support of this declaration against interest that a man makes to his wife what? We have a check that was paid to Remmer by a cashier or bookkeeper, accountant, who testified here the Bank Club owed Mr. Remmer 29 thousand dollars—"We made him a check for that amount but he underwrote another man's obligation, so we retained 23 thousand of that 29 thousand," and that other man was Mr. Jeffress, and that is supporting evidence over which we had no control, a check that had gone through the bank and records that showed the turnover of these things, supporting, corroborating evidence, over which we had no control.

I submit, your Honor, it is most detrimental to the defense in this case if we are shut out in the face of the showing we have made here and in the face of the universal recognition of this rule, it is most detrimental to the defense if we are not given our right under this rule, if your Honor does not admit this evidence. I submit it.

The Court: I would like to see that volume of Corpus Juris Secundum, Vol. 31. The objection is sustained. I just won't accept that statement of the rule. "From the same source," I would go along with that. Bring in the jury.

MRS. JEFFRESS

resumes the witness stand on further

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Mr. Gillen: May the record show that your Honor has sustained the objection of the prosecution to the question asked of Mrs. Jeffress this morning, concerning a conversation she had with her intended, later, husband, Mr. Robert Jeffress, on the occasion mentioned in 1947?

The Court: The record will so show.

Q. Mrs. Jeffress, this morning you described an incident of your husband, prior to your marriage, I believe in the month of January, 1947, prior to the time that you became the wife of Mr. Robert Jeffress, in your presence and with your assistance looking through his papers for some letter, running across a [2674] piece of paper which was folded over in letter fashion, which he gave to your sister for safekeeping for him, and do you know whether or not your sister placed that piece of paper in your safety deposit box? A. She did.

Q. Which you identified as having rented with your sister in the Anglo California Bank in January of 1949? A. Yes, she did.

Q. Now, when was the next time that you saw that piece of paper after it had been handed to your sister and taken away?

A. When Mr. Jeffress asked me to have my sister bring it in up to Mt. Rose.

Q. Can you fix the time that was?

A. Well, I am not too positive. It was between August, 1949, and June of 1950.

Q. Some time between August of 1949 and June of 1950?

A. Yes. I think it was in the winter of 1949 but I am not sure of that. I am not positive.

Q. You were living at Mt. Rose at that time with Mr. Jeffress? A. Yes.

Q. And of course you had then been married some two years? A. Yes.

Q. And did you communicate with your sister?

A. Yes.

Q. And in what manner did you communicate with your sister? [2675]

A. By telephone.

Q. You asked her to bring the note up?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

A. The next time——

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as leading and suggestive.

The Court: Objection sustained. The answer may go out.

Q. Well, what did you say to your sister on the telephone?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as hearsay.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Withdraw that.

Q. This telephone conversation you had with your sister was from where to where?

A. It was from the Christmas Tree on Mt. Rose to my home in San Francisco.

Q. That is the 11th Avenue flat which you occupied with Mr. Jeffress? A. Yes.

Q. Following that conversation did your sister arrive at Mt. Rose?

A. Yes, some time later.

Q. And when your sister arrived, did she have with her the piece of paper that had been entrusted to her by your husband? A. Yes.

Q. And that is the piece of paper that you identified this morning as looking similar to defendant's Exhibit A-1, the Remmer note to Robert Jeffress? [2676] A. Yes.

Q. When your sister arrived with that same piece of paper, did you unfold it and read it at that time? A. No.

Q. What did you do with the piece of paper?

A. I put it in the dresser drawer.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. Did you call your husband's attention to the fact that this piece of paper had arrived?

A. No, not at that time.

Q. Did you at any later time call to your husband's attention the fact that the piece of paper had arrived? A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever turn that piece of paper over to your husband? A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us approximately when that was, how much later?

A. It was either, as I said, in the winter of 1949 or the early part of 1950. I think it was the winter of '49.

Q. Now, can you fix it this way—approximately how long after your sister brought the paper to you and gave it to you that you turned it over to your husband? A. I would say a few weeks.

Q. Under what circumstances did you turn it over to your husband, voluntarily or by reason of request from him? A. He asked me——

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as immaterial. [2677]

The Court: The answer may stand.

Q. He asked you. Now do you know what he did with that piece of paper when you turned it over to him? A. He said he was taking——

Mr. Campbell: Just a minute.

Q. Do you know what he did with that piece of paper when you turned it over to him?

A. I presume he gave——

Mr. Campbell: Objected to—may she be instructed to answer of her own knowledge?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Mr. Gillen: I don't think counsel should be so severe.

Mr. Campbell: I do not mean to be severe on the witness but I want her to understand the situation.

(Question read.)

The Court: If you know, say yes; if you don't know, say no.

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see what he did with that note?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he take it in his hand? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see what he did with it?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he do with it?

A. He put it in his coat pocket. [2678]

Q. Do you know what he did with it after that?

A. Took it into Reno.

Q. Do you know what he did with it in Reno?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Did you accompany him into Reno on that occasion? A. No.

Q. Do you know whether or not he had the piece of paper when he returned from Reno?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever see that piece of paper again?

A. No.

Q. You did see a piece of paper, however, that you saw this morning that you say looked like the same piece of paper, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And I refer now to defendant's A-1?

A. Yes; a photostatic copy.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. The folded piece of paper I showed you you never saw the original again excepting this morning you saw this piece of paper which you say looked like the one that was in your possession?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, I understand from your testimony that you never personally read this note in its original form, is that correct? [2679]

A. Yes.

Q. You were recently, however, shown a photostatic copy of the note, is that correct, of Elmer Remmer to Robert Jeffress in amount of 50 thousand dollars, dated September 27, 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Jeffress, in the year 1943 Mr. Jeffress was a widower at that time, residing with his daughter, is that correct, upstairs from the flat where you were residing with your sisters as a tenant? A. Yes.

Q. And you had developed, as I understand, a friendship with Mr. Jeffress and with his first wife and other members of his family over the years?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you acquainted with the fact that Mr. Jeffress had entered into a business enterprise in the year 1943? A. Yes.

Q. And do you recall what that business enterprise was? A. Yes.

Q. What was it?

A. Ambassador Bar in San Francisco.

Q. Were you acquainted with the fact whether or not he ever sold his interest in that Ambassador Bar in San Francisco after acquiring an interest in 1943? A. Yes. [2680]

Q. Do you remember when that was?

A. Either in 1945 or 1946, I don't remember which.

Q. Either in 1945 or 1946? A. Yes.

Q. If the record should show that the bar was sold in January of 1946, would you say that that would refresh your memory? A. Yes.

Q. Now, you stated that in 1948 your husband went to the Lake from San Francisco and made his home for some time with his son, James, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. What were the circumstances of his going to the Lake, do you know?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as calling for hearsay.

Mr. Gillen: I am calling for her knowledge as to why he went to the Lake.

The Court: She may answer the question.

A. He bought an interest into the Christmas Tree at Mt. Rose.

Q. Who bought the interest, Mr. Robert Jeffress or Mr. James Jeffress?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as calling for conclusion.

The Court: She may answer if she knows.

A. James Jeffress.

Q. And did Mr. Robert Jeffress, your husband, go to work there at the Christmas Tree? [2681]

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

A. Yes.

Q. For his son? A. Yes.

Q. And that occasioned his moving up and living with his son and remaining in Nevada?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you at times come up and visit here for extended visits? A. Yes.

Q. Did you finally move up here? A. Yes.

Q. And when was that?

A. That would be August of 1949.

Q. How long did you remain a resident here?

A. Until June of 1950.

Q. And then did you and Mr. Jeffress return to San Francisco? A. Yes.

Q. Was it 1950 or 1951 Mr. Jeffress passed away? A. 1950.

Q. So at the end of that year Mr. Jeffress passed away? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, were you at any time interviewed by any representatives or agents of the Internal Revenue Department? A. Yes.

Q. Who was the first person who interviewed you and about what time was it, if you can fix it? [2682]

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent and immaterial, if the Court please.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Let me ask you this—were you at any time interviewed by any representative or agent of the Internal Revenue Department concerning the income tax case of Elmer Remmer, the defendant in this case?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: I would like to be heard on that, if the Court please.

The Court: We will excuse the jury until Monday morning.

Mr. Gillen: I do not like to do that. I think I can say as to my reason without in any wise prejudicing the jury. There has been some evidence here, may it please the Court, offered by the prosecution as to the rather exhaustiveness of the investigation that had been conducted in the matter of the Remmer tax problem. These questions are for the purpose of refuting, in some degree, that very contention and specifically I want to establish—and I can do so by a written statement that is in the hands of the government—dispute the contention of the exhaustiveness of their investigation, that this lady was never asked when the 50 thousand dollar obligation was paid. She was never asked that question, which is a vital [2683] point in connection with the prosecution of this case and the establishing of the net worth.

Mr. Campbell: I submit, without conceding the statement made by counsel, what the witnesses were asked or were not asked, if we are going into those collateral matters we could be here until doomsday.

Mr. Gillen: We have only been going a couple of days.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: I will ask counsel for the prosecution, through your Honor, to produce the written statement that was taken from Mrs. Jeffress concerning this matter, so I may examine it and possibly offer it in evidence.

Mr. Campbell: I object to that. The witness is here on the stand. Has been produced to answer questions.

Mr. Gillen: I am trying to ask her the questions, counsel is objecting and I ask for the production of the written statement that was signed, the statement given about this matter by Mrs. Jeffress, so I may examine it and offer it to your Honor as a possible bit of evidence.

The Court: I think if there is any signed statement, it should be given to counsel.

Mr. Campbell: I have no objection if that is the Court's position.

The Court: Yes, if it relates to this present case.

Mr. Gillen: Oh, yes; it is concerned with this matter. [2684]

Mr. Campbell: This document, consisting of six handwritten pages, may be marked for identification.

The Clerk: 187 for identification.

Mr. Campbell: May I preliminarily identify it through the witness?

Mr. Gillen: I wish I could examine it. I asked that it be produced, your Honor, and I think it would be proper that I be permitted to examine it.

The Court: Very well.

Q. Now, Mrs. Jeffress, I am going to show you a sheath of yellow pages produced here by the prosecution under the Court's order, consisting of six pages, and on the last two pages there appears a purported signature, "Edna Jeffres," the entire six pages being written in handwriting. I ask you to look at those last two pages and tell me whether or not you recognize either or both of those signatures, "Edna Jeffress"? A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize both of those signatures?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose signatures are they? A. Mine.

Q. Now, the rest of the handwriting on these six sheets, will you glance over them. Can you tell us, if you know, who wrote those six pages other than the two signatures in your own [2685] handwriting?

A. No, I don't recognize it.

Q. Did you see those six pages written in your presence? Did you see anybody write those pages?

A. No.

Q. I do not think you understand my question. When you were interviewed and gave the information which you signed in these six pages, two different signatures, who interviewed you?

A. The one with my signature was done in Mr. Campbell's office. I called at Mr. Campbell's office.

Q. Do you see the man here who interviewed you? A. Yes, that gentleman.

Mr. Campbell: Mr. Shelton.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Robert Jeffress.)

Q. When Mr. Shelton interviewed you did he write down what you said to him? A. Yes.

Q. Did he write it down on yellow sheets of paper? A. Yes.

Q. Would you just read through those yellow sheets, fully or sketchilly, as you desire, and see if you recognize what is written down there as being generally what Mr. Shelton interviewed you about? Possibly Mr. Campbell would stipulate Mr. Shelton conducted the interview and that is his handwriting on those pieces of paper?

Mr. Campbell: Oh, yes. [2686]

Mr. Gillen: Then we do not have to bother.

Q. Now, the date of the first sheet there is what?

A. November 21, 1951.

Q. Do you recall that as the date that you were interviewed by Mr. Shelton? A. Yes.

Q. Did you know at that time that you were talking to Mr. Shelton?

A. I thought I was talking to Mr. Shelton—no, I thought I was talking to Mr. Campbell.

Q. Why do you think that?

A. Because I was called to Mr. Campbell's office.

Q. You thought Mr. Shelton was Mr. Campbell. All right.

Mr. Gillen: I will offer this, may it please the Court, as defendant's exhibit next in evidence.

Mr. Campbell: We have no objection.

The Court: It may be admitted in evidence. 187 will be admitted as K-1.

Partly in pencil and partly in ink, the statement reads as follows: (Reads "* * * Helen Elliott * * *".) May I interrupt [2687] and ask at this point to whom did you refer when you stated to Mr. Shelton in this statement that you told Mr. Golden that Mr. Jeffress gave the note to an attorney in Reno?

A. I beg your pardon?

Q. To whom did you refer when you mentioned the name Mr. Golden? Did you refer to Mr. Golden, the lawyer here? A. Yes, I did.

Q. You had had a telephone conversation with Mr. Golden prior to that time?

Mr. Gillen: I will withdraw that.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Avakian: In addition, your Honor, when the witness from the First National Bank of Nevada, Mr. Waldo, was on the stand, it was arranged that he would submit a photostatic copy of the signature card in the account of the Cal-Neva Corporation in the name of Cal-Neva Lodge, and we have that here and in view of the fact Mr. Campbell requested that he produce photostatic copies of two deposit slips, showing deposits in the Cal-Neva account, one in the amount of $47,300 on October 26, 1946, and the other in the amount of $78,634.29 on December 7, 1946, we have both of those deposit slips in photostat form [2690] also and are producing them at the request of the prosecution at this time.

Mr. Thompson: Thank you, Mr. Avakian. We offer them in evidence as part of exhibit of Cal-Neva Lodge account.

Mr. Golden: I think the signature card is already in as 185 and the ledger sheet is part of defendant's Exhibit I-1.

The Court: Exhibit 185 has been admitted and it includes that signature card.

Mr. Golden: It is the signature card at the date the bank account was opened and my recollection is it was submitted the other day and we are now offering the photostatic copy. Then the balance of the documents, I believe, are defendant's Exhibit I-1.

Mr. Thompson: I suggest the two deposit slips, one bearing date October 26, 1946, in amount of

BLURRED COPY

$47,300 for the Cal-Neva Lodge account, and the other dated December 7, 1946, showing deposit of $78,634.29 in the Cal-Neva Lodge Account be made a part of Exhibit I-1.

The Court: Is that satisfactory?

Mr. Golden: That is agreeable.

Mr. Avakian: In connection with the deposit slips showing deposit on December 7, 1946, the deposit slip shows a payment of that deposit and check in the amount of $74,678.29 and prosecution's Exhibit 173, which is already in evidence, which consists of exchange of correspondence between Mr. Weaver and [2691] Mr. Semenza in 1949, regarding that deposit, states that that particular check represented a transfer of funds from another bank account of Cal-Neva, Inc., in the same bank, carried in the name of Cal-Neva, Inc., to the bank account of Cal-Neva Lodge, and we have obtained from the bank a photostatic copy of the ledger card of the Cal-Neva bank account which was carried in the name of Cal-Neva, Inc., showing that on that same date there is a withdrawal of that account of the entire balance of that account, namely, $74,678.29, and in order that the full picture may be complete, we would like to offer that in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: We have no objection, your Honor. In that connection, I would like to suggest that a letter from Mr. Waldo, explaining certain alterations in the transfer of the ledger account be made a part of the exhibit.

Mr. Avakian: Yes, I would suggest that, too.

The Court: The ledger account with the letter

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

attached is admitted as Defendant's Exhibit L-1.

Mr. Avakian: I would like to call the jury's attention to one item of the letter part, if I may.

The Court: Yes, sir.

Mr. Avakian: Defendant's Exhibit L-1, which is the ledger account of the bank, First National Bank of Nevada, in the name of Cal-Neva, Inc., shows that balance in that account on December 7, 1946, was $74,678.29 and it shows a [2692] withdrawal of that same amount on that same day, leaving a balance of zero, and the letter attached to that exhibit on the letterhead of the First National Bank, dated February 9, 1952, addressed to me, states as follows: (Reads from exhibit), and I think the deposit slip which was presented this morning from that Cal-Neva account shows that this 74 thousand dollar item was deposited in that other Cal-Neva account.

Mr. Thompson: So stipulated.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, on Friday last there was present in court as the next witness to be called by the defense, Mr. James Jeffress. Mr. James Jeffress is the son of the late Robert L. Jeffress and he is the young man who is referred to by Mrs. R. R. Jeffress, the widow, and he is the young man also who operates the Christmas Tree. Now, the first occasion he was able to get in here was Friday, due to snow conditions up there. We didn't reach him on Friday afternoon and this morning about 7:30 we received a telephone call from him at Reno, advising us he was hopelessly snowed in and he would be unable to get through to come to court this morning. May I suggest this to your Honor, Mr. James Jeffress is being called to give testimony which raises the identical issue which was presented to your Honor in the matter of the testimony of Mrs. Jeffress, with relation to conversation with her late husband, in the matter of testimony of Mr. Woodburn, Sr., and in the matter of testimony of Mr. Graham, and it struck me, that [2693] as a practical matter and in the interest of saving time, we would assume that your Honor would pass upon the testimony of this young man the same as to those other witnesses with relation to conversations with a person now deceased, an alleged declaration against interest, so I will ask your Honor's suggestion—my suggestion would be, if your Honor feels that you would pass on this identical point and sustain an objection to that testimony, that we could make an offer of proof for our record and could make that any time during the day, in which event we would not ask Mr. Jeffress to return, because he may be snowed in for some time, from the appearance here.

BLURRED COPY

The Court: I can see no objection to that procedure. Have you any objection to that, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: We have no objection to that procedure, your Honor.

The Court: We will take that up later. You remind me of it.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor. Then the defense, your Honor, will call as its next witness Mr. John R. Golden.

JOHN R. GOLDEN

being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Q. Will you state your name?

A. John R. Golden.

Q. Will you state your residence?

A. 99 Fernwood Drive, San Francisco. [2694]

Q. Will you state what is your business or profession? A. I am a lawyer.

Q. How long have you been practicing your profession?

A. Over twenty years, not counting time in the service; that, including the time I was in the army.

Q. How long were you in the army?

A. Under three years.

Q. By the way, as preliminary to some testimony which will arise later on, you at this time and since your service in the army, have you held a reserve commission in the army?

A. That is right.

Q. What is that commission?

A. Lieutenant Colonel.

Q. Will you state to what Bars or what departments are you admitted to practice?

A. Well, I am admitted to practice before the United States Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, United States District Court in California, all the courts in California, the United States Immigration Service, United States Court of Claims, possibly some others of minor importance.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Q. Where do you conduct your practice?

A. Usually in San Francisco.

Q. Where are your offices?

A. In the Crocker Building, 33 Post Street.

Q. With whom are you associated? [2695]

A. With yourself, that is Mr. Leslie Gillen, and we have a couple of young men in the office, Mr. Halley and Mr. Supera.

Q. Are you acquainted with the defendant in this case, Elmer F. Remmer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you and your associate afford professional services to Mr. Remmer at an earlier time in connection with matters other than the present case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what particular matters?

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, we object on the ground it is irrelevant and immaterial, unless it is offered to show an unpaid account but otherwise I do not know what the materiality of the proof would be.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: The reason I asked the question with regard to other matters, it is preliminary and explanatory of some matters that have been before the court by testimony of other witnesses in regard to the determination of certain business activities and the reason for——

The Court (Interceding): Very well. The ruling will be vacated and you may answer the question.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

A. Well, as I recall the question, you asked me concerning matters previous to this case?

Q. That is right, previous to the income tax matter. [2696]

A. The particular matter was in connection with the Menlo Club in San Francisco, the same club which is talked about here.

Q. And that was in connection with a new interpretation placed on the law with regard to legal card games in San Francisco, is that right?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as leading and also irrelevant.

Mr. Gillen: If I may explain to your Honor, I have this in mind. This establishes the reason for closing of an enterprise and the result of closing of that enterprise, the loss of some money not only to this defendant, but also to other partners in that enterprise.

Mr. Thompson: The only material fact is whether the enterprise closed or remained open and also the date of closing. So far as I am informed from the evidence so far, the Menlo Club was still operating on December 31, 1946, and anything that occurred thereafter is immaterial.

Mr. Gillen: There was some testimony developed and comment made about the fact that certain partners never got any money. We want to show that the enterprise, by reason of the interpretation of the law, was closed, to the loss of persons still invested in that enterprise.

The Court: We may be interested in whether or not the enterprise closed, but I can not see that we are interested in the reason why it closed. [2697]

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Mr. Gillen: Very well. It would only be explanatory and not invite speculation by the jury.

The Court: I don't see why we are interested in that or why it might invite derogatory speculation against the defendant. The jury will understand that the Court rules that it was not material.

Mr. Gillen: All right.

Q. Mr. Golden, can you tell us when the Menlo Club closed?

A. In April or early May, 1948.

Q. Can you tell us whether or not the 186 Club closed at or about the same time under the same circumstances? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Mr. Golden, what was the first occasion upon which you and your associate were called upon to offer any professional services in connection with the income tax problem of Mr. Remmer?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Unless it is preliminary.

Mr. Gillen: It is preliminary.

The Court: We will hear the answer.

A. In February, 1950, when Mr. Remmer received a letter from——

Mr. Thompson: We object—the question has been answered.

The Court: Yes, it is answered.

Q. Can you tell us what gave rise to you and your associate coming into the case? [2698]

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial. Calls for speculation.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. When you went into the matter, what was the first matter in connection with the case that demanded your attention?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as irrelevant, has nothing to do with the issues in this case.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Of course, I think, your Honor, that the first contact with the Internal Revenue man, Mr. Campbell, and so on, is material in view of the testimony that has been offered here and admitted by the Court, to the effect that there was a lack of cooperation insofar as the defendant himself was concerned and insofar as the attorneys who had represented Mr. Remmer were concerned. There was testimony to the effect that there was great cooperation in the matter of turning over to the government, the Internal Revenue agents, the books and records of the various enterprises for their examination and investigation, but we have other testimony that subsequently there was a refusal to permit the defendant to be interviewed by the Internal Revenue men, there was a lack of cooperation by certain lawyers in the case, and we feel that we have a right to refute that by showing what was done with Mr. Golden and his associate, in the person of myself, and, at a subsequent time, Mr. Avakian, who was called in as an expert tax lawyer by [2699] us, what was done in connection with the case and the matter of cooperation at that time.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Thompson: Well, the issue, your Honor, is not one of cooperation. The matter of Mr. Remmer's refusal to answer questions for the Revenue agents was material offered to show that the agents had tried to interview him in the course of their investigation and had conducted as thorough an investigation as possible and the fact of his refusal to make himself available as a material thing, what Mr. Golden may have thought or done about it, does not have any bearing upon the issues in this case.

Mr. Gillen: Counsel is not clairvoyant and can't very well determine in advance that it had no bearing on the issues. We not only have sworn oral testimony, but also extensive correspondence.

The Court: What is the question?

(Last question read.)

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Let me ask you, Mr. Golden, did you request a conference with Mr. Campbell and the Internal Revenue men in connection with the Elmer Remmer tax problem? A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: May the answer go out, your Honor, to give me an opportunity to object?

The Court: Yes. [2700]

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Did you have a conference with Mr. Campbell?

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

The Court: Same ruling.

Q. Did you become acquainted with whether or not there was more than one problem that was faced by Mr. Remmer in connection with those tax problems?

Mr. Thompson: Same objection, also calls for his conclusion.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Well, I will ask counsel, through the Court, if he will not stipulate——

Mr. Thompson: I object to requesting counsel to stipulate. If Mr. Gillen wants to make an offer of proof——

The Court: Yes, if there is to be any objection, we might excuse the jury and find out what the stipulation is or counsel might communicate privately.

Mr. Gillen: I will withdraw the request for stipulation at this time.

Q. Was it brought to your attention in any manner that a criminal prosecution was being considered in connection with the Remmer tax problems?

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection.

The Court: Objection sustained. [2701]

Mr. Gillen: What is the ground of the same objection? I just hear same objection, same objection.

Mr. Thompson: It is irrelevant and immaterial, has nothing to do with the issues in this case, which relate to whether or not Mr. Remmer wrongfully attempted to evade his income tax for the years 1944, 1945, and 1946.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Mr. Gillen: Let us find out——

The Court: Yes, that is the basis of the Court's ruling.

Mr. Gillen: Let us find out, as a preliminary matter, may it please the Court, because if we do not lay the preliminary grounds that enables the jury to pick up the thread of this testimony here, the testimony on other material matters wouldn't sound like anything.

The Court: I can not see where this question is material. The ruling will stand.

Mr. Gillen: Now, so I may be guided and not call for continuous objections, the contention is, and your Honor has ruled, that it is immaterial whether Mr. Remmer and his attorneys——

The Court: I will rule on questions and I will rule on subsequent questions as they arise. I do not want to indicate a line of ruling in advance.

Q. Mr. Golden, were you ever requested at any time by Mr. Campbell to prepare a financial and net worth statement of the defendant, Elmer Remmer, to the government, in order that the government might determine whether or not there was [2702] any basis for the contention of fraud in connection with the Remmer tax problems?

Mr. Thompson: I make the objection it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial and nothing to do with the issues in this case, and also the question is leading, contains a subject matter which would be included in the witness' answer, if he was permitted to answer.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Mr. Gillen: It is very material, your Honor. There is contention here there has been no cooperation in matters of assisting, outside of originally giving the books, which they concede was done cooperatively, and also that Mr. Maundrell and Mr. Kyne, who looked after the books had cooperated with them to the extent of attending conferences and explaining matters in question in the books. However, beyond that there is a contention, and it was testified to by Mr. Weaver particularly, that there was a lack of cooperation to assist the government in arriving at any conclusion concerning a net worth of the defendant in this case and to assist the government in arriving at any conclusion regarding whether or not there was fraud or the absence of fraud. Now, we want to get that basis, your Honor, and establish in the record, then we can go on with the testimony, and I think it is only fair——

The Court: I do not recall any such testimony.

Mr. Gillen: You do not recall Mr. Weaver testifying that he requested an interview with Mr. Remmer in Mr. Thatcher's [2703] office?

The Court: Oh, yes; I recall that.

Mr. Gillen: That Mr. Remmer was present and that that was denied by Mr. Thatcher?

The Court: I recall that, yes.

Mr. Gillen: Now, we have an exhibit on the record here, Mr. Thatcher——

The Court (Interceding): But that has no relation to this question. Objection will be sustained.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Mr. Gillen: Now, Mr. Weaver also testified, and we can find it in the transcript——

The Court (Interceding): I have ruled.

Mr. Gillen: This is another matter.

The Court: I have ruled.

Mr. Gillen: Your Honor will recall I was absent two days when Mr. Weaver testified and Mr. Avakian just called my attention——

The Court (Interceding): There is nothing before the Court. I do not like these discussions in the presence of the jury. If you want to argue, I will send the jury out. There is nothing to argue about because there is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Gillen: I do not want to be placed in the position of always sending the jury out.

The Court: I do not want to, either, but I do not want [2704] any arguing in the presence of the jury.

Q. Did you, Mr. Golden, ever offer to undertake the preparation and furnishing to Mr. Campbell of a net worth statement of the defendant, Elmer Remmer?

Mr. Thompson: Same objection.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Mr. Golden, are you acquainted with a man in San Francisco by the name of Jay Friedman?

A. Nathan Jay Friedman.

Q. What is that man's business or occupation?

A. He is a certified public accountant.

Q. Was he formerly employed by the United States government? A. Yes.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

Q. And did you at any time negotiate with Mr. Nathan Jay Friedman and have him make any survey of the Remmer records in the hands of the United States government for any reason?

A. Yes.

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Did you at any time, Mr. Golden, undertake to obtain a release of a portion of the financial assets of the defendant Remmer, release from a lien which had been placed on them by the government, and offer to post a surety bond to protect the government so that funds would be available to employ accountants to prepare a net worth statement to supply the government? [2705] A. Yes——

Mr. Thompson: May the answer go out so I may have an opportunity to object?

The Court: Now, you are a lawyer, Mr. Golden, you shouldn't hurry those answers. It is all right for a layman perhaps. The answer will be stricken and objection sustained.

Mr. Thompson: Entirely irrelevant, your Honor.

The Court: The answer is stricken and objection is sustained.

Q. In connection with the Remmer tax problems between February of 1950 up until the time that the indictment was filed, as I recall, April 9, 1951, how many government men or persons in official positions did you confer or correspond with?

Mr. Thompson: Objected on the ground it is immaterial and irrelevant and has nothing to do with the case.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of John R. Golden.)

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Now——

The Court (Interceding): There is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Gillen: You ask the people——

The Court: The Court has ruled.

Mr. Gillen: You don't want to hear from me?

The Court: I will, yes; we will send the jury out.

Mr. Gillen: Well, I am in the position, as much as I [2706] do not want to discommode the jury——

The Court: Well, I do not want to either. If you do not want to proceed——

Mr. Gillen: Well, I can't proceed.

The Court: What are you talking about now?

Mr. Gillen: I want to explain my position.

The Court: The Court takes full responsibility for sending the jury out.

Mr. Gillen: If I am not able to explain my position, I will have to do it outside of the hearing of the jury.

The Court: All right. Jury and alternate jurors admonished and excused at 10:40 a.m.

(In the absence of the jury.)

OFFER OF PROOF REGARDING JAMES JEFFRESS AND JOHN R. GOLDEN

(Feb. 11, 1952—Notebook 342, PP 53-79.)

The Court: I think it might be a good time to make any offer of proof. Perhaps this present situation can be taken care of by offer of proof. There is nothing before the Court. No reason why I should listen to you.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: Well, it is my understanding——

The Court (Interceding): I have ruled and there is no question before the Court but if you have an offer of proof I will be glad to hear it, but I am not going to sit and listen to argument on any questions I have ruled on. I am always glad to hear, if there is a question which in my mind is a difficult one, hear debate and I am willing to set aside a ruling, but I am not going to sit and listen to an argument on matters which do not appear to me to be in question. You may take an exception.

Mr. Gillen: What is your Honor's pleasure as to which matter you would entertain—as to the offer of proof of James Jeffress or offer of proof——

The Court: Any order you take would be satisfactory to me.

Mr. Gillen: I think, may it please the Court, that we might as well, so shortly after the testimony of Mrs. Jeffress, give this offer of proof of James Jeffress.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, the defense offers to prove by the testimony of James Jeffress, whom, as I stated to your Honor, was here on Friday and whom I explained heretofore to your Honor advised us this morning that he is now snowed in and unable to reach court today, the defense offers to prove by his testimony that in 1940, his mother, the first wife of Robert L. Jeffress, his father, Robert L. Jeffress, being the person referred to in connection with the $50,000 loan to Mr. Remmer in 1946, to augment the account of the Cal-Neva Lodge; that his mother died and pursuant to her Lodge; that his mother died and pursuant to her expressed request, whatever of the community property accumulated by her husband, Robert L. Jeffress, and herself she desired to have distributed equally between her son, James Jeffress, the witness who was unable to reach here today, and her daughter. If I recall, that young woman's name was mentioned by Mrs. Jeffress as Carolyn Jeffress. That Mr. James Jeffress signed over to his father an authority to use his share of the assets, which as I am informed and the testimony would be, was not in actual cash, but was interest in real property and also in stocks. The testimony of Mr. James Jeffress would show that he entered the United States Army in 1941, and that he was stationed at Camp Roberts, which is located near Paso Robles, about 200 miles south of San Francisco.

The testimony will show that in February, 1943, he had a discussion with his father, because of the fact that he was in the army and expected that he might be transferred to some other point, regarding their finances, particularly his interest in his mother's share of the community estate and that at that time in 1944, July of 1944, prior to his being transferred to another point, namely a camp in Missouri, that his father told him that in February of 1943, that is after Robert L. Jeffress had purchased a half interest in the Ambassador Bar in San Francisco, that he had borrowed the sum of ten thousand dollars from Elmer Remmer and that he then, in July, 1944, still owed Elmer Remmer the ten thousand dollars. Mr. Jeffress would testify that he transferred from Paso Robles to a camp in Missouri in December of 1944, and that he subsequently thereto was sent overseas to the European theatre of war and that he returned from overseas and was discharged from the army in October of 1945. Mr. James Jeffress would testify that it came to his attention that in the summer of 1947, and for some time thereafter, that Mr. Robert L. Jeffress had lost heavily at gambling. Mr. James Jeffress would testify that it came to his attention that in September of 1946, that there was the sum of $50,000 loaned by his father, Robert L. Jeffress, to Elmer Remmer, for the purpose of augmenting the Cal-Neva bank account and that that matter came to his attention because at that time Mr. James Jeffress was working at Cal-Neva Lodge and that funds became short in the bank account and Mr. Jeffress loaned Elmer Remmer $50,000, which was deposited in the bank account, and your Honor recalls there was testimony and exhibits in the way of telegraphic transfer from the Bank of America.

The Court: What year was that in, Mr. Gillen?

Mr. Gillen: In September of 1946. If I recall, the loan was made, the money was withdrawn by Mr. Jeffress on September 27, 1946, and the actual credit under the telegraphic transfer was made at the First National Bank of Nevada on the 28th of September of 1946.

Mr. James Jeffress would testify that the following year, when he learned that his father was gambling heavily and losing, that it also came to his attention that some of his father's gambling obligations had been underwritten and paid off by Elmer Remmer. Mr. James Jeffress would also testify that in July of 1948, Mr. James Jeffress, having for some time been employed or had a gaming concession at the Lodge known as the Christmas Tree, that he negotiated to purchase the Christmas Tree with another partner and that he was in need of some cash to meet the down payment and that he went to his father and he asked his father if his father could supply him with any cash, in the way of either returning some of his mother's funds to him or making a loan to him, and at that time his father told him—this is declaration against interest, which we assume your Honor would rule on, because it is a debatable problem—that his father told him he was unable to give him any cash, that he had lost heavily the previous year in gambling and that he was practically broke. We offer to prove that Mr. James Jeffress would testify that he then asked his father specifically: "You loaned $50,000 to Bones Remmer. Does he still owe you any of that?" and that Mr. Robert L. Jeffress stated to him: "Bones took up my gambling debts and paid me off last year," which would mean the year 1947.

Mr. James Jeffress would also testify that by other means and in another manner he was able to raise the necessary money and that he did, in fact, purchase an interest in the Christmas Tree in July of 1948, and that he took over the operating interest in the Christmas Tree on August 1, 1948, and has been the owner of the Christmas Tree since that time up to the present time.

Mr. James Jeffress would also testify that in the year 1948, his father, being financially impoverished, that he employed his father in connection with the gaming activities of the Christmas Tree and that his father made his home there with Mr. James Jeffress and his family in 1948, and that Mrs. Edna Jeffress, who testified last Friday, came up and stayed from time to time with him.

Now, may it please the Court, I have in mind the number of things that I have referred to that Mr. James Jeffress would testify to would obviously not be objectionable in themselves, but those matters were referred to—they are only preliminary to corroborate matters—they had to be referred to in order for your Honor to follow the important matters which would be the existence of the conversations with his now deceased father, in which his now deceased father made declarations against his own interest.

The Court: That is the substance of the offer of this declaration at this point?

Mr. Gillen: Yes, your Honor. In each instance where there was a conversation included in the declaration against interest, that is the reason I suggested the offer of proof.

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, we object to the offer upon the ground it calls for hearsay evidence and that the proof offered is not the primary evidence of the transactions which are sought to be proven.

The Court: The offer will be rejected. Objection to the offer is sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Very well. Now in regard to the testimony of Mr. Golden, your Honor, this is rather by way of explanation, your Honor, than an offer of proof. We have some testimony that came primarily from Mr. Weaver. Other agents had testified previously that in the preliminary work, investigating the tax problems of Elmer and Helen Remmer, that they had received fullest cooperation, in that Mr. Maundrell and Mr. Kyne and others turned over the books and records to them, and they also made statements and conferred with them on occasions, that they were required to. We have testimony, however, particularly from Mr. Weaver, to the effect that he was endeavoring to obtain a statement or have a conference with Mr. Remmer, the defendant, and that an arrangement was made to meet at Mr. Thatcher's office, Mr. John P. Thatcher being the one who attended to that arrangement, and that he appeared in Mr. Thatcher's office with certain other members of his staff, Mr. Morgan and Mr. Harkness and the young lady stenographer, and he contended at that time not only did Mr. Thatcher refuse to permit Mr. Remmer to confer or make a statement to him, but also Mr. Remmer specifically himself—Mr. Weaver contending Mr. Remmer was present in Mr. Thatcher's office—refused to make a statement. Mr. Weaver didn't testify to the prepared statement that was handed to him by Mr. Thatcher.

Now we are prepared at this time to refute that particular testimony of Mr. Weaver's. We believe that we have refuted, by the testimony of Mr. Thatcher, the statement of Mr. Weaver and the contention that Mr. Remmer was actually present and in their presence at the time this refusal was made. We believe that that has been refuted by Mr. Thatcher, who said that in his opinion Mr. Remmer was not present in the office and never was in the presence of Mr. Weaver and the other agents.

The Court: Have you in mind the date of the conversation that was had with Mr. Thatcher?

Mr. Gillen: It was in April of 1948.

Then, if your Honor will recall, in Mr. Thatcher's testimony he stated that prior to the planned or agreed meeting of April 8, 1948, that he had an interview with Mr. Remmer and with Mr. Maundrell concerning the Remmer enterprises and that in anticipation that some situation might arise wherein the matter of fraud or criminal prosecution should be mentioned, as contemplated, that he had prepared in advance a statement which was offered here as Defendant's G-1, a typewritten statement, in which he, as attorney at that time for Mr. Remmer, or one of the attorneys at that time for Mr. Remmer, had expressed his position, and your Honor will recall, without taking the time to read the entire statement—I can hand it up to your Honor—Mr. Thatcher's written statement said that Mr. Remmer would explain any specific matters that the Bureau might state, if they would inform Mr. Thatcher what particular problems confronted them or they wanted clarified, because his personal investigation of the matter had not disclosed any fraud, and if they would inform Mr. Thatcher of any specific instances any items or accounts or circumstances they wanted clarified that they thought were tainted with the appearance of fraud, that he would have Mr. Remmer do that.

Now Mr. Golden will testify that the first that we were called into the matter and began to actively participate in the matter was when Mr. Remmer received, under date of February 14, 1950, from Mr. Campbell a letter, advising him that the office of Mr. Campbell had under consideration a recommendation involving the institution of criminal proceedings against Mr. Remmer for violation of the Internal Revenue laws, with respect to his income tax, and the letter also went on to say that "a conference will be granted at your request at a date agreeable to you," conference at Mr. Campbell's office.

Now Mr. Golden will testify that a conference was requested, and in fact more than one conference was had, and immediately Mr. Campbell advised Mr. Golden and specifically advised other counsel, including myself, that what he desired was a net worth statement from the taxpayer, Mr. Remmer. Mr. Golden would testify that he advised a net worth statement would be prepared and would be submitted to Mr. Campbell, but Mr. Golden pointed out that the plight of the defendant, Remmer, at the time was that all of his assets, including cash, had been levied upon under a so-called jeopardy assessment, that the amount of assessment was something in excess of 800 thousand dollars, and, of course, the property assessed was considerably short of 800 thousand dollars, but it did encompass and embrace all of the assets of the defendant, and Mr. Golden pointed out that in order to prepare a net worth statement, as good a net worth statement as could be prepared under the circumstances, it would be necessary to employ the services of certified public accountants, and in order to employ certified public accountants, it would be necessary to have funds to pay them, and Mr. Golden suggested that if there was some way of releasing part of the assets that were under assessment by the government under the jeopardy assessment, that Mr. Remmer would arrange to furnish a surety bond in the full amount of money that the government would release. There was an item, if I recall correctly, there was one asset in the form of $35,000 money that had come as part of the escrow money from the sale of Cal-Neva into the First National Bank of Nevada, and it was suggested by Mr. Golden that if $25,000 of that, or the entire $35,000 of it, could be released, that Mr. Remmer would furnish a surety bond from a regular surety company to insure the United States government against any loss for the amount that was released.

The testimony of Mr. Golden would show that Mr. Campbell told Mr. Golden that there were ways of getting funds released for just such purposes and referred him to a gentleman by the name of Nickell, who was Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue at San Francisco, and the testimony would show that Mr. Golden did communicate with Mr. Nickell immediately and Mr. Nickell verified the fact that there was a procedure for release of funds from jeopardy assessment for the purpose of enabling a taxpayer to prepare defense or to supply information to the government in connection with his tax problems and that the usual procedure was to have a surety bond, either in the amount to be released, or, depending on the discretion and judgment of the Collector of the particular district, twice the amount. In other words, if we wanted to withdraw 25 thousand dollars, depending upon the judgment and administrative discretion of the Collector of the district, he could order a 25 thousand dollar surety bond will suffice or he could say, "I want $50,000, twice the amount of money that I release."

Now Mr. Golden would testify that in contemplation of preparing such a net worth statement for Mr. Campbell, that it was discussed that the preparation of a net worth statement and the clarification of the affairs of Mr. Remmer for the government might very well solve the whole matter and obviate any necessity to go any further, excepting to make an adjustment under the civil claim of any unpaid tax that might be shown to be due. That in contemplation of that Mr. Golden engaged—because all the records were then in San Francisco in the hands of the government at 100 McAllister Street, I presume in the room Mr. Weaver mentioned—that Mr.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Golden had a Mr. Nathan Jay Friedman, a former Internal Revenue accountant, certified public accountant, who was at that time, and still is, in private practice as a certified public accountant in San Francisco, had him go and look at these records and make certain computations, determining what length of time and the amount of money it would take to properly investigate all of these records, with a view of preparing a net worth statement and furnishing it to Mr. Campbell.

Now, your Honor, it will be shown also by the testimony of Mr. Golden—it is my recollection your Honor stated that we would be permitted to that records other than the records produced here were in the hands of the government, and that we were permitted to see those records, that is, records in excess of what have been used here in this net worth matter. That Mr. Golden's testimony would also show the existence in the hands of the government of records that were never brought into this court and that were used in connection with the net worth theory that has been employed by the government in this case.

Now Mr. Golden's testimony would also show that in his conversation with Mr. Nickell, when Mr. Nickell informed him there were means provided for the release of assets that were under assessment, that the government would require a surety bond and that in all probability a surety company would require some collateral, and he wanted to know whether or not Mr. Remmer would be able to furnish some collateral. Mr. Golden will testify that he told Mr. Nickell that he was almost certain that Mr. William Remmer, the brother of Elmer Remmer, would supply any collateral required, but that he would confirm that with Mr. William Remmer. Mr. Golden will testify that upon being told by Mr. Nickell that the amount of surety bond would be left to the discretion of the Collector of the particular district, which in this district would have been Mr. Douglas, in the Nevada district, that Mr. Golden, after his interview in confirmation of these facts with Mr. Nickell, confirmed the fact that Mr. William Remmer would be willing to furnish collateral required by a surety company and then Mr. Golden did communicate with Mr. Douglas, the Collector for the Nevada District, and requested Mr. Douglas to advise him what bond he would require for the release of the $35,000 cash from the First National Bank of Nevada, that cash being money that was paid by the Adler interests to the First National Bank in connection with the purchase of Cal-Neva. There is correspondence available, but to give your Honor the sum and substance of it, Mr. Douglas stated that he would inquire into the problem, that he would advise Mr. Golden in the next day or two. If I recollect, this was not only a telephone call to Mr. Douglas, but also a letter to Mr. Douglas, and the next day or two, it would appear from Mr. Golden's testimony, and also supplemented by actual correspondence, Mr. Douglas advised by letter to Mr. Golden that they would release $35,000 for the purpose of enabling Mr.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Remmer to pay for accountants and so on, if Mr. Remmer would post a surety bond for the full amount of the lien existing, namely, in the amount of $867,373.52. If Mr. Remmer would post a surety bond in that amount, Mr. Douglas would release $35,000 in cash.

Mr. Golden's testimony would be that he brought it to the attention of the government that in order to obtain such a bond, namely an amount of 867 thousand dollars, that the surety company, any surety company would want collateral in the amount of 867 thousand dollars and that they would require a premium of ten per cent of the amount of the bond, which would be something in excess of 86 thousand dollars, so in other words, under that offer made by Mr. Douglas and the government, if Mr. Remmer wanted to get 35 thousand dollars in cash, he would have to give 867 thousand dollars in collateral and 86 thousand dollars in cash to pay the premium, to get 35 thousand dollars. Mr. Golden pointed out that that was not only impractical but impossible, and Mr. Golden's testimony would show that repeated efforts were made on the basis of supplying a surety bond to obtain the release of 35 thousand dollars, so that he could pay the expenses of investigation by accountants, and also that he could pay some attorneys' fees and some other attendant expenses that necessarily would arise under the circumstances, and in the event this money was made available, that an honest and earnest endeavor would be made to supply the government with as complete a net worth statement as could be gleaned from the records and prepared by competent certified public accountants.

Now Mr. Golden's testimony would show that this matter was carried to Washington, to Mr. Oliphant, who was the chief counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue at that time, it being called to our attention that insofar as any prosecution aspects of the case, that that belonged properly to the Department of Justice, and anything referring to payment of tax, release of funds under surety bond, properly belonged to the Treasury Department or the Internal Revenue, and Mr. Golden's testimony would show, your Honor—I am not now making formal offer of proof, I am merely explaining the testimony, the necessity of going into——

The Court: Haven't you made an offer of proof in all this time?

Mr. Gillen: I thought your Honor wanted to be informed.

The Court: I thought you were making an offer of proof.

Mr. Gillen: Well, your Honor, the record will show I initially told your Honor this was not by way of offer of proof, although I had to refer to testimony——

The Court (Interceding): I shouldn't have sat all this time listening if I thought it wasn't an offer of proof.

Mr. Gillen: I thought your Honor wanted an explanation of why Mr. Golden was on the stand and I think if your Honor will refer to my initial remarks, your Honor will see——

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court (Interceding): Well, I misunderstood you. We will call the jury in.

Mr. Gillen: What is the situation?

The Court: I don't know. I don't know what you have been talking about.

Mr. Gillen: You don't know what I am talking about?

The Court: No. I know what you are talking about, but I don't know the purpose if it is not an offer of proof.

Mr. Gillen: The purpose was, as I stated, and if your Honor did not so understand, I should have been stopped before I talked, I said initially——

The Court (Interceding): It is not an offer of proof?

Mr. Gillen: No.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Gillen: Does your Honor want me to make an offer of proof?

The Court: No.

Mr. Gillen: Well, then, we will only get into difficulties here, if your Honor hasn't learned anything from my actual——

The Court (Interceding): I don't want to place myself in the position of directing or suggesting to you how to carry on your case.

Mr. Gillen: Let me ask your Honor this—from what I have told your Honor, is it your Honor's opinion now that all of these matters that I referred to in refutation of the contention that there was no cooperation from this defendant, further than initially furnishing his books and records to the government, is irrelevant?

The Court: I don't see any occasion for ruling. There is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Gillen: Your Honor has been ruling on it. Might I point this out to your Honor——

The Court (Interceding): I only rule on questions.

Mr. Gillen: May I point this out to your Honor. You see my only thought is, if your Honor rules on a prior objection, and your Honor rules on then a considerable number of other questions that are to be asked and give rise to irritation on your Honor's part, I am deliberately disobeying orders——

The Court (Interceding): Let us call the jury. Do you want to go on?

Mr. Gillen: I want to make a further observation without any jury.

The Court: If you have a question to ask this witness, fine.

Mr. Gillen: All right, I want to make an offer of proof.

The Court: All right, make an offer of proof.

Mr. Gillen: I just wanted to tell your Honor——

The Court (Interceding): I don't want to hear.

Mr. Gillen: How can your Honor possibly rule if you don't know what I am talking about? How does your Honor know, how can you know my contentions——

The Court (Interceding): I am not going to hear your contentions until they come up in the orderly process of procedure. What is there before the Court here?

Mr. Gillen: There is this before the Court: I have told you that I am attempting to refute the testimony that gives an impression of guilt.

The Court: Just a minute—has there been a question propounded to which an objection has been made and the ruling still pending?

Mr. Gillen: Was there a question that I asked that was material——

The Court (Interceding): Just answer this question. Is there a question now pending before this Court on an objection?

Mr. Gillen: No, there isn't, I don't think.

The Court: Very well. Is there an offer of proof pending before the Court?

Mr. Gillen: Well, I will make an offer of proof.

The Court: Very well, I will be glad to hear it.

Mr. Gillen: If your Honor won't listen to anything else, I am compelled to make an offer of proof.

The Court: I would like to hear it.

Mr. Gillen: But I would like your Honor to receive that verified testimony to refute that evidence, insinuations of guilt.

The Court: If you want to make an offer of proof; otherwise I won't.

Mr. Gillen: All right. I might say that Mr. Golden's testimony would be quite lengthy and the offer of proof would take some little time.

The Court: All right, proceed.

Mr. Gillen: I do not know whether your Honor would want to dismiss the jury until this afternoon, because I think it will take better than half an hour.

(Jury returned into court, admonished and excused at 11:20. Five-minute recess.)

(Defendant present.)

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, I wonder whether this would be a proper time to take up the other matter you had in mind this morning regarding the bond, the subpoena from California.

The Court: You mean about that subpoena in San Francisco?

Mr. Thompson: Yes.

The Court: Well, I heard from the newspapers, of course, that the defendant had been subpoenaed to appear in another court as a witness, in the United States District Court for the Northern District of California.

Mr. Gillen: We spoke to your Honor about that matter this morning.

The Court: What do you have in mind that we should take up at this time, Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: I understood you made a suggestion to defense counsel regarding bond for production of the defendant.

The Court: I am going to make an order at each adjournment.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, I heartily agree with that, and I might state to your Honor that we were, and I believe as the close of the day approached, to send a wire to the United States District Judge, advising him of our predicament as to the appearance of the witness and as to two or three exhibits that were called for, and we were going to send that wire Tuesday or Wednesday to Judge Lemmon. We did not know until we saw in the paper this morning what district judge was going to participate at that trial.

The Court: So there is nothing to worry about at this time?

Mr. Gillen: No, your Honor.

Now, may it please your Honor, in the interest of your Honor's time—everybody's time—may it be stipulated and agreed that all of the references that I have made by way of explanation to your Honor just before the recess, regarding testimony that would be given by Mr. Golden, be included and embraced in, by reference, the offer of proof that I now ask permission to make.

Mr. Thompson: That is satisfactory, your Honor.

The Court: Well, it will be so understood that the statement made in regard to Mr. Golden's testimony will be reinstated. This order I made to strike will be vacated.

Mr. Gillen: And it will be included in my offer of proof and I will go on from there, not to take up too much time.

The Court: All right, go ahead.

Mr. Gillen: Shall I proceed then?

The Court: Yes, sir.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Gillen: Mr. Golden will testify, your Honor, that at the request of Mr. Golden in the month of May, 1950, there was held an informal conference, at which conference were present Mr. Campbell, Mr. Brady, and Mr. Weaver for the government; Mr. Golden for the defendant, and Mr. Nathan Jay Friedman, the certified public accountant, who has heretofore been referred to, and that Mr. Campbell at that time advised Mr. Golden that the government contended that there were understated for 1945, 265 thousand odd dollars and there was contention of understatement for 1946, in amount of 190 thousand dollars and that those figures were obtained from the figures that were to be used in the civil claim for the payment of taxes against Mr. Remmer, and Mr. Campbell stated at that conference that if a criminal prosecution were determined upon, that the government would use the net worth theory of attempting to arrive at any increase in net worth of the defendant for the years involved. Mr. Campbell said that this might be obviated and the problem solved by the supplying by the defendants of a net worth statement and that Mr. Golden at that time stated that in order to give a net worth statement, that money would be needed for the purpose of hiring accountants; and then we might pick up what I mentioned to your Honor about the verification of Mr. Nickell, also of Mr. Douglas and also of Mr. Oliphant, concerning the release of funds to pay expenses of preparing a net worth statement.

Now Mr. Golden would testify that Mr. Friedman, at Mr. Golden's request, did make a survey of the Remmer records, either personally or by means of some other account employed by him, at 100 McAllister Street, the government office where the records were, and that Mr. Friedman gave an estimate, or attempted to determine the amount of time and the cost of a complete, comprehensive survey, in order to be able to try to prepare a net worth statement. There was a formal conference, Mr. Golden will testify, in the month of October, 1950, at 100 McAllister Street. Present were the same people, each time, including in that conference Mr. Shelton in addition to the people named before; namely, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Weaver, Mr. Brady and Mr. Shelton was there. Mr. Golden will testify that at that conference Mr. Golden pointed out to Mr. Campbell that in his opinion Mr. Remmer was being put at a great disadvantage, that no money was released from his assets in order to enable him to prepare a defense against any contemplated action, or defense against any civil claim, and also the defense could not find out what the case was about, what points the government contended were to be frowned upon, and no progress had been made and the records were unavailable, in fact, that they were all in the government's office and the accounts were only able to go up to the government office and work at certain hours on those records. Mr. Golden would testify that Mr. Campbell said, "If you can get a net worth statement, I will try and help you on the matter of release of some funds," and Mr. Golden said, "It is developing into a vicious circle and I don't know how we can get a net worth statement without having money to employ people who can prepare a net worth statement," and explained to Mr. Campbell we were not accountants and were babes in the woods so far as preparing a net worth statement and the matter of a net worth statement was one for an accountant and no statement could possibly be obtained without money. Mr. Golden would also testify that he then asked Mr. Campbell if Mr. Campbell would agree to postpone any further action in the matter until the end of the year and Mr. Golden would determine what possibly could be done in the way of raising funds for the purpose of trying to supply the government with a net worth statement, in the hope of satisfying the government there was no fraud in the case. Mr. Campbell agreed to postpone further action or hold in abeyance until the end of the year. This was the hearing in October.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Now subsequent to that time Mr. Friedman made an estimate that satisfied him that it would require a substantial amount of money and because of the lack of funds, Mr. Friedman withdrew and notified the government that he was withdrawing as an accountant in the case. Mr. Golden will testify that on December 11, 1950, Mr. Campbell phoned him and told him that now the government had decided to include the year 1944, although previously Mr. Golden had been assured the year 1944, was not involved, and Mr. Campbell pointed out that since the statute would run in March of 1951—Mr.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Campbell was under the impression, and so stated, that the statute would run on March 15, 1951. However—I know what is bothering Mr. Shelton—it was later learned that the statute would not run out until April 13, 1951, the reason being it developed that in the year 1944, a 30-day extension had been granted by the government. Instead of demanding Mr. Remmer be required to pay the tax on March 15th, we were granted an extension until April 15th and the tax was paid April 13th, which extended their period for that number of days. However, Mr. Campbell was initially under the impression the statute would run on the year 1944, on March 15, 1951. Mr. Campbell referred in that telephone conversation with Mr. Golden to the possibility of obtaining a net worth statement and Mr. Golden told Mr. Campbell, and will so testify, that at that time he advised Mr. Campbell that the defendant was in much the same position he had originally been in—it was a matter of attempting to obtain funds for the purpose of hiring accountants to make the net worth appraisal.

In January of 1951—I might state to your Honor this is the original correspondence here, so far as government letters are concerned, carbon copies so far as our correspondence with the government is concerned—Mr. Campbell advised Mr. Golden in person—Mr. Golden had gone to Mr. Campbell's office—that the case was being sent to Washington with a recommendation for consideration and determination of some disposition. This statement on the part of Mr. Campbell to Mr. Golden was confirmed by a letter.

On February 8th, and for several days thereafter, Mr. Golden will testify that Mr. Gillen, his associate, was in the East on another matter and during his visit there went and obtained an interview with representatives of the Department of Justice and of the Treasury Department, and the purpose of this interview was primarily to request that the year 1944, be omitted, upon the grounds that initially the defendant and defense counsel had been advised that the year 1944, was not involved and that any plans or attempts to prepare a defense had omitted the year 1944, and also the further ground that if the year 1944, were omitted, that would afford the defendant further time to supply a net worth statement, because then the first year in question would be the year 1945, and the statute would not run on the year 1945, until 1952, so that there would be ample time for the defendant to make efforts to accumulate some means of preparing for his defense and furnish the government with a net worth statement, and also at that time Mr. Gillen requested a conference at a future date; that the office of Gillen and Golden wrote for conferences upon the return of Mr. Gillen to both departments, requesting the Justice Department to afford us a conference on the merits of the case itself and requesting the Treasury Department to afford us a conference on the matter of releasing some funds from the assets that were tied up in Nevada, in order to enable the defendant to prepare his case.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Both departments agreed to grant conferences and set dates. The initial date, if I recollect, was March 16th, it having been learned in the interim that the statute for the year 1944, would not expire until April 13th, because of the 30-day extension that had been granted in allowing payment of tax.

Now at this point and approximately at this time the lawyer, Spurgeon Avakian, through personal friendship with Mr. Gillen and with Mr. Golden, was prevailed upon to enter the case as technical tax lawyer, although no fee arrangement could be made with him at that time. In other words, Mr. Golden will testify that the predicament of the defendant from a financial standpoint was made clear to Mr. Avakian and he was prevailed upon, through personal friendship with Mr. Golden and myself, to enter the case, and that he was prevailed upon also to go with Mr. Gillen to Washington to attend the two conferences that were heretofore mentioned.

Mr. Golden will testify, and would offer in support thereof correspondence, to the effect that the two conferences were postponed from March 16th to March 21st and that Mr. Gillen and Mr. Avakian made plane reservations with the United Air Lines to fly to Washington, D. C., in time for the conferences on March 21st and also made reservations at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D. C., for accommodations during their stay there, and that on March 14th, 1951, at five o'clock on the night of that day, there was filed in Washington and received in San Francisco at 5:41 p.m., the following telegram: (Reads.) And thereafter the conference with the Treasury Department, concerning the release of funds, was likewise cancelled.

Now the testimony of Mr. Golden will further show that at about that time Mr. Golden was serving in the United States Army for the period of time required for commissioned reserve officers to serve, and that on March 28th there was arranged to have a meeting with Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Golden was in uniform at the time, appeared at the meeting—had gotten leave from the army—which was between Mr. Campbell, Mr. Gillen, Mr. Golden and Mr. Avakian—that was on March 28th—that we at that time informed Mr. Campbell that the scheduled conference at Washington had been arbitrarily and suddenly cancelled and that we were still in the same predicament that we were, that no conference had been held, and asking him what his information was and what he contemplated would happen and what possibility there was for us getting funds for the defendant, in order to prepare a net worth statement, and Mr. Campbell at that time said if we gave him a present net worth statement that he would recommend that some funds be released, but that it was not up to him whether or not funds would be released. The attorneys for the defense present pointed out again we were faced with a vicious circle, that we were unable without financial assistance to engage the services of people who could prepare a net worth statement and that, therefore, we did not know just exactly what could be done.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: We will take a recess at this time before you go into another subject and I am going to make an order now that the defendant be, and appear in this court room for resumption of this trial at one o'clock, and that the defendant be and appear at all future sessions of this court in the case of the United States of America vs. Elmer F. Remmer, No. 12,177, as such sessions shall occur, and that he will remain under the jurisdiction of this Court and not depart from the jurisdiction of this Court from the present time until the conclusion of this trial, or until the further order of this Court.

I think that would obviate the necessity of making the order at each succeeding session.

Mr. Gillen: I believe so, your Honor.

The Court: Remember the order that he is not to leave the jurisdiction of this court, and, of course, the purpose of this is the things that we have heard in the last few days, and that is the only reason I am making these orders.

Mr. Gillen: I understand. I think that covers the situation.

(Recess taken at 11:45 a.m.)

Monday, February 11, 1952—Afternoon Session
1:00 P.M.

(Defendant present.)

The Court: I want to get the benefit of counsel's views on some matters which are running through my mind in regard to this subpoena situation. Now it is a situation that is a novel one with me, to say the least. I have never encountered one similar to it and I don't propose willingly, or by failure to take any action which I might be authorized to take, to permit this trial to be interrupted by taking of the defendant out of the jurisdiction of this court and placing him in San Francisco in response to that subpoena. Now we may strike some difficulties or encounter them, and I want you to know that I am going to take any action that appears to me to be available to prevent that thing and I hope I can find some way of doing it without an inconvenience to the defendant, but if my only resort is some action that is an inconvenience to the defendant, if that is the only thing I can do, I am going to do it.

Mr. Gillen: As I see the whole picture, it is jurisdictional that the defendant be present at his own trial. That case started before this other case commenced and is still in progress and the defendant should remain here at all times in this matter at all sessions in this case, until ultimately acquitted by the verdict or discharge of the jury for any other reasons. Now it strikes me the position of the court in the Northern Division of California simply is that the man is on trial and unavailable as a witness at this time. However, as a matter of courtesy, the Court should be formally advised of it and we have a telegram prepared, which we determined is a little early to send until we observe the outcome of this matter. It would seem to me—of course, this trial is just starting and it will be some days before they conclude the prosecution's case—I do feel that perhaps if your Honor employed the informal means of communicating yourself with Judge Lemmon, that would materially assist the entire matter. We would supplement that with a telegram so that it would be on record, but the defendant is jurisdictionally required to be here and under the circumstances, of course, it would seem to me if his testimony was absolutely imperative to the prosecution's case down there, that they could even resort to a deposition up here or they could interrupt the trial down there for a day or two until he was available. Now I do not think any should disturb the procedure of the trial in this court. I agree with your Honor that it shouldn't. Now the defendant is here, attending every session of this trial of his own case and I believe there would be no difficulty encountered, particularly if your Honor was to communicate with Judge Lemmon. It might be that Mr. Thompson would call Mr. Tramutolo's office.

The Court: I believe I will call and if I do not have an assurance tonight that a demand will not be made to enforce the presence of this defendant there, I am going to take some action of my own.

Mr. Gillen: I do not know what action your Honor contemplates.

The Court: It may be a little bit drastic for the defendant, but I am going to take it because I am not going to sit idly by and allow this person interferred with by the United States attorney for the Northern District of California or by any member of the Court down there.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Gillen: Well, here is the situation. There is no question in your Honor's mind that the defendant will appear at all callings of the case. The defendant has a large bail posted here.

The Court: What would happen in the event he did not appear Friday and was cited for contempt?

Mr. Gillen: He would have to fix that down there.

The Court: I may require a new bond to the effect that he remain at all times in the jurisdiction of this court.

Mr. Gillen: He is subject to that on his own bond. If he violates it, he would forfeit his bond.

The Court: That is what I had in mind when I said it might inconvenience the defendant. I will require a new bond and have to have inserted to the effect that he shall not leave the jurisdiction of this court during the progress of this trial. I do not know what is going to happen, but I do not want to catch counsel by surprise. I want them to know what I am thinking about.

Mr. Gillen: Of course, your Honor, the defendant can not help being subpoenaed by another court. Suppose a man was lying in bed with a body cast, then what could they do about it. They would have to come up and take his deposition.

The Court: I am somewhat surprised they would have a subpoena served under the conditions. They know this trial is in progress. I am a little surprised the Department of Justice in California would reach out and take the defendant out of this court when he was on trial.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: I hope your Honor will not act hastily to the detriment and inconvenience of the defendant in this case.

The Court: The defendant is absolutely innocent of being involved in this situation, he can not help that, but I am going to take any step that occurs to me necessary to prevent an interruption of this trial and I want to tell you I have in mind, if it becomes necessary, to require a new bond with the expressed condition in it that this defendant does not leave this jurisdiction, unless I am assured that the authorities there, the United States attorney's office and the judge of the court there, do not intend to insist on his presence there Friday.

Mr. Gillen: Of course, I don't know where a new bond would make any difference. The only thing I can see in this instance, if they wanted to arbitrarily in California fine him for contempt. I know Judge Lemmon and have tried many cases before him. I do not anticipate Judge Lemmon, if acquainted with the circumstances, would be arbitrary at this time. I do not anticipate any trouble from Judge Lemmon.

The Court: I do not think the judge will be arbitrary but I don't appreciate the fact that the attorney representing the government would subpoena Mr. Remmer under these circumstances for a time that his trial is in progress and I know they must have known that.

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, I would like to suggest that neither Mr. Tramutolo or the assistant handling the case or myself could have said actually on what date Mr. Remmer would be available and the service of the subpoena does not indicate any indication on their part to interfere with the trial of this case. As a matter of fact they did not telephone me—I don't know whether they telephoned anybody else connected with the government's staff, but if they had, I would not have been able to tell them whether or not Mr. Remmer would be available Friday, next Monday, next Tuesday or any particular time. I do not think any criticism should be directed toward them. They merely served the subpoena, which must be responded to as required, but if it is not responded to, it will be for good legal cause.

Mr. Gillen: I think so, your Honor and, of course, I think your Honor knows we wanted this subpoena served on Mr. Remmer as much as we wanted the measles.

The Court: I know that. I think it might wait until tomorrow. I really don't know what to do, but that is one of the things I might have to do. I am going to take any means possible to prevent the defendant from being absent from this trial.

Mr. Gillen: I can assure your Honor he will not be absent from this trial.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, I can very rapidly conclude this offer of proof. The witness, Golden, would testify that following the conference in Mr. Pike's office in Nevada and following the return of the indictment against this defendant on April 9, 1951, to surrender the defendant on April

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

10, 1951, that in the month of September of 1951, Mr. Semenza, the certified public accountant of Reno, Nevada, was prevailed upon, without the defendant or the defense counsel being able to make any financial or fee arrangement with him, was prevailed upon to undertake the accounting task in the case and he requested that he have certain records and that attorneys Avakian and Golden communicated with Mr. Campbell, requesting that those records be turned over to Mr. Semenza. That these records that Mr. Semenza found necessary to have were records concerning various enterprises in which Mr. Remmer had an interest, which have been mentioned here and, also, of course, of the various enterprises and those books and accounts and records were then and at that time in the hands of the government departments, and in response to the request that those records be turned over to Mr. Semenza, so he could do the accounting task necessary to the defense of this case, Mr. Campbell refused, but said that if two conditions were met he would consider making the records available, the conditions being (1) that the defense make a proper showing of Mr. Remmer's interest in the records and books of account, and (2) that the defense should furnish him with written consent of the third parties from whom certain of the records were obtained; and third, he declined to give the names of those third parties from whom certain of the records were obtained.

That, I believe, your Honor, would conclude the offer of proof of testimony that would be given by the witness, John Golden, who is on the witness stand.

Afternoon Session—February 11, 1952

(Defendant present with counsel.)

(Presence of the jury and alternate jurors stipulated.)

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, in view of your Honor's ruling on the offer of proof, the defense has no further questions of Mr. Golden.

Mr. Thompson: We have no cross-examination.

The Court: You may be excused.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, the defendant will call as its next witness Mr. Lawrence J. [2707] Semenza.

LAWRENCE J. SEMENZA

a witness on behalf of the defendant, having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Avakian:

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, later on in Mr. Semenza's testimony the defense proposes to offer in evidence a rather lengthy statement of 21 pages and I thought perhaps, since the prosecution will undoubtedly want to have some of their accountants examine that, also before your Honor rules on the offer, it might save time if I could hand a copy not only to government counsel but perhaps the agents to whom they might want to refer to the matter so they could examine it. I will have that marked and hand a copy to them.

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Mr. Semenza, have you prepared a certain set of documents setting forth accounting analysis of the evidence in this case? A. I have.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, I will ask that the document handed me by the witness, consisting of 21 pages, bound together with a gray manila folder and entitled, "Elmer F. and Helen Remmer Accounting Statements Prepared by Lawrence J. Semenza," be marked at this time for identification as the defendant's next exhibit.

Q. With that exception you have been continuous? A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, are you acquainted with the defendant in this case, Elmer F. Remmer?

A. I am.

Q. Can you tell us approximately how long you have been acquainted with him?

A. Approximately 20 years.

Q. Have you, in your professional capacity as a certified public accountant, ever done any accounting work for him? A. Not directly.

Q. Have you done any work as an accountant for any corporation in which he has been a stockholder? A. Yes.

Q. Will you state which one?

A. Cal-Neva, Inc.

Q. That is a corporation which was at one time owner and operator of a resort known as Cal-Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe? [2714] A. It is.

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Approximately during what period of time were you the accountant for that corporation?

A. Approximately from 1931 on.

Q. Until when? A. The time it was sold.

Q. And that would be to 1948 or 1949?

A. That is correct.

Q. And during that time was Mr. Remmer the active manager of that business? A. He was.

Q. Now, subsequent to the sale of Cal-Neva in 1948 or 1949, have you done any work as an accountant in connection with the personal income tax matters of Mr. Remmer? A. I have.

Q. Will you state when you first commenced doing that type of work?

A. In the summer of 1949 I was engaged by the firm of Thatcher, Woodburn and Forman to assist them in the preparation of petition to the Tax Court, covering certain proposed assessments of income tax against Mr. and Mrs. Remmer.

Q. And can you state the tax years that were involved in that case?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained. [2715]

Q. Were the tax years involved in that case, did they include the years 1944, 1945 and 1946?

A. They did.

Q. And you said that you were engaged for the purpose of assisting the firm of Thatcher, Woodburn and Forman in preparing a petition to be filed with the Tax Court, and is that case in the Tax Court still pending?

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: Objected on the ground it is irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Well, since 1949 have you still been engaged in accounting aspects of that Tax Court matter?

Mr. Thompson: Same objection.

The Court: Same ruling.

Mr. Avakian: Well, your Honor, if I understand the basis of the ruling——

The Court: It is immaterial.

Mr. Avakian: Well, I think it is material.

The Court: Well, you and I disagree.

Mr. Avakian: Well, I can't explain my views to you?

The Court: No, no.

Mr. Avakian: Very well.

Q. Now, have you at any time engaged in any accounting work in connection with criminal tax charges which have been brought against Mr. Remmer with respect to the years 1944, 1945 and [2716] 1946? A. I have.

Q. And will you state when you became engaged in that work? When did you commence that phase of the work?

A. It was in the month of October, 1951.

Q. Will you state who engaged your services at that time? A. Mr. John Golden.

Q. And for the purpose of indentification, that is the Mr. Golden who sits at the defense counsel table in this case? A. It is.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Now, prior to the time that you were engaged by Mr. Golden to work on the criminal aspect of the case, did you at any time have any conferences with a special agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue by the name of Ray Weaver?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: Answer the question yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. Will you state approximately when you had the first such conference?

A. Oh, I would think it would be in say 1948.

Q. And calling your attention specifically to the date of July 11, 1949, did you have a conference with Mr. Weaver on that date? [2717]

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where was that conference held?

A. In his office in San Francisco.

Q. And that is located at 100 McAllister Street?

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Semenza, to prosecution's Exhibit No. 70, which you have previously identified in this case, as a list of records which were turned over to you by Mr. Weaver on July 11, 1949, and I will ask you to look at that and tell me whether the conference which you have just mentioned on July 11, 1949, was connected with the giving to Mr. Weaver by you of the receipt which you hold in your hand? A. It was.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And did you at that time obtain from Mr. Weaver's possession various books and records that are mentioned in Exhibit 70? A. I did.

Q. Now, that was on July 11, 1949, and was your obtaining of those books in connection with the matter pending in the Tax Court at that time?

A. It was.

Q. And did you state to Mr. Weaver the purpose for which you desired to examine those books?

A. Well, probably, generally.

Q. And would you state, to the best of your recollection, [2718] what you stated to him?

A. Well, Mr. Weaver informed me that there were other records available besides those listed here and I told him at the time that I would be unable to take all of them, that I could only make a general examination of the records, we only had a limited time in which to prepare this petition; consequently I did not want all of the records at that time.

Q. Did you see generally other records in Mr. Weaver's possession at that time relating to the various enterprises in which Mr. Remmer had interests?

A. There were other records there in the room, a number of boxes.

Q. Will you state approximately how many boxes of those records there were, aside from the documents which you took away with you?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial, has nothing to do with the issues before the Court.

Mr. Avakian: May I be h rd before your Honor rules on that question, unless your Honor is satisfied——

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. There were a number of boxes there, five or six boxes, I would say, at least.

Q. And did Mr. Weaver make any statement to you as to whether or not the additional records in those other five or six boxes would be available to you for future examination if you [2719] desired?

A. Yes, he indicated I would be able to have access to them.

Q. Now, did you, immediately following that conference with Mr. Weaver, take the records mentioned on Exhibit 70 to Reno?

A. Yes, I took them in my own car and returned with them.

Q. And did you immediately thereafter make any examination of those records? A. We did.

Q. When you say "we," state whom you mean?

A. My office staff and myself.

Q. Were you working in conjunction with any one else at that time?

A. At that time I was working with Mr. Thatcher.

Q. And that was in connection with this civil Tax Court case that you mentioned? A. It was.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Would you state the accounting purpose of the examination you made at that time?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: Could I be heard on that, your Honor?

The Court: No.

Q. Could you state approximately how long it was after July 11, 1949, that you completed the examination which you were making at that time of the records and books mentioned on [2720] Exhibit 70?

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection.

The Court: I can't see where it is material.

Mr. Avakian: The materiality is this—I want to show by this witness, first of all that there are many books and records never produced in court by the prosecution, and secondly, the examination made at that time of the records which were turned over to him was for a limited purpose, which was in effect for a short time only and was not connected with the criminal charges in this trial, as bearing, your Honor, on the question of (1) the adequacy of the records maintained, and (2) the opportunity given to the representatives of the defendant to examine the records of these enterprises which had been turned over to the government. All those issues, I think, have been injected into this trial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Did you at some subsequent time turn the

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

documents and books mentioned on Exhibit 70 over to another accountant?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as already asked and answered. We are going over ground that was covered early in December with this witness.

The Court: He has already testified to these matters.

Mr. Avakian: Well, I don't recall just what testimony Mr. Thompson has in mind.

The Court: You may answer this [2721] question.

A. Yes, I turned them over to another accountant.

Q. Can you state who that accountant was?

A. Nathan Jay Friedman of San Francisco.

Q. Was Mr. Friedman likewise working on the matter in conjunction with Mr. Golden?

A. He was.

Q. And the records were turned over to him because they related to San Francisco enterprises?

A. That is true.

Q. Now, you said that approximately in October, of 1951, you were engaged by Mr. Golden to work on the accounting aspects of the criminal charges which had been brought against Mr. Remmer for the years 1944, 1945 and 1946. Did you at that time make any further examination of the books and records which are mentioned on Exhibit 70?

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection, it is immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: Could I have the opportunity of explaining to your Honor the materiality of this?

The Court: Let us proceed.

Mr. Avakian: I have this in mind; in direct examination counsel were permitted to state the exhaustive——

The Court: The ruling will stand.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, are the books and documents which are [2722] mentioned in Exhibit 70 all in evidence here in this case? A. They are.

Q. Are there books and records of the various enterprises, in which Mr. Remmer had an interest and which have been mentioned in this trial here, are there books and records of those enterprises which Mr. Weaver had in his possession in July of 1949, which have not been presented in evidence here?

Mr. Thompson: I make the same objection, immaterial, calls for the witness' conclusion.

The Court: Well, the objection will be overruled.

A. There are.

Q. And have you ever, Mr. Semenza, examined those books and records which were in Mr. Weaver's possession then and which you state are not in evidence here? A. I did not.

Q. Now, did you, Mr. Semenza, request that arrangements be made for you to examine those other books and records in doing your accounting work in preparation for this trial?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to on the ground it calls for hearsay. He says did he request. Our attention is not directed to any particular conversation, who was present.

The Court: You may answer the question yes or no. A. I did.

Q. Were you ever shown any of those other books and records? A. I was not. [2723]

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, would you state whether, from an accounting point of view, it is customary to examine all books, records and other documents of an accounting nature, in making an income tax analysis of the income of a particular business?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to, if the Court please, upon the ground it is incompetent, it is immaterial what is customary. So far as accounting procedure, if this witness is to testify to any matters germane to this case, his answer will be based upon the books and evidence before the Court.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, that is an important point I understood your Honor said we could go into as part of the defense. You recall the prosecution witness said the books and records were inadequate. We would like to show the adequacy can not be determined unless they were all looked into.

The Court: We have evidence this witness has never seen these records.

Mr. Avakian: As I say, under proper accounting you do not determine whether the books are adequate until you look at all, you have to look at all of them.

The Court: I still think it would be immaterial.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

An answer from this witness would not indicate the very thing you are asking about had not been done.

Mr. Avakian: No, your Honor, it would be in direct refutation of testimony of the prosecution witness that the records [2724] are inadequate.

The Court: The ruling will stand.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, on approximately December 7th or 8th, 1951, either one, the books and records which are mentioned on Exhibit 70, which you hold in your hand, were deposited with the clerk of this court by the defense, pursuant to the order of the Court. Had you at that time completed your examination of those books and records?

A. I had not.

Q. And have you subsequently made further examination of those books and records while they have been in custody of the clerk here in court?

A. I have.

Q. And have you heard or read the transcript of all of the testimony given by the witnesses in this case? A. I have.

Q. You have been present during most of the trial personally? A. I have.

Q. And as to the days you were not present, you have read the transcript? A. Yes.

Q. And have you personally examined all of the documentary evidence which has been introduced in this case? A. I have.

Q. And have you made an examination of all of the testimony [2725] and all of the documentary evidence in this case for the purpose of making an accounting analysis of the net income of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the years 1944, 1945, and 1946?

A. I have.

Q. And have you prepared a written report, setting forth the analysis which you have made?

A. I have prepared statements.

Q. And those are contained in the 21-page document which has been identified as defendant's Exhibit M-1? A. They are.

Q. And in preparing those accounting statements, have you given consideration to all of the testimony and all of the documentary evidence in this case? A. I have.

Q. And have you limited yourself to the testimony and the evidence which has been introduced in this case? A. I have.

Q. And does defendant's Exhibit M-1 represent, to the best of your knowledge and ability the accounting analysis of the testimony and documentary evidence in this case with respect to the subject matters that are in the statement? A. Yes.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, at this time we would like to offer defendant's Exhibit M-1 for identification in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, I request an opportunity to [2726] read it. It may take some time.

The Court: Yes. Have we reached a stage where it will require some time for the examination of that document?

Mr. Avakian: I was going to suggest this. Perhaps we can defer your Honor's ruling on this matter and I can examine as to other matters until the customary recess time and then counsel can examine the document during recess. Will that be satisfactory?

Mr. Thompson: Satisfactory with me.

The Court: Very well.

Q. In your practice as a certified public accountant during the past 20 years or so, have you done accounting work for partnerships, Mr. Semenza?

A. I have.

Q. And I take it also for individuals and corporations? A. That is true.

Q. And can you give us an idea as to whether or not your experience with partnership accounting has been limited or extensive?

A. It is extensive.

Q. Have you had partnership accounts continuously during the entire period of your practice?

A. A large number of them.

Q. And have you prepared a large number of partnership income [2727] tax returns?

A. I have.

Q. And are you familiar with the accounting practices and procedures relative to the preparation of partnership returns and relating to the preparation of financial statements for partnerships?

A. I am.

Q. Have you, Mr. Semenza, in your experience as an accountant, encountered the situation of a partnership in which one partner contributed the initial capital investment for the partnership under an agreement, whereby the other partner or partners would build up their capital investment in the partnership by leaving a portion of their profits in the business?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to on the ground it is immaterial whether he encountered these problems in his business.

Mr. Avakian: It is preliminary, your Honor, to lay the foundation for a question. I just want to establish his familiarity with partnerships.

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. I have.

Q. Can you give us any idea as to whether your familiarity with that problem has been limited or extensive?

Mr. Thompson: Same objection.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: It asks for the scope of his experience. [2728]

Mr. Thompson: It calls for conclusion.

Mr. Avakian: I want to find out whether he has a limited experience or extensive.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Mr. Semenza, in determining the portion of the profits of a partnership, which the individual partners should report in their individual income tax returns, is it proper and customary accounting procedure to base that on their share of the profits, or is that based on the amount of money that each particular partner withdraws from the business during the year?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It is based on the distributive share and not the amount of withdrawal by the partner.

Q. Will you state what you mean by the term "distributive share"?

A. Well, the profit of the partnership is determined and then the shares of each partner of that total profit is determined and that is the amount that each partner must report in their individual income tax return.

Q. Does the amount that is actually withdrawn during the year by each partner have any bearing on the amount upon which the partner has to pay income tax? A. No.

Q. And will you state whether or not in the case of partnerships it frequently occurs that partners actually draw from [2729] the business amounts which are different from their share of the profits?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial what happens in other partnerships.

The Court: Let me have the question?

(Question read.)

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: The purpose of that question is to refute the contention of the government that because there were unequal drawings from the business they actually were not partnerships. We want to show that this is a customary happening, in the field of partnerships. There is nothing unusual about that, so the jury may have a proper setting

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

in which to determine what inference it should or should not draw.

The Court: Let me have the question again?

(Question read.)

The Court: You may answer.

A. Yes.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, from an accounting point of view, can you state how the partner's share of the profits and the partner's capital investment in a partnership business are customarily recorded on the books of the partners?

A. The end of an accounting period, if a partnership realizes a profit, the partnership part of the credit is credited to the partner's capital. [2730]

Q. What is done with respect to any drawings?

A. Any drawings during the year would be charged to the partner's capital account.

Q. And what does the balance of any particular account represent?

A. Net investment of the partner in the partnership.

Q. So if the partner fails to withdraw his profits, then the balance of his account, showing his investment in the partnership, is increased by that amount? A. That is correct.

Q. And any amount that he withdraws then reduces the balance of his investment in the business?

A. That is true.

Q. And is the term "capital account" used to designate, in accounting terminology, the credits and charges to the account of the particular partner in the business?

A. The net investment of the partner in the business.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, I am going to call your attention to prosecution's Exhibit 173, which is an exchange of correspondence between Mr. Weaver and yourself in October and November of 1949, and direct your attention particularly to the reference in that correspondence to a credit in the books of Cal-Neva, Inc., to the account of Elmer F. Remmer, in the amount of 50 thousand dollars in September of 1946, and also to a deposit of 50 thousand dollars in Cal-Neva Lodge account [2731] in the First National Bank of Nevada on September 28, 1946, and I am going to ask you whether, subsequent to the date of the correspondence in Exhibit 173, you made any further investigation with respect to that item of 50 thousand dollars? Answer that yes or no.

A. Yes.

Q. I call your attention to defense Exhibit A-1, which is a promissory note dated September 27, 1946, in amount of 50 thousand dollars, from Elmer F. Remmer to Robert L. Jeffress, and I will ask you whether or not you saw that document any time prior to its introduction in evidence in this trial?

A. I did.

Q. Would you state when it was that you first saw that document?

A. Some time in the year 1950.

Q. And can you tell us what part of the year it was?

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It was in the first half of the year.

Q. And where was it that you saw that document?

A. It was delivered to me by Robert Jeffress in my office.

Q. In Reno? A. That's right.

Q. And by Robert Jeffress you refer to the late Robert Jeffress, whose widow was on the stand here last Friday? A. I do.

Q. Were you personally acquainted with him during his lifetime? [2732] A. I was.

Q. And prior to the time that he delivered that document to your office, had you had any conversation with Mr. Jeffress regarding the note? Will you answer that question yes or no? A. Yes.

Q. Now, when Mr. Jeffress brought that note to your office in the early part of 1950, did he leave it at your office at that time or did he take it away with him? A. He left it in my office.

Q. Approximately how long did that note remain in your possession?

A. Until about November of 1951.

Q. And did you turn it over to some one else at that time?

A. I turned it over to Mr. Golden at that time.

Q. And that is John R. Golden, the defense counsel? A. It is.

Q. And it was in your possession continuously during the interim? A. It was.

Q. At the time Mr. Jeffress delivered that note to you, did you have any conversation with him with respect to the date of payment of the note, if any? A. I did.

Q. And what was that conversation? [2733]

RE: SEMENZA'S CONVERSATION WITH MR. JEFFRESS

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, in connection with the objection that has been made and sustained, we would like to make an offer at this time of proof by this witness to the effect that the witness would testify at the time Robert L. Jeffress delivered possession of defendant's Exhibit A-1 to Mr. Semenza in the early part of 1950, Mr. Semenza asked Mr. Jeffress if the note had been repaid and if so when, and Mr. Jeffress stated to Mr. Semenza that the note had been repaid by Mr. Remmer during 1947 and 1948 and that Mr. Semenza told Mr. Jeffress that he was particularly interested in knowing whether any part of the note had been repaid prior to the end of 1946 and that Mr. Jeffress replied that the entire $50,000 had been repaid after 1946.

Now, in connection with that offer, your Honor, I am sure your Honor is familiar with the lengthy discussions we have of declaration against interest and I, for that reason, will refrain from going into it further.

I would like to make only this one observation, that in respect to this particular transaction, the only two parties to the transaction; namely the holder of the note, Mr. Jeffress, and Mr. Semenza, Mr. Jeffress being now dead, the only witness who could possibly testify as to what occurred or what was said during that conversation is Mr. Semenza, because he is the only remaining witness who knew about the conversation.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: The offer will be rejected.

Mr. Thompson: We make the same objection, your Honor.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Avakian: Mr. Gillen thought I should call your Honor's attention that the conversation in this instance was a part of the actual surrender of the document and it is not a conversation unrelated to a transaction, but actually was a part of the transaction; namely, the surrender of the note, the surrender of the note itself being some indication of the status of the matter. A conversation with relation it throws an additional light that cannot be present in connection with unrelated transactions.

The Court: The ruling will stand.

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as calling for hearsay, your Honor, incompetent.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: I think, your Honor, that raises the same question of declaration against interest.

The Court: The objection is sustained.

Mr. Avakian: I just wanted to say in connection with the next recess, we would like to make an offer of proof on that.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: I see.

Mr. Avakian: If that is agreeable, we would like to do that, your Honor.

The Court: Yes, all right.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, we have reached the point in Mr. Semenza's examination where we would like to have the exhibit which he has prepared received in evidence because further examination will relate to that. May we suggest we take a recess, for the two purposes of making proof and so counsel may examine the exhibit.

The Court: Yes, we will excuse the jury.

(Jury and alternate jurors admonished and excused at 2:10 p.m.)

(In the absence of the jury.)

(Defendant present with counsel.) [2734]

(Presence of the jury and alternate jurors stipulated.)

Mr. Thompson: At this time, your Honor, the defense has offered in evidence Exhibit M-1 for identification. We request permission to ask three or four questions on voir dire.

The Court: You may do so.

Q. (By Mr. Thompson): As I understand your testimony, Mr. Semenza, this Exhibit M-1, which contains a number of statements, constitutes your own personal analysis of the records in evidence in this case, is that correct? A. It does.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And you recognize, do you not, that in many respects the evidence is conflicting and you were required to take one view of the evidence rather than a contrary view, in preparing the statements?

A. That is true.

Q. You also recognize, do you not, that in certain respects the items contained in some of the statements are based upon your own assumptions or conclusions, rather than actual direct evidence of the fact itself?

Mr. Avakian: It appears to me this is more properly cross-examination rather than voir dire.

Mr. Thompson: I think it is proper voir dire to show the foundation for the exhibit.

The Court: It seems to me it is calling for some matter on which the matter is based. [2735]

Mr. Avakian: I have no objection to counsel asking questions, but I did not want him to go into cross-examination before the exhibit was explained.

The Court: Let us have the question.

(Question read.)

A. My conclusions are based on evidence in this case.

The Court: I do not believe the witness understood the question. If he did, I did not.

Mr. Thompson: Permit to withdraw. I will reframe the question.

The Court: Yes.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. In preparing the statement contained in Exhibit M-1 for identification, it was necessary for you to draw inferences from certain evidence in the case in the situation where direct evidence of a particular fact is not in evidence?

A. If there was not sufficient evidence, I eliminated it from my statement.

Q. But that still was your personal opinion as to whether or not the evidence was sufficient?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the event your opinion in that connection should be wrong, or the jury should take a contrary opinion, your statements would be different as contained in this Exhibit M-1?

Mr. Avakian: I think that is clearly cross-examination [2736] rather than voir dire.

The Court: You will pardon me. I wonder if this isn't what you are trying to get at. On direct examination Mr. Semenza testified that this exhibit was based upon all the testimony in the case or the documentary evidence, as well as oral testimony. Now, isn't the purpose of this question to inquire whether or not it also contains matters of his opinion, isn't that the question?

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, if I may restate the testimony, I believe Mr. Semenza testified that in preparing this exhibit he took into consideartion all of the testimony in evidence and that this represents his accounting analysis of the evidence, based on his best ability and judgment. That, I believe, is the foundation that was laid in his testimony for it.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

If what counsel is stating is that there are matters in evidence here from which more than one inference could be drawn, I will be willing to stipulate generally that there is evidence in the record from which more than one inference can be drawn.

Mr. Thompson: And in preparing his statement, he was required to choose between those inferences.

Mr. Avakian: I do not like the word "required." I believe he said he used his best judgment.

Mr. Thompson: I mean in order to reach the result he put down on the paper. [2737]

Mr. Avakian: He used his best judgment, yes.

Mr. Thompson: May I have the question read?

(Question read.)

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, I object, first on the ground it is not proper voir dire; rather it is cross-examination; secondly, it is an argumentative type of question; third, it is incomprehensive to me, because if the jury should take a different view, would Mr. Semenza's conclusion be different—I don't understand what he means by that. Mr. Semenza's conclusion might remain the same.

The Court: Will you reframe the question?

Mr. Thompson: I will withdraw the question, your Honor.

Q. Mr. Semenza, in instances where the evidence was in conflict, and in instances where more than one inference might be drawn from the evidence, in preparing this statement, it was necessary for you to adopt one opinion of your own, was it not?

A. Certainly.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: I have no objection to Exhibit M-1.

The Court: Exhibit M-1 may be admitted in evidence.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, the first three pages of Exhibit M-1 are in the nature of summaries, you might say, setting forth the results, and the remaining 18 pages show in considerable detail the supporting data. We have reproduced in enlarged form on placards the three summary pages, similar to [2738] the enlargement which the prosecution made of its Exhibit 183, and if there is no objection, we should like to have these enlargements likewise received in evidence, so they can be exhibited before the jury and permit the jury to follow more intelligently our questioning.

Mr. Thompson: No objection.

Mr. Avakian: I would request then that these be marked exhibit 1 with reference to page 1 in the exhibit to which they refer. This first one would be marked Exhibit M-1 page 1; the second would be marked Exhibit M-1 page 2; and the third would be marked Exhibit M-1, page 3.

The Court: They are all admitted in evidence.

Q. Mr. Semenza, in preparing defendant's Exhibit M-1, did you have any discussions with me with regard to the form and content of the exhibit?

A. Only general discussion.

Q. And do any of the contents of the exhibit represent items which you inserted on my instruction? A. No, they do not.

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Do they in every instance represent your own independent judgment as an accountant?

A. They do.

Q. Would you turn to page one of defendant's Exhibit M-1 and state to us what that represents?

A. Page 1, Exhibit M-1 presents the income from these various [2739] sources as shown in the evidence in this case and from the records. It compares it with the income reported in the individual returns of Elmer and Helen Remmer.

Q. When you say from evidence and records, are you referring to the records which are in evidence here?

A. Yes, I mean the witness' testimony and the documentary evidence admitted here.

Q. And have you set forth in the column entitled 1944, the results of your analysis as to Elmer and Helen Remmer's share of the income of each of the enterprises listed on page 1 as shown by the evidence in this case? A. I have.

Q. And will you tell us the total income of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the year 1944, as you have set forth in your exhibit?

A. $11,253.07.

Q. And have you also set forth the income reported by Mr. and Mrs. Remmer in the return which they filed for that same year?

A. I have.

Q. And those are the returns which are in evidence here? A. They are.

Q. And what is the amount of that?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. Twenty thousand dollars.

Q. And have you made a similar statement and analysis with respect to the year 1945?

A. I have. [2740]

Q. And what is the amount of the income of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the year 1945 which you determined from your analysis of the testimony and exhibits? A. $74,958.82.

Q. And what is the amount shown on the returns of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the year 1945 which are in evidence in this case? A. $71,808.27.

Q. Have you made a similar computation for the year 1946? A. I have.

Q. Will you state the amount that you determined as the income of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the year 1946? A. $38,215.76.

Q. And what is the amount shown on their returns for the year 1946 which are in evidence here?

A. $37,254.31.

Q. Now, have you also set forth on that same page a column representing the total of these computations for the three years combined?

A. I have.

Q. And would you state the amount of income of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the three years combined which you determined from your analysis of the evidence? A. $124,427.65.

Q. And what is the amount which they reported on the returns [2741] they filed which are in evidence in this case? A. $129,062.55.

Q. Have you also set forth on page 1 the difference between the amount which you determined as the correct income and the amount which they reported as their income? A. I have.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Q. Now, I note that in the exhibit in typewritten form on page 1, and elsewhere through the exhibit also, there are certain figures which are enclosed with a bracket mark. Can you explain what that parentheses mark signifies?

A. That means it is less than income shown in my statement.

Q. I was asking you generally what does enclosure of a figure in parentheses mark indicate in accounting business?

A. A reduction or loss.

Q. And in the enlargement which has been prepared for the assistance of the jury, those figures are set forth in red, is that correct?

A. They are.

Q. The other figures are in black?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what is the amount which you determined for 1944 as the difference between the amount reported by Mr. and Mrs. Remmer and the amount which you determined as correct income?

A. $8746.93.

Q. And in what direction does that difference lie? [2742]

A. In excess of the income that I determined.

Q. They reported more, in other words?

A. That is correct.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Will you give us the same explanation with respect to the year 1945?

A. The year 1945 the amount I determined was $3,150.55 more than reported in the returns.

Q. Will you give us the same explanation with respect to the year 1946?

A. 1946 the amount I have shown as income is $961.45 more than the returns.

Q. And will you tell us also the difference for the three years in amount?

A. The amount shown on the returns exceeded the amount I determined by $4,634.93.

Q. Now, on sheet 2, Mr. Semenza, you have set forth in considerable detail a number of items. Would you state, Mr. Semenza, what page 2 of Exhibit M-1 represents?

A. Page 2 reflects a list of assets and liabilities which I have been able to determine from my examination of the evidence in this case.

Q. So that we may perhaps clarify this a bit—and if I may be permitted, your Honor, to state it in the form of a leading question—page 1 represents your analysis of the income on the basis of the income and expenses shown by the evidence in [2743] the case, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Page 2 represents, to the extent that you have been able to determine, the assets and liabilities attempting to proceed on the net worth method, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Were you able, Mr. Semenza, to make a computation of income on the net worth basis?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. No, I was not.

Q. And would you state why?

A. Because the evidence in this case indicates that there was cash in safe deposit boxes and safe and the evidence does not indicate any amount.

Q. Would you state the meaning in an accounting sense of the term "net worth"?

A. Net worth is the difference between the assets and liabilities.

Q. Is it possible to determine the net worth of an individual if you are unable to determine the value of any of his assets? A. No.

Q. Have you, however, set forth, to the extent that values could be determined, the various assets and liabilities shown by the evidence in this case?

A. I have.

Q. And I call your attention particularly to the individual [2744] items on the exhibit. Let us refer first to item No. 1, designated "Bank of America, Tracy Branch." Where did you obtain the information that is set forth in your exhibit as to the balance in that account?

A. From exhibits presented by the Bank of America in evidence here.

Q. And those figures represent the balance of that account at the end of each year, 1943 to 1946, inclusive? A. That is correct.

Q. And secondly, with respect to Item 2, Bank of America, Grand Lake Branch, where did you obtain data for that?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. From exhibits admitted in evidence in this case.

Q. And I notice there is no amount entered in 1943 and 1944, can you explain that?

A. I found no exhibits for those years.

Q. In other words, the account came into existence during the year 1945? A. Evidently.

Q. And then in respect to the next item of United States government bonds, where did you obtain those figures?

A. That is from exhibit presented by the government and admitted in evidence.

Q. Would you state the source of the information as to the loan to Mrs. Harris?

A. It is in the testimony. [2745]

Q. Is that based on testimony of Mrs. Harris and various bank records? A. That is right.

Q. And what is the basis of the entry with respect to Item 5, loan to Marys Chaney?

A. Her testimony.

Q. And Marys Chaney is the same person whose married name is Marys Chaney Martin?

A. That is correct.

Q. I note you have entered at the end of 1943 the amount of $2500 and you have entered no amount for later years and were you aware of her testimony that during the year 1944 she borrowed $2500, which was delivered to her in the form of a check of Cal-Neva Corporation?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as leading the witness. He can state what he bases his figures on, but

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

I do not think counsel has to suggest it to him. It is leading.

Mr. Avakian: It is leading, your Honor.

The Court: See if you can reframe it.

Q. Will you state, Mr. Semenza, whether or not there is reflected in your exhibit anywhere the additional amount of $2500 which was loaned to Marys Chaney in 1944 by means of a check drawn on Cal-Neva corporate bank account?

A. In the schedule analysis to Cal-Neva, Inc., account, which is Schedule 6 of my analysis here, is $2500 included as a [2746] charge to Mr. Remmer for withdrawal from the business.

Q. In other words, you handled that in the same manner Mr. Weaver did; you entered it as a charge to Mr. Remmer's drawing account from Cal-Neva?

A. I did.

Q. That transaction, then, is reflected in what item of your exhibit? A. Item 21.

Q. Which sets forth the amount that Mr. Remmer owed to Cal-Neva at the end of each year, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And upon what did you base the figures with respect to Item 6 which was due from Mr. Albert Villaudy?

A. From the records of Cal-Neva and the checks admitted in evidence here showing these payments.

Q. Now, with respect to Items 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11, which are designated at equity in the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, Day-Night Cigar Store, 110 Eddy Street, Menlo Club and Transit Smoke Shop, respectively, can you tell us generally in explanation of all five items the manner in which you determined the equity of Mr. and Mrs. Remmer in those businesses, as shown in your exhibit?

BLURRED COPY

A. Well, in Schedule that is filed, I have prepared a schedule No. 1, which shows the assets and liabilities and net worth of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, which shows Mr. Remmer's interest [2747] in that business at the end of the various years in question. In Schedule No. 2 I have shown the Day-Night Cigar Store and the capital accounts of the various partners of that enterprise and the interest of Mr. Remmer. In Schedule 3 I show the net worth and partners' capital account in 110 Eddy Street enterprise and from it I have taken Mr. Remmer's interests in that enterprise at the end of the various years, as shown on this summary sheet, which is page 2 of Exhibit M-1. In Schedule No. 4 I have shown the assets, liabilities and net worth of the Menlo Club at the end of 1945 and the end of 1946 and the various partners' capital accounts and from it I have taken the equity of Mr. Remmer, as reflected in the schedule page 2 of the Exhibit M-1. In Schedule No. 5 I have set forth the assets, liabilities and net worth of the Transit Smoke Shoppe December 31, 1946, and the partners' capital accounts at the end of the year and from that schedule I have taken the amount shown on page 2 as the equity in the Transit Smoke Shop of Mr. Remmer.

Q. Now, in making the analyses which are set forth in these various schedules that you mentioned, will you state to us whether you simply took the figures that were shown in the books or did you make your own accounting analyses of the entries in the books, together with the other evidence in the case relating to those matters?

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. In some cases I had to take my own.

Q. And will you explain what you mean by that, Mr. Semenza? [2748]

A. In the case of the Day-Night Cigar Store, the 110 Eddy Street, the records, the general ledger was not posted at the end of 1945. The books of the original entry, that is, the cash receipts record and the cash disbursements record and the journal entries, had been made, but they had not been posted to the general ledger accounts. Therefore, it was necessary for me to give effect to the posting of those entries to the general ledger, take a trial balance of the general ledger and determine the profit and loss for the year.

Q. In other words, you found the transactions entered in the daily records or cash records, but they had not been posted from those original entries into the ledger accounts?

A. At the end of 1945 they had not been.

Q. Did you then make the necessary accounting computations and adjustments to carry forward those entries into ledger accounts?

A. I did. I have set forth in schedule following each of the respective entries.

Q. And that is set forth in your exhibit in detail? A. That is correct.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, will you state whether, in preparing these schedules, you accepted the computations of income shown in the partnership books and returns, or did you make your own analysis and determination of the net income of each of these partnerships, based on all of the evidence in this case?

A. I made my own for the years 1945 and 1946, where the [2749] records had not been posted.

Q. And in instances where you found that proper accounting called for making of an adjustment in determining the correct income, did you make those adjustments? A. I did.

Q. And have you likewise set the result of your adjustments and revisions in these supporting schedules down in Exhibit M-1? A. I have.

Q. Now, with respect to Item 12, "Equity in 21 Club and San Diego Social Club," will you state where you obtained the information and figures that are set forth on page 2 of your exhibit?

A. The exhibits admitted by Mr. Gould.

Q. Revenue Agent Gould?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is Exhibit 106, is it?

A. That is correct.

Q. That exhibit setting forth his analysis of some prior time of that particular business?

A. That's right.

Q. Mr. Semenza, as a preliminary matter to further questioning, could you explain in understandable terms the meaning of the terms "single entry

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

bookkeeping" and "double entry bookkeeping"?

A. Well, a true single entry system of bookkeeping only records [2750] in the ledger accounts the transactions with customers or the transactions with creditors and drawings of the proprietor or proprietors. The single entry system does not reflect the assets and liabilities of the business nor the operating accounts, such as sales, purchases and expenses. In a double entry system of bookkeeping effect is given to reflecting the assets, liabilities, proprietor's capital account and the accounts affecting income and expenses. The single entry system requires making a statement, listing in the book all assets and liabilities and there is no proof in such listing that you have found all the assets and liabilities. In a double entry system, you are in position of showing that you have balanced out all transactions and have them and entered the assets and liabilities and net worth of the business.

Q. Can you state the types of entries that are made in a single entry system to reflect the business transactions? That is, can you give us a particular example and explain to us how the entries of that transaction would be made on a single entry system and how they would be made on a double entry system? Take a sale or something.

A. For example, in a single entry the record shows receipts from John Jones of $50.

Q. Would that be the only entry made?

A. That would be the only entry in the single entry system.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. What additional entries would be made in the double entry [2751] system?

A. A double entry system would show the receipt of $50 and also show the source from which it was obtained.

Q. Is a separate ledger card maintained for John Jones?

A. In the double entry you have ledger card for cash and ledger card indicating the source of that income.

Q. And in respect to expenses such as in the nature of rent, what type of entry would be made in a single entry system and what type of entry in a double entry system?

A. In the single entry there would be a record paid for rent $100, for example, that is all that would appear in the cash book. In the double entry system it would show disbursement of $100. From that record a posting would be made to the cash account in the general ledger and rent account in the general ledger.

Q. Now, have you found in your accounting experience that some businesses use the single entry system and some use the double entry system?

A. Yes, they do.

Q. I take it, as a certified public accountant, you prefer the double entry system?

A. I recommend it highly.

Q. Is it possible to prepare a statement of profit and loss by a single entry system?

A. It is. [2752]

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And have you found in your experience that many business men who use the single entry system prepare their statements of net income to the United States Treasury Department on the basis of their single entry systems?

A. Yes, they still prepare tax returns from that information.

Q. Does the information that is called for on the income tax returns of the Treasury Department, in the preparation of income tax returns, relate to information as to receipts and disbursements, or does it relate to information as to assets and liabilities?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as calling for the witness' conclusion.

Mr. Avakian: I think it is a proper question to ask the witness because of the fact——

The Court: He may answer the question.

A. The tax return calls for sources of the income and the purpose for which the expenses were incurred.

Q. Do the tax returns forms then call for computation of income on the method of receipts and disbursements or call for computation of income on the basis of net worth?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as already asked and answered.

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. Basis of receipts and disbursements.

Q. And in your practice as an accountant and in your practice before the Treasury Department in the representation of taxpayers, [2753] do you know of any requirement of the Treasury regulations or of the Internal Revenue Code for the maintenance by the taxpayer of information as to his assets and liabilities at any particular time? Do you understand my question?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. Yes. The answer is there is a requirement made of adequate record in order to properly prepare the income return.

Q. Adequate record of receipts and disbursements, is that what you mean?

A. For an individual, yes.

Q. And in your examination of the books and records of the various enterprises which have been covered by the evidence in this case, have you determined whether the receipts and disbursements of these businesses, as shown by the evidence, were entered in the books of account and other records of the respective businesses?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as calling for his conclusion, your Honor, regarding matters outside the evidence. All he can testify is that the records speak for themselves. The receipts and disbursements that were entered were entered, that is what it amounts to.

Mr. Avakian: Prhaps counsel did not understand my question. Perhaps I had better make it clear. May I restate it, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. In your examination of the evidence in this case and in [2754] your examination of the books and records of the various enterprises which have been introduced in evidence here, did you find that the income shown by the evidence in this case was entered in the books of account of the respective businesses? A. Yes, I did.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. I am going to call your attention particularly to certain books of account. First to Exhibit 127, which is entitled "Tiny's Restaurant 1946." That represents, does it not, a portion of the operation of the Menlo Club? A. It does.

Q. Now, would you state, Mr. Semenza, what that book contains with respect to the recordation of the receipts of that segment of the business?

A. It shows the income, five months and five days, from the operation of Tiny's Restaurant.

Q. And that is entered on the basis of entries each day? A. That is correct.

Q. As well as monthly summaries?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what did you find entered in that book in respect to the expenses of the business?

A. Under the section entitled "Expenses" I found payments covering labor, purchases of food and services rendered Tiny's Waffle Shop for light, power, telephone, normal operating supplies, advertising, and other miscellaneous expenses. [2755]

Q. Without going into detail, did you find the same type of information, both as to daily receipts and as to expenses, entered into the 1946 book with respect to the Menlo Bar operation of the Menlo Club? A. I did.

Q. And did you also find the same entries on daily basis of the receipts and disbursements relative to

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

the card room portion of the Menlo Club business?

A. I did.

Q. And from those figures were you able to determine the net income of the Menlo Club for the year 1946? A. I was.

Q. And is that set forth in your Exhibit M-1?

A. It is.

Q. And will you state the amount which you determined as the net income of the Menlo Club for the year 1946? A. $100,637.26; page 14.

Q. And does that amount differ from the amount which was shown on the return of the Menlo Club which was filed for that year? A. It does.

Q. And in your exhibit you set forth the amount which you determined as the correct income for that year? A. I did.

Q. Then how did you arrive at Mr. and Mrs. Remmer's share of [2756] the Menlo Club income for the year 1946 as shown on page 1 of your Exhibit M-1?

A. I took 55 per cent of the net income for that year as being Mr. and Mrs. Remmer's share of the profit.

Q. And you said that the profit was 100 thousand odd dollars before applying the 55 per cent factor. Was there some reduction made on account of salaries paid out of that 100 thousand?

A. On page 14 should be for the year 1945. I have given you $100,637.26 as profit for 1946 and it was the profit in 1945. Page 15 shows profit for 1946.

Q. The figure you gave us is shown correctly in the exhibit, you simply stated the wrong year in reciting it? A. That is right.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. On page 15 you have set forth your computation of the net income of the Menlo Club for 1946 as what figure? A. $67,047.92.

Q. I call your attention to prosecution's Exhibit 91, which is the amended return of the Menlo Club for the year 1946, and I will ask you to state the amount of net income of the Menlo Club shown on that return and read again the amount which you computed as the correct figure for that year.

A. Exhibit 91, 1946 income tax return of Menlo Club, shows net income of $66,596.42. My computation shows a net profit of $67,047.92.

Q. In other words, your increase is slightly less than a [2757] thousand dollars?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then you took 55 per cent of the 67 thousand figure as Mr. and Mrs. Remmer's share and entered that on page 1 of your exhibit as their share of the income for 1946? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, in connection with the books and records of the various functions of the Menlo Club for the year 1946, in making your analysis of the net income of the Menlo Club for that year, did you also take into account the various checks and check stub books, to the extent that they have been introduced in evidence here by the prosecution? A. I did.

Q. And did you find any evidence in this case relative to the Menlo Club operation any receipts, cash register tapes, or similar supporting documents?

BLURRED COPY

A. There were some poker sheets introduced in evidence here.

Q. That is in respect——

A. To the Club operation.

Q. You are referring to the poker sheets introduced as Exhibits 114, 114A and 114B?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were only for the last day and first day of each year? A. That is correct. [2758]

Q. Did you find in evidence any poker sheets for the remaining days of the year?

A. I do not recall.

Q. Would it have been proper accounting procedure for you to have attempted to verify the entries in the books of account by examining the daily poker sheets?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as immaterial what proper accounting procedure would have been with regard to exhibits not in evidence.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, my point is this—Mr. Weaver testified they had all the poker sheets but only——

The Court: You are asking now——

Mr. Avakian: I am asking if, in determining whether these books are accurate, it would have been logical for him to verify entries against the daily poker sheets which Mr. Weaver said they had, and still have, but were not brought into court. In other words, it is the accuracy of the books here challenged.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. In order to make an audit, I would have had to have had them.

Q. When you obtained from Mr. Weaver on July 11, 1949, the various books and documents listed on Exhibit 70 which you mentioned a moment ago, did he make any statement to you as to whether or not he had in his possession at that time cash [2759] register tapes of some of the businesses involved in this case?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as calling for hearsay.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: We would like to show verifying data which would show the correctness of the books is in the possession of the prosecution and they won't bring them in.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, it is important for us to show whether or not these books were accurate, because the prosecution charged they are inaccurate. Now, we would like to show that they have in their possession the data which would show the accuracy or inaccuracy and they have not produced the cash register tapes which would show the books of account are correct. Your Honor has permitted Mr. Weaver to say the books are inadequate, so why can't we show he has the books and refuses to produce the data?

The Court: I will let the question be answered.

(Question read.)

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It is my recollection that he indicated there was such information.

Q. You have never personally been able to examine any of that type of material?

A. I have not.

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as calling for conclusion. [2760] As a matter of fact, your Honor, the evidence shows he was turned loose in the room and given permission to examine anything in there and take with him what he wanted to take out of the room. That is Mr. Semenza's own testimony and now Mr. Avakian asks him if he wasn't able to examine other records.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Did you at any time actually examine those other records which remained in Mr. Weaver's office after you took the documents listed on Exhibit 70?

A. I did not.

Q. And it is true, is it not, at the time you took those books and records, you took them not in connection with this case, but in connection with another case? A. That is true.

Q. And you took what you thought at that time was sufficient for the immediate purpose you had at that time?

Mr. Thompson: That calls for conclusion.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. Will you state whether in your examination of the books and records in evidence in this case, as to these various enterprises for the years 1944,

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

1945 and 1946, the books and records disclosed the existence of partnerships?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to, that calls for conclusion, your Honor.

The Court: Well, he may answer. [2761]

Mr. Thompson: The records are the best evidence. They speak for themselves as to what the enterprises are.

The Court: He may answer.

A. The records indicate existence of partnerships.

Q. Do they show capital accounts for various partners? A. They do.

Q. And the names of the partners?

A. They do in all cases except the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe.

Q. In the case of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe the only records are diaries of daily receipts?

A. That is correct.

Q. No books of account were maintained for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe as far as you know?

A. None that I know of.

Q. Would you state on the basis of what testimony or other evidence you allocated the assets of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe on a partnership basis in preparing Exhibit M-1?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to on the ground the question invades the province of the jury.

Mr. Avakian: I do not think so; I am asking him to state the evidence.

The Court: Let us have the question.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: I think the question merely asks for the evidence. [2762]

Mr. Thompson: I do not believe so. He is not asking the witness for the basis of any particular figure in the schedule or exhibit, he is asking for recitation of the evidence upon which he bases a legal conclusion that the assets of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe should be allocated on a certain belief. The fact that he did so allocate is all he can testify to, as I view the situation. He is not competent to review all the evidence in the case and state as to such an item of evidence he reached the conclusion that this is a real partnership.

Mr. Avakian: No, your Honor, all the prosecution's accountants have testified that particular items in their exhibits were based upon testimony of Mr. so and so or exhibit so and so and so on, and this is simply an explanation.

The Court: All right, why don't you direct this witness' attention to a particular item and ask the same.

Mr. Avakian: It was with respect to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe. I will be glad to do it.

Q. I am directing my question now, Mr. Semenza, to page No. 4 of Exhibit 1, which is designated B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, and which contains at the bottom under the heading, "Partners' Capital Accounts," certain amounts paid Mr. Remmer, Mr. Kyne and Mr. Lando. In preparing page 4 and in carrying forward from page 4 to your summary sheets on pages 1 and 2 the data in respect to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, did you have in [2763] mind in part the partnership returns of income of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, designated prosecution's Exhibits 78 and 79 and defendant's Exhibit "O," which I now hand you here?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. Yes, I did.

Q. And did you also have in mind the testimony of Mr. Lando and Mr. Kyne with respect to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe business? A. I did.

Q. I will hand you prosecution's Exhibit 112, which is designated 110 Eddy, will you state preliminarily what kind of a book that is? What does it represent?

A. It represents general ledger for the 110 Eddy Street enterprise.

Q. And did you find, in your examination of the books and records of the 110 Eddy business, which have been introduced in evidence here, a record was maintained of the receipts and disbursements of that business? A. I did.

Q. And was that kept on the basis of a daily record? A. It was.

Q. And was there also a ledger maintained for that business, showing the assets and liability accounts? A. This is the ledger.

Q. You are referring to Exhibit——

A. 112. [2764]

Q. Would you state then did the 110 Eddy

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Street business keep single entry books or double entry books? A. Double entry.

Q. And have you found in this case any evidence of any income of the 110 Eddy business which was not entered in the books of account of that business during the three years involved in this indictment?

A. I have not.

Q. Now would you state what type of books, that is, single entry or double entry, were maintained by the Day-Night Cigar Store business?

A. Double entry.

Q. And I hand you prosecution's Exhibit 117, is that the ledger account of that business?

A. The general journal and general ledger of the Day-Night Cigar Store.

Q. And did the books of that business maintain a daily record of receipts and disbursements?

A. They did.

Q. And also a record of asset and liability accounts? A. That is right.

Q. And did you find from the evidence in this case any evidence of income of the Day-Night Cigar Store which was not entered in those books of account? A. I did not. [2765]

Q. Would you state what type of books were maintained by the Transit Smoke Shoppe, that is, single entry or double entry?

A. Double entry.

Q. And did that business maintain a record of daily receipts and disbursements? A. It did.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And likewise a record of asset and liability accounts?

A. A general ledger was not maintained for that business.

Q. In other words, the records were in existence but the posting had not been made?

A. They had not opened a general ledger.

Q. And did you find from the evidence in this case any evidence of income of the Transit Smoke Shop which was not entered in the books of account? A. I did not.

Q. In sheet 1 of defendant's Exhibit M-1 you have set forth certain amounts as either profit or loss, representing Mr. Remmer's share of the profit or loss, as the case may be, from the 21 Club and San Diego Social Club for the years 1944, 1945, and 1946? A. I have.

Q. Would you state where you obtained that information?

A. From the revenue agents' reports and examinations for those years.

Q. That is, those reports of Revenue Agent Gould received [2766] here in evidence?

A. They are.

Q. And you have set forth on page 1 of Exhibit M-1 the exact amounts which Revenue Agent Gould determined in his report as Mr. Remmer's share of the profit or loss of that business for each of the three years? A. I did.

Q. Now with respect to page 2 of Exhibit M-1, I call your attention to item No. 20, which is designated "Cash in Safe Deposit Boxes and Safes" and particularly to the question mark which you have entered in each of the columns. Can you explain why you entered a question mark there?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. The evidence indicates, the witnesses indicate, that there was cash in safe deposit boxes and safes at all times during this period, yet none of them testified any amount. There were no records here that would indicate any amount in the boxes.

Q. Now is it necessary, in preparing financial statements of assets, liabilities and net worth, to set forth the value of each asset and each liability in order to arrive at a correct net worth figure?

A. It is.

Q. And were you able to arrive at a specific net worth figure from analysis of the evidence in this case? A. No, I was not. [2767]

Q. I note under the heading of "Total Assets," you have entered in each column a specific amount, followed by the words, "Plus cash." Will you explain what you mean by that?

A. The amount entered there is the sum of the figures included in that column and in addition to that the evidence indicates that there was cash in boxes, so that in addition to the amount shown you would have to add the cash, if you knew what it was.

Q. And that is true, is it, of the four year-ends shown on that page? A. That is true.

Q. Now I note at the bottom after listing and totaling liabilities, you have a figure of net worth for each December 31st, which in each instance is followed by the words "Plus cash." Would you explain what that means?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. I take the difference between the assets shown and the liabilities and I arrive at the net worth, but that net worth does not include any item of cash, consequently, net worth figures should be increased by the amount of cash that was on hand at that date.

Q. In computing net income on the net worth method, is it necessary to determine, as one of the steps in the procedure, the increase in net worth from the beginning to the end of each year?

A. It is. [2768]

Q. Were you able to determine the increase in net worth of Mr. and Mrs. Remmer from the beginning to the end of each year in this case?

A. Only to the extent of subject to the addition in cash could that amount be determined.

Q. If the amount of cash at December 31st of each year was different in one year than it was in another year, would the difference in cash have to be taken into account in computing net income on the net worth method? A. It would.

Q. On page 3 was set forth certain figures entitled "Elmer and Helen Remmer changes in Net Worth 1944 to 1946, Inclusive." The first line is entitled "End of period." Would you state the meaning of that term and the figures that have been entered in connection with it for each year?

A. From page 2 schedule page, I take the net worth at the end of December, 1944, which is $146,-

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

922.62, plus cash. I do likewise for the other two years.

Q. And then the next line is entitled "Beginning of Period." Will you explain what that means and the meaning of the figures that are entered opposite it?

A. The beginning of the period of 1944, would be the net worth at the end of 1943, and the beginning net worth of 1945, would be the net worth at the end of 1944, and the beginning net worth of 1946, would be the net worth at the end of [2769] 1945.

Q. And then the last column is entitled "Three years combined." Can you explain the words and meaning of the figures that are entered under that column for the end and beginning of the period?

A. The end of the period would be the net worth shown on page 2 at December 31, 1946, $228,042.45, plus cash, and the net worth at the beginning of the three-year period would be the net worth shown on page 2 at December 31, 1943, which is $119,539.83, plus cash.

Q. Now the last line of this page is entitled "Increase or Decrease" and contains figures which are followed in each instance by the designations, "Plus or Minus Change in Cash." Could you explain the meaning of those figures and words. Let us take as an illustration for that purpose, Mr. Semenza, the figure that you have in the last column as the total for three years combined.

A. The amount of net worth at the end of 1946,

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

is $228,042.45, plus cash. The net worth at the beginning of the three-year period is the net worth of December 31, 1943, which is $119,539.83, plus cash. The difference between beginning and ending net worth is $108,502.62, plus or minus any change you would have in cash. There is indication that cash existed, therefore, the difference in net worth there must be increased or decreased by any change in cash between the two dates. [2770]

Q. Just for illustration purposes, will you explain to us how that would work. Let us assume it both ways. First, let us assume that from the end of 1943, to the end of 1946, the amount of cash increased by ten thousand dollars. What would then be the figure as increase in net worth instead of $108 thousand?

A. It would be $118,502.62.

Q. And let us assume the reverse, that from the end of 1943, to the end of 1946, the amount of cash decreased by ten thousand dollars, what then would you have in place of 108 thousand dollar figure?

A. $98,502.62.

Q. And it is your testimony that you can not determine just what the change in net worth was without having the amount of change in cash for the year? A. That is correct.

Q. On page 2 of the exhibit on line 29 you have the item, "J. B. Scarlett," with a question mark at the end of 1946, and with a footnote reference for that question mark, and also for the figure of total liabilities, reading as follows: "Liabilities would be increased and net worth decreased by any liability determined to be due Mr. Scarlett at December 31, 1946." Would you explain the meaning of that item?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: I would say it is self-explanatory, your Honor. [2771]

The Court: You may explain it.

A. There is evidence in the testimony of Woodburn, Sr., and Jr., that a liability might have existed.

Q. At December 31, 1946?

A. December 31, 1946. There was no evidence in the record that would indicate that it actually did.

Q. In other words, from the testimony that was received in evidence, you were unable to determine on the basis of that testimony whether or not that liability was in existence at the end of 1946?

A. That is correct.

Q. So you simply entered a question mark?

A. That is correct.

Q. And if it should be determined by the jury that there was a liability at that time, the amount of that liability would decrease the net worth computation shown in your exhibit?

A. That is correct.

The Court: We will take a recess now but I will ask counsel to remain.

resumed the witness stand on further

Direct Examination

By Mr. Avakian:

Q. Mr. Semenza, on page 1 of your Exhibit M-1, you have set forth as the gross income included in the individual income tax returns of Mr. and Mrs. Remmer for the year 1946, the amount of $37,-254.31. I call your attention to prosecution's Exhibits 5 and 6, which are the 1946 returns of Mr. and Mrs. Remmer, individually, and is that the amount shown on the face of the returns as the gross income of the two combined? A. Yes.

Q. And is that the source of the figure which you have entered on Sheet 1 of Exhibit M-1?

A. It is.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Now from your examination of Exhibits 5 and 6, does it appear to you that in the computation of that gross income figure, whoever prepared the return failed to subtract from that figure the losses shown on the return in respect to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe and 21 Club and San Diego Social Club?

A. In reporting the gross income on the face of the return they did not give effect to the loss of the 21 Club and B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, but they did on page 3 of the return. [2773]

Q. In other words, they subtracted it after they arrived at the gross income and before arriving at the net income? A. That is correct.

Q. What would be the proper method of handling losses of those two types?

A. Those losses should have been deducted from the gross income on page 1.

Q. In either event the net income would be the same, would it not? A. That is correct.

Q. Now if you were to proceed further with Sheet 1 of Exhibit M-1, so as to compute not only the gross income which you have shown, but the net income with respect to the year 1946, would any adjustment be made on account of the manner in which those two losses were deducted on the returns involved? A. Yes.

Q. And what would be the amount of that adjustment?

A. The amount of the adjustment would be the sum of the losses of the two enterprises, the total of which is $6,236.45.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, if you were asked to prepare income tax returns of Elmer and Helen Remmer for the years 1944, 1945, and 1946, on the basis of the testimony and exhibits in this case, can you state the amount of gross income which you would compute for the two of them combined in each of the three years?

A. 1944, $11,253.07; 1945, $74,958.82, and 1946, $38,215.76. [2774]

Q. Those are the amounts which are set forth on page 1 of your Exhibit M-1?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in your opinion, as an accountant, would that be the proper computation to make of the gross income for each of those years?

A. Based on the evidence here it would be proper.

Q. Now with respect to pages 18 to 21, inclusive, of Exhibit M-1, which set forth in detail the debits and credits in Elmer Remmer's account No. 10 in Cal-Neva, Inc., a corporation, that is based, is it not, on Exhibit 146, which was introduced in this case, the general ledger of Cal-Neva, Inc., with the adjustments that you have set forth in your Exhibit M-1? A. It is.

Q. And Cal-Neva, Inc., kept its books on the basis of the fiscal year ending April 30th of each year? A. That is correct.

Q. And were there a number of year-end entries made as of April 30th in the Cal-Neva books which related to transactions that actually occurred before the preceding December 31st? A. There were.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And Mr. and Mrs. Remmer's tax returns were on the basis of the calendar year, were they not? A. That is correct.

Q. And have you adjusted the entries in Exhibit 146 so as to [2775] set forth the transactions as of the time that they actually occurred, rather than as of April 30th, the date of the entry in Cal-Neva Books? A. I have.

Q. Now with those adjustments you have made, will you state the status of the account at the end of 1943? A. $23,152.77.

Q. And what does the amount represent?

A. The amount due Cal-Neva, Inc., by Mr. Remmer.

Q. Were there various transactions of both a debit and credit nature during 1944?

A. There were.

Q. That is, Mr. Remmer made payments to Cal-Neva and Cal-Neva made payments to Mr. Remmer? A. That is correct.

Q. And what was the status of the account at the end of 1944?

A. The sum of $18,361.68 was owed to Cal-Neva by Mr. Remmer.

Q. In other words, during the year 1944, the net effect of the transactions between them was that Mr. Remmer paid back about $5,000 of the amount he owed at the end of 1943?

A. That is correct.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. What was the status of the account at the end of 1945?

A. There was due Cal-Neva from Mr. Remmer the sum of $83,732.33.

Q. During the year 1945, were there likewise both debit and [2776] credit transactions shown in the account?

A. Actually there were only debit transactions. The one credit item shown on page 19 is to adjust one of the other debit entries.

Q. And the net effect of the transactions during 1945 then was that Mr. Remmer borrowed a net of approximately 65 thosuand dollars from Cal-Neva during that year? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, during the year 1946 was there any time when the account was in balance?

A. In June of 1946, Mr. Remmer paid up the amount which he owed Cal-Neva.

Q. In other words, the full amount of 83 thousand dollars, which he owed at the end of 1945, was paid back to Cal-Neva in June of 1946?

A. That is correct.

Q. At that time he owed Cal-Neva nothing, is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. Subsequently, during 1946 and prior to the end of the year, were there additional transactions in that account?

A. Yes, there were amounts paid for the account of Mr. Remmer, withdrawn by him, and also amounts put back into Cal-Neva by him.

Q. And specifically did he withdraw 50 thousand dollars for payment to Mr. Graham and another 50 thousand dollars for payment to Mr. McKay on September 24, 1946? [2777] A. He did.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And then on September 28th did he deposit 50 thousand dollars in Cal-Neva as a credit to his account? A. He did.

Q. What was the balance of the account at the end of 1946?

A. $60,742.39 was owed to Cal-Neva by Mr. Remmer.

Q. In other words, after balancing the account in June he made another borrowing during the balance of the year of 60,000 odd dollars?

A. That is correct?

Q. Now, in 1947, were there further transactions in that account? A. There were.

Q. And both of a debit and a credit nature?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the balance at the end of 1947?

A. $21,742.39 was owed to Cal-Neva by Mr. Remmer.

Q. Does that mean then that the net effect of the transactions during 1947 was that Mr. Remmer paid back approximately 44 thousand dollars during 1947 of the balance he owed at the end of 1946?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did he make any further payments during 1948?

A. There were two payments in 1948.

Q. And payments by Mr. Remmer to Cal-Neva?

A. To Cal-Neva. [2778]

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Had he borrowed any additional money from Cal-Neva in 1948?

A. Well, not up to April 30, 1948.

Q. That was the close of the fiscal year of the corporation? A. That is correct.

Q. And what was the final amount that he owed Cal-Neva at April 30, 1948? A. $10,742.39.

Q. And that is the last entry that is shown in Exhibit 146, is it not? A. That is correct.

Q. And you know, do you not, that shortly thereafter the Cal-Neva corporation was dissolved and the property was sold by Mr. Remmer?

A. Yes.

Mr. Avakian: No further questions.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

Mr. Thompson: Your Honor, I would like to place Exhibit 183 and defendant's Exhibit M-1, page 2, where the jury can see them and make a comparison.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Thompson: I will hand Exhibit 183 to the witness. You have a copy of Exhibit M-1, do you not, Mr. Semenza? A. I have, Mr. Thompson.

Q. At the outset, Mr. Semenza, I believe you testified that [2779] you prepared page 2 of Exhibit M-1, which represents a list of assets and liabilities for Helen and Elmer Remmer at December 31, 1943;

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

December 31, 1944; December 31, 1945, and December 31, 1946, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the same character of information, is it not, as set forth on plaintiff's Exhibit 183?

A. Yes, it is list of assets of Elmer F. Remmer and Helen Remmer.

Q. And according to Mr. Weaver's testimony, those assets were valued and computed at each year-end here involved, that is, 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment—I do not so understand the testimony. I believe it was Mr. Brady testified regarding Exhibit 183. The question assumes a fact contrary to the evidence.

Mr. Thompson: Perhaps I misquoted. It should have been Mr. Brady, is that correct?

A. I think it was.

Q. First, Mr. Semenza, let us take the items as to which there appears to be no disagreement. Your first item, Item 1, Bank of America, Tracy Branch, is the same item which is set forth as Item 17 on Exhibit 183, is it not?

A. That is correct. [2780]

Q. And the balances you show at each year-end in that bank account on Exhibit M-1 are the same as on Exhibit 183? A. That is correct.

Q. And you draw that information from the records of the Bank of America, Tracy Branch, which the government produced here in evidence, is that correct? A. I did.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Now, referring to your Item No. 2, Bank of America, Grand Lake Branch, Oakland, California, that is the same, is it not, as Item 20 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the year-end balances in that account for the years 1945 and 1946 are the same in Exhibit M-1 as in Exhibit 183? A. They are.

Q. And you also obtained that information from the records of the Bank of America, Grand Lake Branch, which the government produced in evidence? A. I did.

Q. Next item you have listed as Item 3 in Exhibit M-1 is headed "United States Government Bonds" and that is the same, is it not, as Item 1 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the year-end balances that you show as of the year 1946 listed on each exhibit are the same on Exhibit M-1 and the same on Exhibit 183? [2781]

A. They are.

Q. You obtained the information from which you prepared that item of your Exhibit M-1 from the Treasury Department records which the government produced here in evidence, did you not?

A. I did.

Q. And those are Exhibits 149 and 150, or do you have the record?

A. I do not have the record of that. I believe that is correct, however.

Q. Exhibits 150, and 150A. Now, Mr. Semenza, if you eliminated from this record, Exhibit 150 and Exhibit 150A, which is a record of the Treasury Department of the United States, what record did you find in other books and records here in evidence relating to the purchase and ownership of United States Government bonds by Elmer Remmer or Helen Remmer?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. My recollection in the exhibit of 110 Eddy Street there is an entry charging Mr. Remmer with three thousand dollars withdrawn from that business for the purchase of bonds.

Q. I believe that is substantially correct. Would you like to have the book and verify that?

Mr. Avakian: I think that is correct.

A. I think it is correct.

Q. And with that one exception, is there any other record in evidence, other than the Treasury Department records, showing the purchase and ownership of government bonds by Elmer and [2782] Helen Remmer during the years in question?

A. With the exception of that 110 Eddy, I recall none.

Q. Now, the next item on Exhibit M-1, your Item No. 4, records an amount due from Hazel Harris, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the same as Item 13 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the year-end balances shown on Exhibit M-1 for that item at the end of 1945 and at the end of 1946 are the same as shown on government's Exhibit 183? A. They are.

Q. Do you recall now on what evidence or exhibits you based that entry in Exhibit M-1?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It is my recollection that Mrs. Harris testified, and there are also checks evidencing various payments from Mrs. Harris to Mr. Remmer.

Q. I hand you Exhibit 28, Mr. Semenza, are those the checks regarding payments of a loan from Mr. Remmer to Hazel Harris to which you refer?

A. They are.

Q. And according to the testimony, what was the original amount of that loan?

A. I do not recall at this time; I think it was two thousand or $2500.

Q. I believe the record shows that Mrs. Harris testified it [2783] was $2500, as did her husband, Mr. Harris. The checks in Exhibit 28, regarding payments on that loan, total seven in number, do they not? A. They do.

Q. And according to the checks, what amounts were paid on the loan in the year 1945?

A. $750.

Q. In the event those were the only payments on the loan in the year 1945, the loan having been made in the year 1945, the year-end balance at December 31, 1945, should have been $1,750, should it not?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment, your Honor, I object to that question as assuming facts contrary to the evidence, because there is other evidence in this case, consisting of the bank deposit slips in Mrs. Remmer's account in the Grand Lake Branch and of the bank ledger statements of Mrs. Harris' account, from which it appears, as both the government's exhibit and Mr. Semenza's exhibit show, the balance at the end of 1945, was $1,250. Now there is no evidence to support the assumption in Mr. Thompson's question that only $750 had been paid up to that date and there is no conflict between the two exhibits. Mr. Brady reached exactly the same conclusion as Mr. Semenza. As I stated, there are these other documents in evidence which would support that.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: Let me have the question. [2784]

Mr. Thompson: I am entitled, I believe, to test Mr.——

The Court (Interceding): Wait a minute, Mr. Thompson. Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. My recollection also the testimony of Mrs. Harris was to the effect there were some other payments for which she did not have checks.

Q. Is it not true that Mrs. Harris testified that during the years 1945 and 1946 she made nine $250 payments, that she had lost or misplaced two of the checks and she did not know whether those two checks represented payments in 1945 or payments in 1946?

A. I know she testified that she had lost some checks during that period and I believe she also indicated that the amount due to Mr. Remmer was $1,250 at the end of 1945.

Q. In the event she did not so testify, that would not be the basis for your figures in the exhibit?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as argumentative and speculative.

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. I would have to draw from the evidence in the record.

Q. Now in making the entries on your Item 4 in Exhibit M-1, which is the same as Item 13 in government's Exhibit 183, you relied upon the records and testimony of Hazel Harris, is that [2785] correct? A. I did.

Q. And in the event the testimony and records produced here in court by Hazel Harris should be eliminated, what entries did you find in defendant's books and records and in the books and records of enterprises in which he was interested, here in evidence, relating to a loan to Hazel Harris?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial. There is no requirement anywhere that books and records of a business maintain records of private loans. There is no foundation laid to show that it is custom of business people to keep records of private loans not related to the business, and the question is argumentative.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question. Do you understand the question?

A. I do. I found no records in any of the enterprises of any indication of a loan by Mr. Remmer to Mrs. Harris.

Q. Did you find any record in evidence here whatsoever of any loan to Mrs. Harris, other than the records and testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Harris and the government bank exhibits here produced in court? A. I can't recall anything.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. The next item on Exhibit M-1, Item 6, records an obligation due Mr. Remmer from Albert Villaudy, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the same item as appears as No. 24 on government's [2786] Exhibit 183?

A. It is.

Q. And the entries for the year-ends 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946 are the same in Exhibit M-1 and Exhibit 183? A. They are.

Q. Now we will refer to Item No. 12 on Exhibit M-1, which is stated as "Equity in 21 Club and San Diego Social Club." That is the same item combined as set forth as Items 18 and 19 in government's Exhibit 183, is it not?

A. That is correct

Q. And if you take Items 18 and 19 of government's Exhibit 183, where the interest in the 21 Club and San Diego Social Club has been separated and combine them, that is, add them together, do you not arrive at the same result that you have in entering them as one item, No. 12, in your Exhibit M-1? A. That is correct.

Q. And the year-end balances are the same for the years 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946?

A. They are.

Q. Your next item, No. 13, on Exhibit M-1, is

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

the same, is it not, as Item No. 9 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the amount shown as investment in Cal-Neva, Inc., capital stock, as of December 31, 1946, on Exhibit M-1 is the same as on Exhibit [2787] 183? A. That is correct.

Q. Your next item, No. 14, Mountain City Consolidated Copper Company stock on Exhibit M-1 is the same as Item 10 on Exhibit 183, is it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the balance at December 31, 1946, for that item, which is $2,400, is the same on government's Exhibit 183 and on your Exhibit M-1?

A. It is.

Q. Now the next item is the same, as I view your Item 16, Moraga Estates property, is not that the same item as set forth on Item 14 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the year-end balances as of the ends of the years 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946 for the item, Moraga Estates property, are the same on Exhibit M-1 and Exhibit 183? A. They are.

Q. What is the source of the information from which you obtained the figures set forth as Moraga Estates property?

A. There were exhibits presented by the Title Company in Oakland or Alameda, chosing the purchase of this property, and the testimony of the man who presented it.

Q. And those are the escrow records produced by the Oakland Title & Insurance Company and Alameda East Bay Title Company?

A. I think that is the title. [2788]

Q. And if you eliminated those government exhibits relating to the Moraga Estates property from the record in this case, what record or entry do you find in other books and records here in evidence, showing the investment by Mr. and Mrs. Remmer, or either of them, in that property?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, whether investment for residential property are reflected in the records of a business enterprise or not.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question.

A. I find nothing in the books of these enterprises indicated any investment property.

Q. Or in any other books, other than the government exhibit produced through the two title companies mentioned, is that correct?

A. Well, I know of no other books here of these enterprises.

Q. Your next item, which I believe is identical, is set forth as Item 17 on Exhibit M-1, Richmond Annex property. Is not that identical with Exhibit 183, Item 15? A. It is.

Q. And are not the year-end balances for that item, Richmond Annex property, for the year-ends 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946, the same on Government's Exhibit 183 and on Exhibit M-1?

A. They are.

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. What is the source of the information from which you obtained the figures entered for the item, Richmond Annex property? [2789]

A. There are exhibits presented here by the title company, escrow sheets, and it is my recollection there was some evidence of money borrowed from the Bank of America to buy some of this property.

Q. The records of the Bank of America are Exhibit 40, are they not? That is the record of a loan made by Helen and Dorothy Remmer from the Bank of America?

A. I believe it is. It may possibly be on the Moraga Estates property, I don't recall.

Q. And the escrow records to which you refer relating to the Richmond Annex property, are the records produced as government's exhibits through the witness from Alameda East Bay Title Company and the Oakland Title Insurance Company?

A. I believe that was it, unless the Contra Costa Title Company. This was in Contra Costa County, so it may possibly have been another title company.

Q. There are two sets of title company escrow records in evidence, are there not?

A. That is right.

Q. And with the exception of those two sets of government exhibits, did you find any other record in any of the books, records, exhibits and papers in evidence here, relating to the investment in the Richmond Annex property?

Mr. Avakian: We object, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, for the reason previously stated and in addition, [2790] your Honor, for the reason that it affirmatively appears from the evidence that there are books and records of these enterprises not in evidence here but in the possession of the government, which might contain such information.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I know of no entries in the books and records in evidence here showing any investment in that property.

Q. Now your next item, Item 18, on Exhibit M-1, Moraga Highlands property, is the same, is it not, as Item 21 on government's Exhibit 183?

A. It is.

Q. And the year-end balances for that item at December 31, 1945 and December 31, 1946, are the same on Exhibit M-1 and government's Exhibit 183, are they not? A. They are.

Q. What was the source of the information from which you obtained the data which you have set forth opposite Item 18, Moraga Highlands property?

A. Exhibits of the title company showing the escrow on the particular purchase.

Q. And with the exception of those government exhibits did you find any evidence here in court, any other entry or record relating to the investment in Moraga Highlands property?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, whether any records of the purchase of residential [2791] property are maintained in the records of business enterprises, and also for the further reason it appears from the evidence the prosecution has in its possession other records which have not been produced in court.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I found no evidence in the records in evidence here of any purchase of Moraga Highlands property.

Q. Now the next item on Exhibit M-1 which appears to be the same as on Exhibit 183 is your Item 22, "Notes Payable to Bank of America on Moraga Estates," and is that item not the same as Item 28 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And are not the year-end balances for the items, "Notes Payable to Bank of America on Moraga Estates" the same at December 31, 1943, and December 31, 1944, and the balance of the years on government's Exhibit 183 and your Exhibit M-1?

A. They are.

Q. What is the source of the information from which you made those entries on your Exhibit M-1?

A. Evidence belonging to the Bank of America.

Q. And you refer, do you not, to Exhibit 40? I hand you Exhibit 40, Mr. Semenza, which is the transcript of the account of Helen Remmer and Dorothy A. Remmer——

Mr. Avakian: If it will save time, we are willing to accept Mr. Thompson's designating—I do not think the number [2792] is important, it is the bank.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: The name of the bank here apparently does not appear.

Q. The Oakland County office of the Bank of America, is that the exhibit on which you relied in setting up the item? A. It is.

Q. Your Item 22.

A. I believe the testimony of the bank representative ties to this particular exhibit, so it would be the Bank of America.

Q. And if you eliminated that exhibit, government's Exhibit 40, and the testimony of the bank official who produced it from the record, do you find any evidence here in court, any other record or entry, relating to the obligation of Mr. or Mrs. Remmer and Dorothy Remmer to the Bank of America?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment—that is objected to, your Honor, as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial as to whether a record of a private loan for residential property was maintained in the records of business enterprises. No foundation laid to show that there is any legal requirement that any record be maintained of any such private loans and the record affirmatively shows that there are other documents and records in possession of the prosecution which have not been presented in court.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I found none. [2793]

Q. Your next item on Exhibit M-1, Mr. Semenza, Item 23, entitled "Due Graham and McKay on Purchase of Cal-Neva Stock," is the same, is it not, as Item 29 on government's Exhibit 183?

A. It is.

Q. And the balance shown to be due on the loan at December 31, 1946, is the same on Exhibit M-1 and Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. The next item, Mr. Semenza, under "Liabilities," Item 24 on Exhibit M-1, due Ogden F. Monahan, is the same, is it not, as Item 30 in government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And the entries on that item as of the year-ends 1943 and 1944 are the same on both exhibits, M-1 and 183? A. They are.

Q. On what evidence did you rely in setting up the information in Item 24, due Ogden F. Monahan?

A. There is a judgment, I think of the Superior Court of San Francisco County, in that amount, a photostatic copy of it, I believe, was in evidence here. Ogden Monahan testified, if I recall correctly, that the judgment was satisfied in 1945.

Q. There is also, is there not, a certified copy of the satisfaction of judgment as a government exhibit? A. That's correct.

Q. Now if you eliminated from the record in this case the certified copy of the judgment obtained by Mr. Ogden Monahan [2794] against Mr. Remmer, the certified copy of the satisfaction of that judgment, and the testimony of Ogden F. Monahan, do you find any other entry or record in the exhibits, records, books and documents here in evidence relating to that obligation?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to, your Honor.

The Court: You have covered the grounds in objections to similar questions. Have you any additional grounds?

Mr. Avakian: Yes, your Honor, in addition to the grounds made to similar questions, I would like to make this additional ground, that there is no difference between obligations of this kind and obligations for furniture or an automobile or meals or clothing or anything else. There is no requirement that any business man keep a record in his business record of those personal matters, which have no bearing on the computation of income. They do not enter into business expenses or receipts and the implication of these questions there would be something wrong with them is entirely improper and contrary to the law.

The Court: Objection overruled. That is practically the same ground as the other objections.

Mr. Avakian: Further elaboration of the two, your Honor.

Mr. Thompson: Would you like the question read, Mr. Semenza?

A. It is a question whether I found anything in the books and [2795] records evidencing that liability. I did not.

Q. I also refer, Mr. Semenza, to your Item 25 on Exhibit M-1, due to William J. Graham, showing an obligation at December 31, 1946, of ten thousand dollars. Is that not identical with Item 31 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And upon what evidence and exhibits do you rely in support of that entry?

A. Mr. Graham's testimony.

Q. And he also produced a check, did he not?

A. He also produced a check, I believe, when he was recalled.

Q. And if you eliminated Mr. Graham's testimony and the check he produced from the record and exhibits and papers and documents in this case, do you find any other entry or record relating to that obligation?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to on the grounds previously stated in regard to all these private transactions. They are non-business in nature.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I found none.

Q. I believe, Mr. Semenza, that that covers the items on Exhibit M-1 in which you agree to the decimal point with the same entries made on government's Exhibit 183. Do you know of any others?

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, if I may call attention to one [2796] other, Item 27 on Exhibit M-1 is the same as Item 33 on government's Exhibit 183, as of the year 1946, although it is different as of the year 1945.

Mr. Thompson: That makes a difference to me, Mr. Avakian.

Mr. Avakian: I didn't know whether you overlooked it or not.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: Thank you.

A. I believe that is all, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Now let us investigate the differences between Exhibit M-1 and government's Exhibit 183. The first item I find is your Item No. 5, under the heading "Assets" on Exhibit M-1, due from Mayris Chaney $2,500 as of December 31, 1943. Is there any comparable entry on government's Exhibit 183?

A. There is not.

Q. Upon what testimony or evidence do you base the entry, Item No. 5, on Exhibit M-1?

A. The testimony of Mayris Chaney Martin.

Q. And that was to the effect that she had borrowed $2,500 in cash from Elmer Remmer in August or September of 1943 and had repaid none of it by December 31, 1943, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you know the source of the cash which Mr. Remmer loaned to Mayris Chaney at that time?

A. I do not.

Q. During the year 1943 Cal-Neva was operating, was it not? [2797]

A. I don't know whether it was or not. I was not here at the time.

Q. You do recall the testimony of Mayris Chaney that the $2,500 loan was made at Cal-Neva?

A. Yes, I do. It probably was operating that year.

Q. And is it not true that Mr. Elmer Remmer was the sole active manager of Cal-Neva, Inc., in its operations say during the years of 1940 to 1946?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Avakian: Objected to, your Honor, as being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, having no connection, no materiality and no relevancy to the particular subject of inquiry at this time, re the loan to Mayris Chaney.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I presume he was the general manager. I do not know in the years 1942 to 1945 because I was not here. There is evidence in 1946 that James Jeffress had quite a bit of authority, as he took up most matters with me regarding the operation and financial activities of the company.

Q. And did it not occur, in the operation of Cal-Neva Lodge, that Mr. Remmer would withdraw cash funds from the corporation, of which no record was made and which you had to charge back against him at the end of the year, in order to balance the books?

Mr. Avakian: Object to that as being speculative, calling for conclusion and opinion and hearsay of the witness, unless [2798] the question is limited to the years with which the witness had personal familiarity and I call attention to his testimony a moment ago that he did not have personal knowledge as the years he was in the navy, 1942 to 1945.

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer the question.

A. Well, no evidence of any record of withdrawals were brought into our office, so we proceeded on the other basis in closing the records at the end of the fiscal years.

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And to what do you refer by other basis?

A. Of charging him with all cash that was unaccounted for during the season.

Q. I believe the next item as to which there is a difference between Exhibit M-1 and government's Exhibit 183, is Item No. 7 on Exhibit M-1, "Equity in B. & R. Smoke Shoppe." The same subject matter is dealt with, is it not, Mr. Semenza, in Item 2 on government's Exhibit 183? A. It is.

Q. And as Schedule 1, page 4 of Exhibit M-1, you have set up a statement of computing the net worth of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe as you view the evidence, is that correct? A. I have.

Q. Mr. Semenza, I would like to hand you plaintiff's Exhibit 169. That represents, does it not, a statement of net worth of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe prepared by a government [2799] accountant? A. It does.

Q. And it covers the same subject matter as page 4 of your Exhibit M-1? A. It does.

Q. Now the principal difference between page 4 of Exhibit M-1 and Exhibit 169 is the fact that the government, on Exhibit 169, included as a bank roll the sum of 15 thousand dollars at December 31, 1943, and December 31, 1944, and the sum of 20 thousand dollars as a bank roll at December 31, 1945, and December 31, 1946, whereas the only bank roll item that you included on page 4 of Exhibit

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

M-1 is five thousand dollars at December 31, 1945, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Is it your inference and conclusion, from the evidence, that the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe operated without any bank roll at the end of 1943 and end of 1944? A. Not necessarily.

Q. You have also, have you not, Mr. Semenza, in the statement for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, page 4 of Exhibit M-1, set us as an asset of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe office improvements, fixtures and equipment in amount of $7,489.76 at December 31, 1945, and $8,600.20 at December 31, 1946?

A. I have.

Q. And you have set up as a liability of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe to the Menlo Club the sum of $7,489,76 at the end of [2800] 1945 and the sum of $8,600.20 at the end of 1946? A. I have.

Q. These same identical items have been set up as the personal assets and personal liabilities of Elmer Remmer on government's Exhibit 183, the assets being shown under Item 22, 50-52 Mason Street Office, and the liabilities under Item 26, due to Menlo Club from Mason Street office, is that not correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And the identical amounts have been used in each exhibit, the only difference being that you have concluded that this furniture, office improvements, fixtures and equipment, were assets of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe rather than personal assets of Elmer Remmer?

A. Well, from the testimony of Mr. Maundrell,

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

the fact that the office was at 50-52 Mason, the improvements could have been even for the Menlo Club, if they considered it the Menlo Club office; then they wouldn't have been in the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe. It would appear from the testimony of Mr. Maundrell when he said it was for 50 Mason Street, possibly it would be an amount paid out for 50 Mason Street, and I assume 50 Mason is the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe.

Q. Well, at the time you reached the conclusion that the improvements to the office at 50-52 Mason Street and the fixtures and equipment in amount of approximately $7,500 in 1945 [2801] and an additional amount of some $1,100 in 1946, applied to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, did you have in mind Mr. Maundrell's testimony to the effect that that office was used not only for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, but for the Menlo Club, the 110 Eddy bar, the Day-Night Cigar Store and the 186 Club, and that it was operated in connection with a warehouse where considerable quantity of liquor was stored?

A. I did have it in mind.

Q. You had it in mind?

A. And I would have had to ask Mr. Maundrell how it should be handled, because it might have been allocated over all the enterprises.

Q. Mr. Semenza, at the time you reached the conclusion that the improvements, furniture and equipment in 50-52 Mason Street office was assets of the B. R. Smoke Shoppe, rather than the assets of Elmer Remmer personally, did you have in mind

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

government's Exhibit 24 and that part of it which is a signature card for a bank account of the Crocker First National Bank, San Francisco, in the name of E. F. Remmer or A. F. Pritchett, and the notations on the back of the card: "Business, liquor warehouse, 52 Mason Street, joint business address; W. E. Kyne, introduction address A. F. Pritchett, 56 Mason Street S. E., deposit $700, opened by V. M. Alvord," did you have that in mind at the time you reached that conclusion? [2802]

A. Yes, I was aware of that. There are a number of factors here which might cause another accountant to allocate it to different places. There were a number of partners involved here also.

Q. As a matter of fact, there were different partners or associates for most of the enterprises here involved, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And at the time you reached that conclusion, Mr. Semenza, that these improvements to 50-52 Mason Street office and the furniture and equipment were the assets of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, did you have in mind plaintiff's Exhibit 123? I will read it to you and then show it to you: (Reads Exhibit 123,) A. Yes, I had it in mind.

Q. Mr. Semenza, the net result of the changes you made in your treatment of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe on Exhibit M-1 as compared to the government's treatment on Exhibit 183, is that you reduced the net worth attributable to Elmer Remmer as shown on government's Exhibit 183 at December

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

31 1943, from $18,413.38 to $1,706.69, as shown on Exhibit M-1, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And when you refer to the year 1944, you reduced the net worth from that business from $18,-231.47, as shown on government's [2803] Exhibit 183, to $1,817.61, as shown on Exhibit M-1?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as statement contrary to the evidence, perhaps inadvertently. Mr. Thompson referred to a reduction in net worth of the business, whereas the figure that he read from Mr. Semenza's exhibit is not net worth of the business, but rather Mr. Remmer's 50 per cent equity in the business.

Mr. Thompson: I intended to state, your Honor, he reduced the amount of asset attributable to Mr. Remmer from the amount stated.

A. That is true.

Q. And with reference to the year-end 1945, your treatment has resulted in a reduction of the worth of the asset attributable to Mr. and Mrs. Remmer from $23,344.66 to $4,165.71?

A. That is true.

Q. And as of December 31, 1946, your treatment has resulted in a reduction of that asset from $23,-293.39 to $1,216.58? A. That is correct.

Q. Now with reference to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, Mr. Semenza, and the schedule you prepared on page 4 of Exhibit M-1, in allocating the net worth of the business among various people, you have assigned 50 per cent of the value of that business to Mr. Remmer, 25 per cent of the value of the business to Mr. Kyne and 25 per cent of the value of the business to Mr. Lando, is that [2804] correct? A. That is correct.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And you have set forth partners' capital accounts at the bottom of page 4? A. Yes.

Q. Have you included in the capital account for Elmer F. Remmer any amount for the investment he made in purchasing the business?

A. I gave effect to this in this manner, Mr. Thompson—it was the testimony of Mr. Lando and Mr. Kyne that Mr. Remmer was to have his investment returned to him before they were to draw from the business. From examination of the 1942 and 1943 returns of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, it appeared sufficient profit had been made to return Mr. Remmer's investment to him. Therefore, I concluded that he had received his original investment back and that Mr. Lando also testified to the fact that they settled their markers between them at the end of the year, and I concluded that at that time they withdrew everything from the business but their bank roll.

Q. How much did they leave in for the bank roll?

A. I was unable to determine from the testimony any amount.

Q. Well, as a matter of fact, Mr. Semenza, were you able to determine from the testimony that Mr. Remmer had actually withdrawn any specific

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

amount at any time from the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe?

A. No, I was not able to determine a specific amount. [2805]

Q. You merely assumed that because the income tax return showed that the business earned a certain amount of money during the years 1942 and 1943 that that money was actually withdrawn by Mr. Remmer rather than by Mr. Lando or Mr. Kyne?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as asked and answered and argumentative.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. Mr. Lando indicated that Mr. Remmer was to have his investment back before they were to draw anything and I then took the position that they would have proceeded on that basis. They may have proceeded on another basis, I don't know.

Q. As a matter of fact, there are no books or records here available to show what basis they proceeded on? A. There are none.

Q. And are there any books or records here in evidence which set up partners' capital accounts for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe?

A. There are not.

Mr. Avakian: Objected to for the reason that the evidence factually shows that the prosecution has not produced all the books and records in its possession.

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer the question. [2806]

A. I have already answered.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Mr. Semenza, I would like to hand you government's Exhibits 111, 111A, 111B and 111C, which are daily reminders of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, and also government's Exhibit 157, which is a transcript taken from a daily reminder for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe for the year 1944 which has been lost. Are those the records upon which you relied in setting up the income and expenses of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe for the years in question?

A. Yes, sir, and the tax returns for the year 1946.

Q. Would you like that return also? Is Exhibit 59 the return you have in mind? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe books which you have before you, 111 series of exhibits and Exhibit 157, [2807] are the only books or records of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe as such which are available in evidence, is that correct? A. They are.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And those records consist, do they not, of the single entry each day, either win or lose?

A. That is correct, except for the last year, I believe, for 1946, they show the gross play pay-out, net win or lose.

Q. From that record, Mr. Semenza, can you properly, as an accountant, in accordance with good accounting practice, determine the net income of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe for the years in question?

A. If the income shown in 1944 is correctly recorded, you could.

Q. That is the only year as to which you have any question?

A. There is no record for 1945 so I am not in a position to make any statement as to it.

Q. Is it possible from those records, Mr. Semenza, to determine the gross receipts of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe?

A. Only in those instances where they have reflected them in the records. However, if the net win or loss was correct, it wouldn't make any difference.

Q. If it is correct? A. That's right.

Q. And is there any way you, as an accountant, bearing in mind the testimony of Mr. Kyne that all disbursements were made out [2808] of the funds on hand before the net figures were recorded, is there any way you can determine whether such disbursements were deductible expenses or otherwise? A. There wouldn't be.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And there is no way from the records that you have before you? A. No.

Q. Also bearing in mind, Mr. Semenza, the testimony of Mr. Lando, to the effect, and also I believe Mr. Kyne, that he, Mr. Kyne and Mr. Remmer withdrew money from time to time from the funds on hand and deposited markers, and not having any of the markers available, is it possible to determine how much, if anything, each of those persons withdrew? A. No, it is not.

Q. Now on your Exhibit M-1, page 4, you set up some accounts which you designate "Partners' Capital Accounts," and we have reference to the fact that you have not shown in Mr. Remmer's capital account a credit for his original investment in the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe.

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as an incorrect statement of his testimony. He testified in computing the capital accounts he gave credit for the original investment and made adjustments with respect to it, as he fully explained this morning. The question assumes a factual premise contrary to the witness' testimony this morning. [2809]

The Court: Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: The question is a little difficult.

Mr. Thompson: I will reframe it.

Q. In your schedule designated "Partners'

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Capital Accounts," to which I refer, Mr. Semenza, have you credited Mr. Remmer with his original investment in the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe?

A. I took it in consideration in arriving at this partners' capital account.

Q. And you explained, I believe, the way you took it into consideration is that you assumed that he had been repaid the amount of his capital investment in the years' operations preceding December 31, 1943, is that correct?

A. Based on the testimony of Mr. Kyne and Mr. Lando that Mr. Remmer was to receive his investment back first and that they settled up on the markers at the end of each year, I gave effect to the fact that Mr. Remmer was probably paid back for his original investment.

Q. In view of Mr. Kyne's and Mr. Lando's testimony, is it not a fact that Mr. Remmer originally invested ten thousand dollars in the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, consisting of a payment of $2,500 for the business itself and a contribution of $7,500 for the bank roll? A. That is correct.

Q. And is there any record whatsoever in the records here in [2810] court showing that Mr. Remmer had at any time been repaid that investment?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to, first of all the matter has been covered both before the noon recess and since, and secondly, it is immaterial, because every witness on the stand has testified that the amount of drawings of a partner is immaterial in determining the amount of the partnership profit on which he pays taxes. It is the share of profit and not the amount of drawing that determines the tax, so aside from the fact that it has been fully covered, we make the objection it is immaterial.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: Objection overruled.

(Question read.)

A. I think that is immaterial.

Mr. Thompson: That is not responsive.

The Court: Will you answer the question, please?

A. No, there is not.

Q. And in the event Mr. Remmer had not been repaid his original capital investment of ten thousand dollars, it would be proper accounting practice, would it not, Mr. Semenza, to include that ten thousand dollars as a credit in his capital account?

A. That is correct.

Q. And if that should be included as a credit in his capital account, the entry that you have on your Exhibit M-1 under [2811] 7, "Equity in B. & R. Smoke Shoppe at December 31, 1943," for example would be $11,706.69 instead of $1,706.69?

A. You are assuming also that there must be an increase in the assets in order to offset that.

Q. In the event that there are no books and records showing what the assets are and no books and records showing that the amount of the original investment, which has been proved, has been withdrawn, it would be proper, would it not, to conclude that that asset remained?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incomprehensive. I can't understand how there can be any asset there if the books did not show any asset. I don't know what counsel is driving at, but it seems apparent to me you can't set up an asset value of a partner if you assume in the question that the books show no asset.

Mr. Thompson: I refer to the books in evidence, your Honor.

The Court: Well, objection is overruled. Answer the question.

A. Well, I can't set up an asset unless I saw evidence of it.

Q. There are assets which you have shown as of December 31, 1943, for the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe of $3,413.38, are there not? A. There are.

Q. And in making that computation you have not included any bank roll whatsoever? [2812]

A. That is correct.

Q. So at least to the extent of $3,413.38, on your own figures, there are sufficient assets available, or were, as of December 31, 1943, to offset a portion of any such capital investment that may have been established? A. That is true.

Q. Mr. Semenza, on item No. 8, page 2 of Exhibit M-1, you have set up as an asset of Mr. Remmer's an equity in the Day-Night Cigar Store, is that correct? A. That's correct.

Q. And you have supported that by several schedules, designated schedule 2 and contained on pages 5, 6, 7 and 8 of Exhibit M-1?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. That is correct.

Q. I wish to hand you, Mr. Semenza, Exhibit 164. I also hand you Exhibit 183, which is the replica of the chart marked Exhibit 183. Do you recognize Exhibit 164, Mr. Semenza, as the breakdown made by Agent Morgan in support of the government's computation of Mr. Remmer's net worth in the Day-Night Cigar Store, as set forth as Item 7 on government's Exhibit 183?

A. I do.

Q. Now the first place where you differ from Revenue Agent Morgan in your computation of the net worth of the Day-Night Cigar Store, relates to the item of Accounts Receivable, 186 [2813] Club, does it not, for the years 1943 and 1944?

A. It does.

Q. And do you find that on your balance sheet, page 5 on Exhibit M-1 for the Day-Night Cigar Store for the year ending December 31, 1943, you show that there was no account receivable to the Day-Night Cigar Store from the 186 Club.

A. That is correct, because in 1945 the amount due from the 186 Club was charged to Mr. Remmer's drawing account, so on page 6 the Day-Night Cigar Store I show that amount charged to the 186 Club as a drawing of Mr. Remmer's. Page 6 of Exhibit M-1, schedule No. 2.

Q. What is that amount, Mr. Semenza?

A. $4,878.58, which is the amount shown on Exhibit 164.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Is that taken from Exhibit 119, the ledger account of the Day-Night Cigar Store?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Do you find in Exhibit 119 a record of accounts receivable? A. I do.

Q. What page is that on? Are the pages numbered?

A. They are not numbered. Under the heading "Assets," it is about the 9th or 10th account of the section "Assets."

Q. Does that ledger account, accounts receivable, show a balance due the 186 Club?

A. It does.

Q. As of December 31, 1943? [2814]

A. That is right.

Q. In what amount? A. $4,878.58.

Q. Now also in reference to the year ending December 31, 1944, your page 5, schedule No. 2 of Exhibit M-1, which is the breakdown of the Day-Night Cigar Store, shows no account receivable from the 186 Club, is that correct?

A. It shows that amount due from the 186 Club.

Q. For the year ending December 31, 1944?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you statement——

A. Oh, I beg your pardon—no, it does not.

Q. And Exhibit 164, which is the statement prepared by Revenue Agent Morgan, does show an amount of $9,538.04 as an account receivable at that time, is that correct? A. It does.

Q. And do you find such an entry in the ledger

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

account, Exhibit 119, as an account receivable?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. With further reference, Mr. Semenza, to page 5 of Exhibit M-1, under the heading "Equipment," you have shown a value at each year end for the years 1943, 1944, 1945 and 1946 of $10,400 for equipment of the Day-Night Cigar Store, is that correct? A. That is correct. [2815]

Q. And from what record in evidence did you obtain that figure as to each of those year ends?

A. Exhibit 117 and the next exhibit for the Day-Night—it may be 118, the records for the year 1946.

Q. I hand you Exhibit 117B, Mr. Semenza, is that the record you have in mind?

A. I think so. The last page in the book, "Furniture, Fixtures, Equipment and Buildings," under date January 1, 1946, debit $10,400, balance $10,400.

Q. And is there any inventory or equipment figure under date as of December 31, 1946?

A. There is not.

Q. And is it not a fact that the tax returns filed for the Day-Night Cigar Store for the year 1946 showed an inventory at the end of that year of $2,100?

Mr. Avakian: I am not sure that is correct, your Honor. My recollection is that it shows equipment of $2,100 rather than inventory.

Mr. Thompson: I refer to equipment; I am sorry.

A. That is correct. However, there is no indication in the records that there has been any change in the furniture and fixture account in the year 1946.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Because there was no indication in the record, you carried the figure through for a full year period, is that correct?

A. Yes, you would. [2816]

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, I do not know whether you have all the books before you that you need, but if you need more say so—I want to refer now to page 6 of your Exhibit M-1, which relates to the Day-Night Cigar Store and is headed, "Partners' Capital Accounts," and I direct your attention to the account of Elmer Remmer as set forth on that exhibit, balance December 31, 1943, $15,705.00. How was that figure arrived at?

A. That was taken from general ledger of the Day-Night, Exhibit 117.

Q. Do you have that?

A. It is entitled, "M. E. Kyne Investment Account."

Q. In making the computation of Mr. Remmer's capital account, Mr. Semenza, did you have in mind the testimony of Mr. Silverman and Mr. Kyne to the effect that Mr. Remmer had paid $16,000 for the 186 Club and Day-Night Cigar Store and $6,067 for the inventory, furniture and fixtures of the Day-Night Cigar Store?

Mr. Avakian: That is objected to as assuming facts contrary to the evidence, because the testimony of Mr. Kyne was that the $16,000 was provided not by Mr. Remmer, but by Mr. Kopstake

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

and Mr. Nealis and subsequently reimbursed to Mr. Kopstake and Mr. Nealis out of the profits of the business, and it was only $6,000 paid for the inventory of the Day-Night Cigar Store that was put up by Mr. Remmer.

Mr. Thompson: I believe that is correct statement of [2817] the testimony, your Honor. What I had in mind with reference to the Day-Night Cigar Store was the opening credit entry of $10,400 on ledger sheet 1943, as shown on Exhibit 117, and the testimony the witness has referred to, to the effect that $6,067 was paid for equipment and merchandise of the Day-Night Cigar Store, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And by reference to the books and records of the Day-Night Cigar Store can you account for the difference in that opening credit of $10,400 as related to the testimony of what the business and inventory of the Day-Night Cigar Store actually cost?

A. Well, I used the records, 117, the journal and the cash receipts for its return. The first journal entry is December 1943, setting up $10,400.

Q. Is there any supporting information for that journal entry? A. No, there is not.

Q. Again referring to page 6 of your Exhibit M-1 and the capital accounts there set up, will you state what capital accounts are shown in the books and records of the Day-Night Cigar Store?

A. Wm. E. Kyne Investment account; Wm. E.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Kyne personal account, Sylvan Lando and E. Remmer.

Q. I note that you have placed a footnote on page 6 of Exhibit [2818] M-1 as follows: "In view of Kyne's testimony that Remmer provided the capital, the Wm. E. Kyne Investment Account has been included in the Remmer capital account." Is that the way you treated it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now without the aid of the testimony of Mr. William Kyne, the government witness, and solely by reference to the books and records of the Day-Night Cigar Store, would you be able to determine the true ownership of the credits set forth in the Wm. E. Kyne Investment account?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as assuming facts contrary to the evidence, as inviting speculation, and on the ground there is no foundation laid, particularly in view of the common knowledge we all have that accounting procedure calls for making inquiry of the individual connected with the business in analyzing the records, so it would be completely immaterial unless Mr. Thompson could first establish as a foundation that it would be proper accounting procedure to ignore the testimony of the partners.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I would have to have additional information, which is not in evidence here, as all the records relating to these transactions are not in evidence.

Q. Well then I believe your testimony is you

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

found no records in evidence to determine to your satisfaction the [2819] income of the Day-Night Cigar Store?

A. To my satisfaction from the evidence here in the case.

Q. I am referring to the books and records of the Day-Night Cigar Store.

A. Well, these are not complete, Mr. Thompson. All the records are not in evidence here in this court.

Q. And your computation was made solely from the records that are in evidence?

A. The records and the evidence here.

Q. And you testified, I believe, that in your opinion the books and records maintained by the Day-Night Cigar Store are sufficient and satisfactory, is that correct?

A. Along with the testimony of the witnesses.

Q. Without the assistance of the testimony of the witnesses are they satisfactory?

Mr. Avakian: For what purpose? The question is so general. For determining the income of the business?

The Court: Let us see if the witness understands the question.

Q. Do you understand?

A. Are you asking me sufficient to determine capital accounts of the partners?

Q. I am asking you whether the books and records in evidence, upon which you relied, without the aid of the testimony of any witnesses, are sufficient to enable you to make up the [2820] computations which you made up in Exhibit M-1?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. I could make up a statement of profit and loss for those years from the records.

Q. Could you make up a balance sheet for the years?

A. Yes, except for the capital accounts.

Q. And with reference to the capital accounts, you could not make up such a balance sheet?

A. I could not allocate between the partners if the testimony was missing.

Q. And you would not know, would you, Mr. Semenza, that the entries in the Wm. E. Kyne Investment account should be attributed to Mr. E. Remmer, who also had a capital account in those books?

A. Well, that applies to any account in these books. If you don't have additional information of the records in the business.

Q. The additional information upon which you rely, Mr. Semenza, in determining that the Wm. E. Kyne Investment account should be included in the Remmer capital account, is the testimony of Mr. Kyne, is it not, and not a record?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now in addition, in making the Day-Night Cigar Store computation, you made up profit and loss statements, is that correct?

A. I did. [2821]

Q. For what years?

A. For the year '45 and the year '46.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And you did not make a profit and loss statement and include it in Exhibit M-1 for the year 1944? A. I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. Because the records had already been closed and profit for that year had been reflected in the books.

Q. For the years 1945 and 1946 the entries had not been made in the books and you had to post the books in order to make up a profit and loss statement?

A. I had to post the general ledger accounts.

Q. Are any of the 186 Club operations included in the schedules you have compiled for the Day-Night Cigar Store?

A. They show amounts advanced to and from the 186 Club in the balance sheet of December 31, 1945, and '46.

Q. With that exception none of the other operations of the 186 Club are included in your Day-Night Cigar Store computation?

A. From the records here I hadn't determined that.

Q. Your Item 9 in Exhibit M-1 is identified as "Equity in 110 Eddy Street," is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that refers to the same investment as Item 5 of government's Exhibit 183? [2822]

A. That is correct.

Q. The differences betwen your computation and that made by the government agent is quite in-

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

significant as to that business, is that true?

A. I don't understand.

Q. The differences between your computation and the computation made by the government agent, Mr. Harkness, are quite insignificant as to that business, so far as net worth of the business itself for the years in question are concerned?

A. The only difference is I treated it as a partnership and the revenue agents had taken all the net worth as belonging to Mr. Remmer.

Mr. Thompson: May I have the question?

(Question read.)

A. That is correct.

Q. In connection with the 110 Eddy Club, Mr. Semenza, you rely upon the books and records of the 110 Eddy Club for your computation?

A. I did, and the testimony in this case.

Q. I hand you Exhibit 112, I believe is the book record of the 110 Eddy Club. Are capital accounts set up in that book, Exhibit 112?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. In whose names?

A. Kyne, Cavani, Turner, Remmer, Kyne [2823] Trustee.

Q. And in your computation of the net worth of 110 Eddy Street enterprise, as shown on page 10 of your Exhibit M-1, you have included the Wm. Kyne Trustee account as part of Mr. Remmer's capital account, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. By reference solely to the books and records of the 110 Eddy Street enterprise, are you able to determine that the Wm. Kyne Trustee account was actually Mr. Remmer's account and should have been included in his capital account?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as contrary to the evidence, which contains testimony of the witness regarding it and calls for speculation and no foundation is laid to show that the procedure suggested in the question would be proper accounting procedure.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question.

A. It is necessary for me to use Mr. Kyne's testimony along with the records for me to draw that conclusion.

Q. The schedule you have set up entitled "Partners' Capital Accounts" commences with a balance as of December 31, 1943, does it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. And as of that date have you set up any account for Mr. Arthur Pratt? A. I have not.

Q. And at the time you set up the schedule No. 3 on page 10 [2824] of Exhibit M-1, did you have in mind the testimony of Mr. Arthur Pratt, regarding his investment in the 110 Eddy Street enterprise, and his testimony to the effect that in the spring of 1944 he received approximately $6,800 for his investment and the testimony of Mr. Kyne that Mr. Remmer had paid Mr. Pratt for his investment?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as a misstatement of the evidence. Mr. Pratt's testimony was in March of 1944 he received the sum, I believe, of $4,400; approximately that amount, and that he was given credit in the amount of $2,000 that he owed Mr. Remmer on account of money previously advanced to him, that the only amount of money that changed hands in 1944 was the figure of four thousand odd dollars; I believe it is 48 hundred.

Mr. Thompson: The total amount, as I recall, was $6,800. I believe Mr. Avakian is correct in what he says, part of it is represented by loan which Mr. Remmer had previously made.

A. I was aware of Mr. Pratt's testimony and the records indicate $3,400 was paid out of this business to Mr. Pratt.

Q. On what date?

The Court: We will take a recess for 15 minutes.

MR. SEMENZA

resumes the witness stand on further

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

(Last question read.)

A. March 1, 1944.

Q. How was that payment, in what form? Does it show? A. Check.

Q. On what account?

A. I don't know, I would have to have——

Q. That is record of 110 bank account, you have to have it?

A. No, not record of 110 bank account, but it is general ledger. I would have to have disbursements ledger. It is probably Exhibit 112. There are two books under 112.

Q. I hand you Exhibit 112.

A. Check No. 532 under date of March 1, 1944, $3400.

Q. And how was that charged on the books of 110 Eddy Street?

A. It was charged to Arthur R. Pratt.

Q. How was it credited?

A. It was credited to cash in that entry.

Q. And is there any entry in the book which

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

indicates whether it was just a payment of money out of the business or whether it was charged against the account of any individual person?

A. Well, ultimately it was charged to the account of Arthur R. Pratt, closed in profit and loss and following that it was [2826] closed into the Kyne Investment Account.

Q. And the Kyne Investment Account is the one that you have included in Mr. Elmer Remmer's capital account? A. That is correct.

Q. Is there any record in the books of 110 Eddy Street showing that Mr. Arthur R. Pratt, as of December 31, 1943, was a partner in that enterprise? A. No.

Q. And in your schedules setting up the capital accounts on pages 9 and 10 of Exhibit M-1, you did not include Arthur R. Pratt as a partner in the enterprise, is that correct?

A. I did indirectly by concluding, in view of the fact that payment of Arthur Pratt was charged to the Wm. E. Kyne account that the receipt of $3400 for Mr. Pratt was probably included in that Kyne Investment Account. Mr. Pratt testified to the fact that he had paid that to Mr. Remmer at the time.

Q. At the time you failed to designate Mr. Arthur R. Pratt as a partner as of December 31, 1943, did you have in mind the evidence that Mr. Pratt and Mr. Remmer were the only persons who had made any investment in that business?

Mr. Avakian: That is an incorrect statement of

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Semenza's testimony. Mr. Semenza testified he indirectly included Mr. Pratt's capital account by reason of the facts he explained and in making an incorrect statement of his [2827] testimony that Mr. Thompson just assumed in his question——

Q. In your designation of capital accounts on Exhibit M-1, pages 9 and 10, did you name Mr. Arthur Pratt as a partner at any point?

A. No, I did not name him, but I gave effect to his being in partnership through the Elmer F. Remmer account.

Q. In determining who were partners in the enterprise during the year 1943 and at the end of 1943, did you have in mind plaintiff's Exhibit 80, which is the partnership return of income for 1943, for the 110 Eddy Street and Schedule J thereon, showing names and addresses of each partner, W. E. Kyne, San Francisco, with the figure $6,850.49, and Arthur R. Pratt, Portland, Oregon, $3,425.24, and other partners named thereon?

A. I did in this way—Mr. Kyne further testified that anything in which he was interested, Mr. Remmer also had a half-interest. Consequently, in allocating the 1943 profit, I allocated one-third to Mr. Kyne and two-thirds to the Remmer account, giving effect to one-third being for Mr. Pratt.

Q. On the bottom of page 9 of Exhibit M-1, you have set up account for 110 Eddy Street, "Capital Accounts per books" and at the top of page 10 an account, "Capital Accounts as Adjusted." What adjustments were made by you in those accounts?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. Just following "Capital Accounts as Adjusted" is analysis of the partners' capital accounts from December 31, 1943, thru [2828] December 31, 1946. It was necessary to allocate the 1942 profit and the 1943 profit, as the records had not allocated it at the end of 1943. So that the distribution of 1942 profit as shown and the distribution of 1943 profit as shown, I arrived at the balance after adjustments December 31, 1943, of $3877.79 to Kyne, $3121.74 for Cavani, $910.51 for Turner, and $28,956.18 for Mr. Remmer. I follow with the drawings of partners during 1944, and any capital contributions made by the partners in 1944 are credited and the profit of 1944 is allocated to the partners and I arrive at the balances in the partners' account of December 31, 1944, and show them in recap up above under "Capital Accounts as Adjusted December 31, 1944." Then I show the drawings during 1945 and distribution of 1945 profits and arrive at the balance of December 31, 1945, and show the balance of the various partners' accounts in the schedule above at December 31, 1945. Then from balance of December 31, 1945, I deducted 1946 drawings of partners and the 1946 losses, arriving at the capital accounts of December 31, 1946, as shown in the group in "Capital Accounts as Adjusted December 31, 1946."

Q. And the capital account you show for Mr. Remmer as of December 31, 1946, is $24,820.33?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, during the calendar years 1943, 1944,

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

1945 and 1946, in making your net worth computation, Exhibit M-1, page 2, [2829] which is the large chart, and determining Mr. Remmer's interest in 110 Eddy Street, you have considered the following partners, have you not: William E. Kyne, Frank Cavani, Turner and Elmer F. Remmer?

A. I have also given effect to Mr. Pratt.

Mr. Thompson: Yes, I understand from what you previously testified as to that.

Q. Those are the four persons you have considered partners in making your computations?

Mr. Avakian: Five, your Honor.

A. Five with Mr. Pratt.

The Court: What is the question now, four or five?

Mr. Thompson: Five; he includes Mr. Pratt.

Q. Mr. Pratt, according to your computations, Mr. Semenza, was in the picture only during the first few months of 1944, is that correct, and 1943?

A. 1943, according to Mr. Pratt's testimony.

Q. Up until March of 1944?

A. That is correct.

Q. After that he was out and all of his investment was attributed to Mr. Remmer?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, in considering those four persons as partners, did you give effect to Government's Exhibit 153, which is headed, "Statement of William E. Kyne"? (Reads exhibit.) [2830]

A. I was aware of that statement.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. You were aware of the statement?

A. I was.

Q. Were you also aware, Mr. Semenza, of the testimony of Mr. Frank Cavani, to the effect that he was to pay $16,000 for a one-fourth interest in 110 Eddy Street, and that that payment to Mr. Remmer was to be made out of his share of the profits?

Mr. Avakian: I think perhaps that is inadvertently misstated. I believe his testimony was 15 thousand dollars, but my objection is not based on that point, but rather on the point it is an incomplete and therefore misleading recital of Mr. Cavani's testimony. Mr. Cavani also testified that he was a partner and was to use his partnership share of the profits to pay for his interest in the assets of the business.

Mr. Thompson: I do not believe any one is bound by his characterization of what he calls himself in the business, your Honor.

The Court: You can take the matter up on redirect.

Mr. Avakian: I think it is improper cross-examination and an incorrect recital of the testimony.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I do not think that has any bearing——

The Court: Your statement is correct, but I do not take it as an erroneous statement of the testimony. [2831]

Mr. Avakian: I believe that is the only testimony Mr. Cavani gave on that, your Honor.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: Proceed.

A. I do not think that has bearing on Mr. Cavani's capital account here.

Q. Did you hear the testimony? A. I did.

Q. And in setting up Mr. Elmer F. Remmer's capital account in 110 Eddy Street, have you given any effect to that testimony?

A. No; no reason to.

Q. You understand, in view of Mr. Cavani's testimony, he could not, without Mr. Remmer's consent, withdraw any money from the 110 Eddy Street partnership?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment—that is objected to as calling for legal interpretation of the testimony of another witness, based on opinion and conclusion of the witness, not a matter of accounting but a matter of law.

The Court: Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer the question.

A. Even though partners had an agreement to that effect, they still might withdraw money. Mr. Cavani did have funds which he withdrew [2832] here.

Q. But with the exception of one withdrawal of $1500 during those four years, the others were all for taxes, were they not, income taxes?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, what the purpose was. The important thing is money was withdrawn. It doesn't matter what Mr. Cavani used it for.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. The records indicate outside the $1500 that he withdrew it for the specific purpose of paying income taxes.

Q. And at the time the sum of $1500 was withdrawn by Mr. Cavani, as shown by the books, does it not also appear that at the same time Mr. Turner withdrew $1500 and Mr. Remmer withdrew $3,000?

A. I don't recall. I recall that each of them drew—that Mr. Turner did draw $1,500 and Mr. Remmer drew $3,000. It may have been the same year and at the same time.

Q. I mean approximately the same time?

A. I believe so.

Q. And if the partnership agreement was that Mr. Cavani and Mr. Turner were to leave their share of the profits in 110 Eddy until Mr. Remmer had been paid the agreed-upon price for the interest in the business, would it not be proper accounting practice to show that that money credited to Mr. Cavani's partnership account was not subject to withdrawal by him? [2833]

Mr. Avakian: I don't understand the question at all.

The Court: Maybe the witness does.

Mr. Avakian: Yes, but I am entitled to understand it so I can state my objection. It is incomprehensive to me. It appears to me to call for a legal conclusion but it is so confusing I can't understand it.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: Read the question.

(Question read.)

A. I don't see any reason why it should be.

Q. Under that sort of an agreement, Mr. Semenza, would it be a proper accounting practice, in determining the net worth of Mr. Remmer at the time, to show the $16,000 to be an account receivable to him from Mr. Cavani?

A. I do not think so.

Q. In other words, you just don't pay any attention to the $16,000, as an accountant?

A. That's right.

Q. You also, Mr. Semenza, as part of your Exhibit M-1, have set up schedule No. 4, relating to the Menlo Club, is that correct? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that schedule No. 4 and the information derived therefrom, is set up as Item No. 10 on Exhibit M-1, the large chart, and the same character of information is set up as Item 6 on Government's Exhibit 183, is that correct?

A. That is correct. [2834]

Q. I hand you Exhibit 165, Mr. Semenza. Exhibit 165 is the breakdown statement made by the agent Weaver, is it not, relating to the Menlo Club?

A. It is.

Q. And so far as the assets of the Menlo Club are concerned, both as to the year ends 1945 and

BLURRED COPY

1946, your statement and Mr. Weaver's statement agree, is that correct? A. They do.

Q. You have, however, as a liability of the Menlo Club for the year ending December 31, 1945, set up an item of $26,464.18, which was not included as a liability by Mr. Weaver in his statement, Exhibit 165? A. That is correct.

Q. And you have noted that item of $26,464.18 as a liability for checks issued in January, 1946, which were entered in December, 1945, disbursements record? A. That is correct.

Q. In so entering the item of $2,464.18, have you considered the Menlo Club to be on a cash or accrual basis?

A. I considered it to be on an accrual basis, based on the records maintained.

Q. And is it your understanding that under the Internal Revenue Code and regulations in effect at that time, it was up to the taxpayer to elect whether he should report on a cash or accrual basis? [2835]

A. It was.

Q. I draw your attention, Mr. Semenza, to Government's Exhibit 89, designated "Partnership Return of Income 1945 Menlo Club," signed Elmer F. Remmer, and to the question on the last sheet of the return, Question No. 4: "Check whether this return was prepared on cash or accrual basis." Will you state what was checked?

A. The return shows cash basis.

Q. Also in connection with the Menlo Club liabilities as shown on your Schedule No. 4, page 12 of your Exhibit M-1 for the year ending December 31,

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

1946, you have included a liability as $17,264.58 for checks issued in January, 1947, which were entered in December, 1946, disbursement record, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And that liability was not included as a liability in the statement of the Menlo Club prepared by Mr. Weaver, which is Exhibit 165?

A. It was not. My reason for including it in there was the fact that the services and purchases were included in the income tax returns for 1946 and 1945, indicating that they wanted to be on an accrual basis.

Q. I would like to direct your attention, Mr. Semenza, to plaintiff's Exhibit 90, designated "Partnership Return of Income 1946 Menlo Club," and to the question section at the [2836] bottom of the third page of the printed form return and the question No. 5: "Check whether this return was prepared on cash or accrual basis." Will you state which is checked?

A. The return shows cash basis. However, the information is prepared on the accrual basis. It is true it has been prepared on the accrual basis.

Q. Do you have a general ledger of the Menlo Club for the year 1945? A. I do not.

Q. And do you have an account set up in the books and records of the Menlo Club here in evidence showing accounts payable in the amount you have set forth on your Exhibit No. M-1, page 13, in amount of $26,464.18 for the year ending December

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

31, 1945, and in the amount $17,264.58 at December 31, 1946?

A. Cash disbursements record discloses these items listed in December. Checks issued in January, and you would have to give effect to that in preparing these statements.

Mr. Thompson: I would like to have the answer stricken and request the witness to answer the question.

Mr. Avakian: I think it is responsive.

(Question and answer read.)

The Court: The question may go out. Listen to the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: Answer yes or no. [2837]

A. No.

Mr. Golden: May he explain?

The Court: He did not ask to explain.

Mr. Golden: I am asking for him. He is a defense witness.

The Court: Very well. There is nothing before the Court.

Mr. Golden: May the witness explain his answer?

The Court: If he wants to, but he didn't ask to.

Mr. Golden: May we ask him if he wishes to?

The Court: You can do that when you have him on redirect examination if you want to.

Q. Also in the Menlo Club statement, Mr.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Semenza, you have made some adjustments for depreciation on your depreciation schedule which differ slightly from those set forth by Mr. Weaver in Exhibit 165? A. I have.

Q. In addition, in connection with your computations with relation to the Menlo Club, you have set up accounts designated "Partners Capital Accounts" on page 13 and have made computations reconciling the cash disbursements by the Menlo Club for the years 1945 and 1946, is that correct?

A. I did.

Q. On page 14 of Schedule No. 4 of Exhibit M-1, which is headed "Computation of Revised Net Income and Determination of Cash Withdrawn from Business, year ending December 31, [2838] 1945," you show, do you not, that during that year Mr. Remmer withdrew cash to the amount of $120,127.31, is that correct? A. I do.

Q. I show you Exhibit 125, ledger entitled "Menlo Club," and Exhibit 129, entitled "Menlo Bar 1946." Are those the records that you had in mind in making that determination?

A. What determination?

Q. That Mr. Remmer withdrew cash from the Menlo Club business amounting to $120,127.31 during the year 1945?

A. I think that is Exhibits 127, 128 and 126, probably.

Q. I will hand you Exhibits 127, 126 and 128.

A. I relied on these exhibits and the testimony of Mr. Kyne, to the effect that the funds from the club operation went to the safe. Consequently, in determining what happened to the cash, all the information is in the records to determine what cash was handled through the Menlo Club, and his testimony that cash went to the box and came out of the box, I drew my conclusion that Mr. Remmer must have drawn the cash out if it went into the box and it was not all returned to the business, so the sum of $120,127.31 is the amount of unaccounted-for cash, as shown by the information in the exhibits.

BLURRED COPY

Q. You testified on direct examination, I believe, Mr. Semenza, that it was proper accounting practice to set up in a capital account for any alleged partner the amount of his [2839] capital investment in the enterprise, plus the amount of his distributive share of the profits for each year, is that correct?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as not a correct statement of the evidence because his testimony was that that procedure should be done with respect to partners. He did not use the word "alleged" partners; that is in Mr. Thompson's question, but not in Mr. Semenza's testimony.

The Court: Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: That probably is right.

Mr. Thompson: For any partner in the enterprise, that is all right. I don't mind taking out "alleged."

A. In a partnership you credit the partner with his investment in the partnership and with his share of the profits yearly, less any drawings during the year, or any additional amounts of investment of subsequent years, after the original.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. There is, is there not, in the Menlo Club records, a ledger sheet as to capital account of Elmer Remmer? A. There is.

Q. And will you turn to it, please, and state what amounts of withdrawals from the Menlo Club are recorded on that capital account for the year 1945?

A. One thousand dollars is shown here. However, that might not include all the amounts that he withdrew during the year. [2840]

Q. Your answer is, I understand, that one thousand dollars is recorded as a withdrawal for 1945 on Mr. Remmer's account?

A. That is correct.

Q. For the year 1946, you made a computation, setting forth on page 15 of Exhibit M-1, the amount of cash withdrawn by Mr. Remmer from the Menlo Club for the year 1946, and arrive at a withdrawal of $17,382.56, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you turn to Mr. Remmer's capital account in the Menlo Club books and state the amount of withdrawals made by Mr. Remmer during the year 1946, as shown by the books by that capital account?

A. There are a large number of them; three or four thousand dollars.

The Court: Well, we will take our recess now.

MR. SEMENZA

resumed the witness stand on further

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Mr. Semenza, you have before you the Menlo Club books and records, Exhibits 125 to 129, inclusive? A. I have.

Q. And also defendant's Exhibit M-1, the statement you prepared? A. I have.

Q. And Government's Exhibits 165 and 183?

A. I have, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Now, in preparing your schedules for the Menlo Club, which consists of several pages, designated schedule No. 4 in Exhibit M-1, you have included in those schedules, have you not, the operations not only of the Menlo Club itself, but also of Tiny's Restaurant and the Menlo Bar?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as assuming facts contrary to the evidence. The uncontradicted evidence is that the Menlo Club was one enterprise, one partnership, containing a card room, and bar and restaurant.

The Court: Counsel is merely inquiring of the witness if the schedules included—— [2842]

Mr. Avakian: He said "did you not," which is a

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

purported recital of evidence and it is contrary to the uncontradicted evidence it is one enterprise, one partnership, all three companies contained in one unit.

The Court: Objection overruled.

(Question read.)

A. Yes, because the Menlo Club, according to my understanding, embraced the restaurant, bar and club room and the term "Menlo Club" is the term used for that partnership.

Q. Well, Mr. Weaver did the same thing in preparing his schedule 165, did he not?

A. He did, Mr. Thompson.

Q. As I recall, at the recess yesterday afternoon, we were referring to page 14 of schedule No. 4, Exhibit M-1, in which you had made a computation of cash withdrawn from the business, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. The first item on that schedule, Mr. Semenza, reads: "Gross Income per Return and Amended Return Filed, $266,164.50." Is the information that you have set forth therein supported by the books and records of the Menlo Club which you have before you? A. Yes, they are.

Q. And that amount of gross income was entered in the ledgers themselves? [2843]

A. For the year——

Q. That is for the year 1945.

A. For the year 1945, as I recall the testimony from the club operation, the records of the club portion had been lost and they used a figure based on the 1944 operation of the predecessor proprietor.

Q. By the records which have been lost of the Menlo Club, you refer to the poker sheets of the card room operation, is that correct? A. I do.

Q. And so the only source you had available for that figure of $266,164.50 was the Menlo Club partnership return of income for 1945, and the amended return? A. That is correct.

Q. Now the next item is "Expenses per Return as Amended, Excluding Depreciation and Amortization, $141,182.14." What is the source of that figure?

A. That is from the tax return and from the exhibits.

Q. And is that figure supported by the books and records of the Menlo Club?

A. To the extent that the restaurant operation and the bar operation are recorded in these records.

Q. Are the club room operations for the year 1945 recorded in those records?

A. They are not. [2844]

Q. And the same estimate of expenses for the club room operation was made for the year 1945 in connection with expenses that was made in connection with gross income?

A. That is my understanding of the testimony.

Q. Your next item on that schedule is "Advance as Adjusted, $5,951.53," is that taken from the books and records of the Menlo Club, Exhibits 125 to 129?

A. That is taken from my schedule page 13, "Reserve Depreciation."

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. And what is the source of the information from which you compiled the schedule "Reserve for Depreciation," page 13 of Exhibit M-1?

A. The records here and Mr. Maundrell's testimony.

Q. Were the books and records themselves sufficient to support that figure of $5,951.53 without the assistance of Mr. Maundrell's testimony?

A. Oh, they may possibly have been.

Q. The next item is "Amortization of Leasehold, $6,666.67," what is the source of that figure on page 14 of Exhibit M-1?

A. Well, that is based on ten-year period of amortization, the same basis as Mr. Weaver used for the Menlo Club.

Q. Then you show a net income for the year as revised, $112,364.16, that is just a mathematical computation, is it not?

A. That is the difference between gross income and the expenses. [2845]

Q. And you deduct from that salaries of partners, $11,726.90, to what salaries do you refer?

A. There are salaries listed on the return that have been paid to the active partners in the businesses.

Q. And by active partners to whom do you refer, by name, do you recall?

A. Nelson and Maundrell, Ditto, Fricker, and Turner, I believe all had salaries.

Q. And are those salaries for the year 1945, recorded on the ledger accounts, books and records of the Menlo Club for that year?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

A. It is my recollection they were.

Q. Now, you arrived at a net income to be allocated to partners, so designated, on page 14, $100,637.26 for the year 1945, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you then made a computation of cash to be accounted for at December 31, 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you first add back certain non-cash items included in your computation of net income as follows: depreciation, $5,951.53; amortization of leasehold, $6,666.67; deduction in inventory between May 1, 1945, and December 31, 1945, $5,860.73; checks issued in January, 1946, recorded as December, 1945, disbursements paid, not shown as outstanding at December 31, 1945, [2846] $26,464.18. You have a total of non-cash items of $44,943.11, and adding that to the net profit you have computed, you arrive at a figure of $145,580.37, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now that figure, according to your computations, represents the amount of cash from the operations of the Menlo Club during the year 1945, which should be accounted for in the books and records of the Menlo Club, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now you have found a record of the disbursement of a certain portion of that cash and have accounted for it from the books and records of the club? A. I have.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And those items are as follows: petit cash office, $800; bank roll, $10,000; advance to 50 Mason Street, $7,489.76; deposit Pacific Gas & Electric Company, $1,030; deposit on lease, $4,000; Neon sign, $500; equipment, $920; balance in Crocker National Bank, $713.30; giving a total of $25,453.06, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. Now, with the exception of the petit cash fund of $800 and the bank roll of $10,000, those items of cash are accounted for by withdrawals by check from the account maintained at the Crocker National Bank in the name of Harold H. Maundrell, is that correct? [2847]

A. Petit cash fund and bank roll are evidenced by that, is that what you say?

Q. No, I say, with the exception of petit account and bank roll, the other items are evidenced by withdrawals by check from the bank account in the Crocker National Bank maintained in the name of Mr. Maundrell?

A. That is right, except for the balance in the Crocker National Bank, which is evidenced——

Q. By the bank statement itself?

A. That is correct.

Q. From the books and records of the Menlo Club, those items are the only items of cash withdrawal which you could account for, is that correct?

A. No, there are some other items indicated as drawn by Mr. Remmer.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. What are those items?

A. Twenty-five thousand dollars account Remmer, August 8, 1945.

Q. What is that item?

A. Payment to Gene Schriber, $25,000.

Q. And did you mistakenly fail to include that in this schedule 4, page 14? A. No, I did not.

Q. Why did you not include it?

A. Because, I was determining the amount that Mr. Remmer withdrew from the business. There is $120,127.31 would be included [2848] in that figure.

Q. And so you do have a record of one payment by the Menlo Club for the account of Mr. Remmer of $25,000, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir, and I also have another one, November 26, check No. 1555, to Matte Silverman, $6,000, charged to Mr. Remmer. I have another one here on the same date, No. 1570, the St. Francis Hotel for $12.97.

Q. That is in 1945?

A. Yes, Mr. Thompson. Those payments, along with the testimony of the witness that cash went to Mr. Remmer's box, I charged him with the cash unaccountable, which included these items for which there were records.

Q. The total items for which there were records, as you have recited them, is $31,012.97, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. So if you add that to the figure of $25,453.06, which you included in your record of cash accounted for by the books on page 14 of Exhibit M-1, we can determine the actual amount of cash expenditures accounted for by the books of the Menlo Club in 1945, is that correct? A. That is correct.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. Have you made that computation?

A. It should be 57 thousand dollars, approximately.

Q. Would $56,466.03 be correct?

A. Yes. [2849]

Q. So out of a total of $145,580.37 cash which the books show to have been available in the operations of the Menlo Club for the year 1945, the books themselves account for expenditure of only $56,466.03, is that correct?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment—that is objected to, your Honor, as immaterial and as misleading in inference, because the testimony of every accountant in this case, including government accountants, is that in the taxation of partnership income the disbursements to the proprietors are immaterial. Net income of the partnership is computed not on the basis of withdrawals of the partners, but on the basis of receipts and expenses of the partnership and that the payment that is taxed to the partner is the percentage share of the profits and the amount he withdraws is immaterial, but simply is reflected in his capital account as being the remaining balance of his investment, so the question is immaterial, that being the uncontradicted testimony of the government accountants as well as Mr. Semenza.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

(Question read.)

A. That is correct. However, I have accounted for all the cash.

Q. And you have accounted for that cash by assigning to Mr. Remmer the withdrawal of all unaccounted-for cash?

A. I have, because the other partners, there was no testimony [2850] from them that they withdrew any more from the Menlo Club than what is shown in their particular accounts and the testimony also indicates that case went into Mr. Remmer's box, so he must be accountable for the difference.

Q. Isn't it true, Mr. Semenza, that the testimony shows that cash from the Menlo Club was kept either in the Menlo Club safe or in the safe at 50-52 Mason Street?

A. That is correct. If it went to 50 Mason Street, it went into Mr. Remmer's box, according to the testimony as I recall it.

Q. Because that was Mr. Remmer's office, is that correct? A. That is right.

Q. That is his personal office? That was not the Menlo Club office?

A. Well, I don't know about that either, because there is indication that the Menlo office was at 50 Mason. The testimony shows that Mr. Remmer had a box in the safe.

Q. And the testimony also shows, does it not, that various of the enterprises had boxes in the safe? A. That is correct.

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. Now as far as you know, that unaccounted for cash is still in the safe, either at the Menlo Club or at 50 Mason Street? A. As far as I know.

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as speculative, calling for opinion and conclusion of the witness and so far as it relates [2851] to where that money is now in 1952, would be immaterial and incompetent.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question.

A. Unless I counted the funds in the box, I would not know where it was.

Q. Do you or do you not know whether or not that cash is still in the box?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as asked and answered.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. I wouldn't know where it was.

Q. And do you or do you not know whether that cash still remains as an asset of the Menlo Club or as an asset of Mr. Elmer Remmer?

A. I have not examined any records subsequent to this year or to the evidence here in the case, so I wouldn't know.

Q. Well, do you know or do you not know whether it remained as an asset there of the Menlo Club or of Mr. Elmer Remmer at December 31, 1945? A. Not that I know of.

Q. You do not know, is that correct?

A. No.

Q. And that cash, so far as you know, still may have remained as an asset of the Menlo Club or Mr.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Elmer Remmer at December 31, 1946, is that correct?

Mr. Avakian: Objected—asked and answered at least three [2852] times, is repetitious. The witness has already said he doesn't know and the repeated asking of questions is improper and apparently simply for the purpose of trying to create some sort of inference through asking of the question.

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer.

A. From the evidence here there is no indication that there was any cash in existence December 31, 1945, and that is why I charged it to Mr. Remmer as a drawing and have given no effect to it as an asset of his or of the Menlo Club.

Q. There is no record of whether or not cash was or was not in existence, is that what you mean?

A. There is evidence that some cash was in existence and there is no record of the amount.

Q. There isn't any record of how, when, or for what purpose any of that cash was disbursed?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. So the effect of your computation is that for the year 1945, you have assigned to Mr. Remmer, as a withdrawal from the Menlo Club, the sum of $63,661.28, which is not accounted for in the books and records of the Menlo Club, is that correct?

A. That is correct. However, that has no effect on the income of the Menlo Club for the year.

Q. In your computation of Mr. Remmer's capital account on page 13 of Exhibit M-1, you have entered the following items for the year 1945: Investment in assets acquired May 1, 1945, [2853] $175,000; net profit for 1945 as revised, $40,254.90; withdrawals in 1945, $120,127.31; balance December 31, 1945, $95,127.59, is that correct?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

A. That is correct.

Q. And it is that figure of $95,127.59 which you have transferred to page 2 of Exhibit M-1, which is the duplicate of the large chart before the jury under Item 10, December 31, 1945, $95,127.59?

A. That is correct, Mr. Thompson.

Q. Mr. Semenza, if you add back to Mr. Remmer's capital account the sum of $63,661.28, which you assume was withdrawn by him from the Menlo Club in 1945, what is the figure at which you arrive as his net worth in the Menlo Club at the end of that year?

A. Approximately 158 thousand dollars. I have done the same as Mr. Weaver except I have allocated the withdrawals and the profits for the year among the partners of the Menlo Club.

Mr. Thompson: I would like to ask the latter part be stricken. All I asked the witness to do is to make his computations.

The Court: It may go out.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, may we be heard?

The Court: No.

Mr. Avakian: We may not be heard, your Honor?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

The Court: No, it is clearly not [2854] responsive.

Q. And your answer is that if you should add back into the capital account of Mr. Remmer, as of December 31, 1945, the sums of money which you have assumed were withdrawn by him, his capital interest in the Menlo Club as of that date would have been approximately $160,000?

Mr. Avakian: That is objected to as the very same question just asked and answered.

The Court: Objection overruled.

A. It would be that sum. However, I would have to likewise add an asset of equal amount to my balance sheet.

Q. That's right; and that would be on the basis that the Menlo Club records and tax returns indicate that that amount of money had been acquired by the Menlo Club during the year 1945, and that there is no record of its disbursement?

A. That would be on the basis of the assumption that the cash is still present.

Q. And as I understand you, there is no record it is not still present?

A. There is no evidence that it is not present in the Menlo Club.

Q. Itself?

A. And I wouldn't know whether it was present any place else.

Q. The Menlo Club, during the year 1945, maintained a bank account, did it not, in the Crocker

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

National Bank in the name of Harold H. [2855] Maundrell? A. It did.

Q. And that was used for the operations of the Menlo Club, bar and restaurant and card room?

A. To some extent.

Q. Was it used exclusively for those operations?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Do you know whether or not all the cash receipts of the Menlo Club were deposited in that bank account?

A. I do not believe they were.

Q. You have made a similar computation and reconciliation of cash withdrawn for the year 1946, is that correct, and that is set forth on page 15 of your Menlo Club exhibit, schedule No. 4?

A. That is correct.

Q. Your first item is "Gross Income Per Return and Amended Return, $369,781.85." What is the source of that figure?

A. The source of that figure is the records of the Menlo Club for the year 1946, and the tax return.

Q. And do the records of the Menlo Club for the year 1946 and the tax return for the year 1946, agree as to the gross income received in the operations during that year?

A. They do, as far as I was able to determine.

Q. And that was by reference to the ledgers that you have before you?

A. That is correct. [2856]

Q. The next item is "Expenses Per Return,

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Excluding Depreciation and Amortization, $274,-225.28." What is the source of that figure?

A. The records of the Menlo Club and tax return.

Q. And the records of the club and tax return agree as to that figure? A. That is right.

Q. And the total of those expenses, $274,225.28, were actually recorded in the books and records of the Menlo Club for 1946?

A. As far as I was able to determine.

Q. You did make an effort, as an accountant, to determine that? A. I did.

Q. Your next item is "Less Items of Repairs and Replacements Considered to be Capital Items rather than Expenses, $2350.16." Is that item also taken from the books and records of the Menlo Club?

A. It was taken from testimony here of Mr. Maundrell and represents items capitalized shown in the balance sheet of the Menlo Club as capital improvement.

Q. You capitalized those items yourself in your own computation, is that correct?

A. Well, Mr. Weaver finds, and I had no difference of opinion with him on that, so I likewise did the same. [2857]

Q. You say you had no difference of opinion?

A. That's right.

Q. Were they capitalized on the books and records of the Menlo Club?

A. No, my examination indicated that they had been taken as expenses. If I had had additional information, I might have taken a different position and included them in expenses.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

Q. Now you have arrived at a net income, after deduction of partners' salaries, for the year 1946, of $67,047.92? A. That is correct.

Q. And you could not make a computation of cash to be accounted for at December 31, 1946?

A. That is correct.

Q. And in the same way as you did for 1945, you added back certain non-cash items and arrived at a total of $103,500.31 of cash to be accounted for in the operations of the Menlo Club for the year 1946? A. That is correct.

Q. You then account for certain of those items of cash as follows: Advance for 50 Mason Street, $1,110.44; differences between inventories January 1, 1946, and December 31, 1946, $3,201.32; increase in balance on deposit in Crocker National Bank during the year, $1,956.06; improvements and replacements capitalized in 1946, $2,355.16; deposit in Bank of America December 31, 1946, $15,265.54. Then under the designation [2858] of "Partners' Drawings," you have the following items: Ditto, $4,490.57; Nelson, $3,378.29; Maundrell, $3,997.80; Turner, $2,130.33; Fricker, $3,599.56; Kyne, $16,-005.50. You include donations of $2160, increase in bank roll of $3.00; checks paid in 1946 entered in 1945, $26,464.18; then you arrive at a total of $86,-117.75, is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the total amount of cash expendi-

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

tures accounted for by the books and records of the Menlo Club for the year 1946?

A. Well, that is the total amount of the 103 thousand that is accounted for.

Q. The 103 thousand is the amount of cash that they had available to spend that year, according to your computation?

A. Not necessarily. That is after payment of the operating expenses, purchase of food and so on.

Q. Now with reference to the partners' drawings which you have set forth for Mr. Ditto, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Maundrell, Mr. Turner, and Mr. Fricker, are they recorded in accounts designated as capital accounts for those persons? A. They are.

Q. And what do those withdrawals represent according to the books and records of the Menlo Club?

A. According to the books and records they represent federal income tax and California income tax. [2859]

Q. They all represent federal income and California income tax payments on behalf of those persons, is that not true? A. That is correct.

Q. And those payments, according to those books and records, were made not by check payable to the individual person himself, but by check payable to the respective collector, is that correct?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial; as long as they were paid for the accounts of Mr. Ditto, Mr. Maundrell, and so on, it doesn't matter how the check was issued payable. It was for their benefit.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence Semenza.)

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer the question.

A. I don't know without looking it up.

Q. Will you check it, please?

A. There was reference here in the ledger accounts to certain checks dated that date, but I do not seem to locate them here at the moment.

Q. May I ask you this, Mr. Semenza—don't the entries in the ledger accounts indicate that the checks were made payable directly to the respective tax collector?

A. They do, but that is not an indication that it was so.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, if it will save time, we would be willing to stipulate that the checks that are involved in this instance—— [2860]

The Court (Interceding): Take this up with counsel privately.

Mr. Golden: Well, never mind if he doesn't want to.

The Court: Take it up with counsel privately.

Mr. Golden: Forget it.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, counsel is willing to have me suggest this stipulation, in the interest of time, that the checks about which he is now questioning the witness were issued payable to the Franchise Tax Commissioner of the State of California and to the Collector of Internal Revenue in payment of taxes due to those respective payees of the respective governments by the various partners indicated in the accounts as Mr. Ditto, Mr. Nelson,

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Maundrell, Mr. Turner and Mr. Fricker, in payment of their income tax obligations, as shown by their returns filed with those respective governments. In making that stipulation, we do not want it understood that we think the matter is material one way or the other.

The Court: If you make a stipulation, make it.

Mr. Avakian: We stipulate to the fact.

Mr. Thompson: We will stipulate if he will eliminate the word "partner" from the stipulation and set forth the names of the persons.

Mr. Avakian: It is his own question.

The Court: Never mind with the stipulation. Go along [2861] with the trial.

A. The amounts are probably taken from the check books here in evidence, probably Exhibit 133. These books don't seem to show it, that period of time. I don't find the particular check number in the records.

Q. You don't find the particular check number in the record?

A. No, there is evidently another check book.

Q. Mr. Semenza, would you, during the recess, check on that please, and we will pass it.

A. If the records are here.

Q. That is what I anticipate, that you will look at the available records here. A. Yes.

Q. Now will you take the ledger account of the Menlo Club for the year 1946, Mr. Semenza, and turn to the capital account designated in the name of Willie Kyne, or W. E. Kyne? A. Yes, sir.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And according to the entries in that record, what withdrawals or charges were made against that account during the years 1945 and 1946?

A. None.

Q. I note on your Exhibit M-1, page 15, under the heading, "Partners Drawings, Kyne," you have included an item, $16,005.50, is that recorded on the books and records of the Menlo Club? [2862]

A. Yes.

Q. Where? A. Check in exhibit here.

Q. Mr. Semenza, I hand you government's Exhibit 120, check drawn on the Day and Night Office, Bank of America, dated December 2, 1946, payable to the order of Wm. E. Kyne, in amount of $16,005.50, made by the Menlo Club by Wm. E. Kyne, and with notation on it "Loan for Transit." Is that the check to which you refer?

A. It is. The testimony of Mr. Kyne that he withdrew the money.

Q. Is that particular check entered anywhere on the books and records of the Menlo Club?

A. No, it is not.

Q. Is there any indication in the books and records of the Menlo Club that that club maintained a bank account in the Day and Night office of the Bank of America?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment—that is objected to, your Honor, because of the scope of the question. The question is not limited to the books and records

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

produced in evidence by the government, but asks apparently as to all books and records and there is testimony the government has other books and records which have not been produced here. I object to the question as going outside the scope of the evidence, unless counsel limits—— [2863]

Mr. Thompson: I will withdraw the question.

Q. Is there any indication in the ledger accounts, journals, of the Menlo Club here in evidence, that that club maintained a bank account in the Day and Night Office of the Bank of America?

A. There are bank statements here.

Q. Are they recorded in the ledger accounts and journals of the Menlo Club?

A. Regardless of whether they are, they must be taken into consideration.

Mr. Thompson: May the answer be stricken?

The Court: It may go out. Listen to the question and answer it.

A. No, they are not.

Q. I agree they must be taken into consideration. I was just asking whether they appear in the ledger accounts and books of the Menlo Club?

A. That is correct.

Q. So you have taken into consideration that check for $16,005.50 and as entered on your computation as withdrawal by Mr. Kyne during 1946; is that correct?

A. I have. I could have done it one other way, by showing it as a loan to Mr. Kyne, which would have increased the assets $16,005.50 and showed a greater capital account for Mr. Kyne, but the net result would be the same as the way I [2864] have it.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And according to your computation on page 15 of Schedule M-1, the books and records account for the disbursements after operating expenses of $86,117.75 out of $103,500.31 for the Menlo Club for the year 1946? A. That is correct.

Q. And so you have entered an entry, "Withdrawn by Remmer, $17,382.56"; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what did the books and records of the Menlo Club show as to amount actually withdrawn by Mr. Remmer during 1946?

A. Some three thousand dollars—four thousand dollars approximately.

Q. And those withdrawals are recorded on an account under the heading Elmer Remmer?

A. They are.

Q. So that left you with $17,382.56 less $4,000, or a balance of $13,382.56 which was not accounted for as disbursements? A. That is correct.

Q. So you have assigned that as a withdrawal by Mr. Remmer? A. That is correct.

Q. If that money at December 31, 1946, remained in the Menlo Club safe, it would be proper to add it as an additional asset of the Menlo Club, would it not?

A. If that money, or any larger or smaller amount, was there, [2865] I would give it effect, if I knew what it was.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. So if you should charge that money out as a withdrawal by Mr. Remmer and he still had it on hand at December 31, 1946, it should be added back into his capital account with the Menlo Club, as you have computed it; is that correct?

A. If I knew there was any cash, I should take it into consideration.

Q. And are there any records here available showing that that sum of $13,382.56 was actually expended? A. None that I know of.

Q. In Mr. Remmer's capital account for the year 1946 you have a balance of $113,433.39, after deducting as a withdrawal the sum of $13,382.56, which is not accounted for in the books?

A. That is correct.

Q. And if you should add back into Mr. Remmer's capital account that sum of $13,382.56, his capital account would have been $126,815.95; is that true? A. 126 thousand some odd dollars.

Q. Also if you should add to that the sum of $63,661.28 cash which you have assigned to Mr. Remmer and were unable to account for in the year 1945, if you should also add that back into his capital account at December 31, 1946, his capital account would have been some 190 thousand odd dollars; is that correct?

A. It would, provided I assume that no other partners took it or that the money was there. [2866]

The Court: We will take a recess at this time.

MR. SEMENZA

resumes the witness stand on further

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. In failing to include, Mr. Semenza, you have assumed it was spent without any record being present of the expenditure; is that correct?

A. Well, I assumed that Mr. Remmer took it.

Q. And that he spent it?

A. He did anything he wanted with it.

Q. And if it should be included as Mr. Remmer's asset on your net worth computation, rather than asset of the Menlo Club, the result would have been the same?

A. If it existed, it would be included under his personal statement.

Q. Now during the recess did you have an opportunity to check on the withdrawals you entered?

A. I had the opportunity, but there are a few things I have not found in the evidence of the checks being here. I have only examined a few of the Menlo Club so far.

Q. Did you refer to the bank record account of the Menlo Club? [2867]

A. That is what I saw.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. I do not mean cancelled checks and statement; I mean bank record in the ledger.

A. I did, but I couldn't find those checks.

Q. They were not entered? A. No.

Q. Mr. Semenza, I show you plaintiff's Exhibit 113, which is an agreement between Mr. Elmer Remmer and Mr. Willie Kyne, and in making your net worth computation in this case, did you have that agreement in mind? A. I did.

Q. Did you note, Mr. Semenza, that that agreement purports to be an agreement between Mr. Elmer F. Remmer, first party, and Mr. Wm. E. Kyne, second party, relating to the acquisition by Mr. Kyne of a 15 per cent interest in the Menlo Club? A. That is correct.

Q. I note that in your Menlo Club schedules contained in Exhibit M-1, page 13, you have set forth a capital account for Mr. Kyne as a partner for the year 1945; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. When you placed that construction upon the evidence in this case, did you have in mind that the agreement between Mr. Remmer and Mr. Kyne, plaintiff's Exhibit 113, is dated November 4, 1946?

A. I did. [2868]

Q. Did you also have in mind that from February, 1945, until June, 1946, Mr. Kyne was in the United States army? A. I did.

Q. Did you also have in mind that this agreement, dated November 4, 1946, speaks in the present tense, where it recites: "It is the desire of first

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

party to sell, assign and convey to second party a 15 per cent interest in and to said Social room business and in and to said restaurant business"?

Mr. Avakian: We object to that as an incomplete recital of the document on that point because it also recites it is effective as of May 1st of 1945. The incomplete recital is unfair to the witness and an improper representation of what the document contains.

Mr. Thompson: I will read the whole document if you desire. I intend to get to that.

The Court: The objection is overruled. You may proceed.

Q. Did you have that in mind? A. I did.

Q. Did you also have in mind that this agreement, dated November 4, 1946, also speaks in the present tense where it says: "Said party is desirous of acquiring a 15 per cent interest in and to said social room business and in and to said restaurant business"? A. I did.

Q. You also had in mind the provision of this agreement as [2869] follows: "Effective as of May 1, 1945, first party hereby does assign, transfer, set over and convey to William E. Kyne, second party herein, a 15 per cent working interest in and to the profits derived from the operation of the aforesaid social room and restaurant business as aforesaid"?

A. I did.

Q. Mr. Semenza, if this agreement was entered into on the 4th day of November, 1946, and not earlier than that date, would it have been possible to make an entry in the books and records of the Menlo Club in the year 1945, or at any time prior to November 4, 1946, showing that Mr. Kyne had a distributive share of that enterprise?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: Objected to, your Honor, as assuming facts contrary to the evidence, because the testimony is that this, and similar Menlo documents, were simply a reduction to writing of oral agreements that were previously in existence.

The Court: Objection overruled. Answer the question.

A. Yes, on the basis of their oral agreements and testimony in this case, and the fact that the tax returns were filed for the year 1945 evidencing that fact.

Q. Did you have in mind the provision of Exhibit 113 as follows: "It is understood and agreed between the parties hereto that said working interest does not represent an actual interest in and to assets of said business or in and to the leasehold in said premises, that is to say, all monies [2870] credited to the account of second party, pursuant to said working interest, shall be applied on account of second party's payment for an actual interest in and to said social club business and restaurant business"?

A. I did, because it is the usual practice in partnerships of a similar nature.

Q. Did you further have in mind this provision of the agreement: "It is further understood and agreed between the parties hereto that an actual interest in and to said business and other assets shall not be acquired by second party (meaning Mr. Kyne) until first party (Mr. Remmer) has been fully reimbursed in the sum of $175,000"?

A. I did.

Q. And according to your examination of the books and records of the Menlo Club as of December 31, 1946, had Mr. Remmer withdrawn from said business the sum of $175,000? A. Not quite.

Q. According to your computation, the amount withdrawn by him at December 31st was——

A. Approximately 138 thousand dollars.

Q. Approximately 138 thousand? A. Yes.

Q. The next item you have entered on Exhibit M-1, page 2, is Item 11, "Equity in Transit Smoke Shop." A. Yes, sir. [2871]

Q. And you have entered that as $15,966.57; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And that is the same transaction which is entered as Item 7 on government's Exhibit 183, showing a net worth at the end of 1946 of $32,-621.46? A. That is correct.

Q. I wish to direct your attention to plaintiff's Exhibit 98, Mr. Semenza; are you familiar with that? Did you have that in mind in making your computation with reference to the Transit Smoke Shop? A. I did.

Q. Did you have in mind the recital in that agreement which is an agreement dated November 21, between Gordon Partee, Elmer Remmer and Wm. E. Kyne, to the effect that second parties, that is, Mr. Kyne and Mr. Remmer, had contributed $32,011.01 toward the assets of the partnership?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. I did.

Q. Did you also have in mind the testimony of Mr. Kyne, to the effect that he had received, out of the Menlo Club bank account in the Day and Night Branch of the Bank of America, a check in the sum of 16,005 dollars and some odd cents?

A. I did.

Q. And that is the same check which was shown you a few minutes ago? A. It is. [2872]

Q. Did you have in mind the notation on that check, "Loan for Transit"; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you also have in mind Mr. Kyne's testimony that he cashed that check and placed it in a safe deposit box and used it for the other businesses?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as an incomplete and misleading recital of Mr. Kyne's testimony, because on that same matter he also said that that represented his one-half contribution of the 32 thousand dollars investment in the Transit Smoke Shop. That was a part of his testimony on that point, your Honor.

The Court: Objection will be overruled.

A. I did have that in mind from his testimony, and I concluded he was paying Mr. Remmer back for his half share.

Q. And did you have in mind that, accepting your view of the evidence, the other business for which that money was used could have consisted of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe, having, according to your view of the evidence, three interested persons, Mr. Kyne, Mr. Remmer, and Mr. Lando, the 110 Eddy Street, having, according to your view of the evidence, four partners, Mr. Kyne, Mr. Remmer, Mr. Cavani and Mr. Turner, the Day-Night Cigar Store, having, according to your view of the evidence, three partners, Mr. Remmer, Mr. Kyne and Mr. Lando; the 186 Club, having, according to your view of the evidence, several [2873] interested parties, including Mr. Remmer, Mr. Kyne, Mr. Casselini, Mr. Busterna, and others?

Mr. Avakian: Object to the question as assuming facts contrary to the evidence and calling for speculation of the witness, and with respect to the statements contrary to the evidence, first of all it assumes and states that Mr. Semenza took some view with respect to the 186 Club that is contrary to the evidence, because nowhere in Mr. Semenza's testimony did he express any views with respect to the 186 Club in any respect; secondly, it assumes facts which have not been testified to here by any witness with respect to the use of this money for these various enterprises which Mr. Thompson has mentioned.

The Court: Objection overruled. You may answer the question.

A. I have testified to nothing on the 186 Club. Mr. Remmer could have used the money for the enterprises you stated; he could also have loaned it to Cal-Neva. He could have done many things with it.

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Is there any record here in evidence of what disposition that money was made? A. No.

Q. And is there any evidence that you know of here in the record, other than Mr. Kyne's statement, that it was used for the various businesses? [2874]

A. No.

Q. Now with regard to your Item 21, "Due Cal-Neva, Inc.," on Exhibit M-1, that same subject matter is treated as Item 27, the second item under the heading "Liabilities," on government's Exhibit 183, is it not? A. That is correct.

Q. And with respect to the balance owing by Mr. Remmer to Cal-Neva, Inc., as of December 31, 1943, your schedule, Exhibit M-1, and the government's Exhibit 183 are the same?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is the sum of $23,152.77?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Your schedule and government's Exhibit 183 are also the same as to the year-end 1944, that is, the sum of $18,361.68? A. That is correct.

Q. And your schedule and government's Exhibit 183 are the same as to the year-end 1946, that is, the sum of $60,742.39? A. That is correct.

Q. The only difference between your computation and government's Exhibit 183 occurs in the year 1945? A. That is correct.

Q. And there is a difference between your figure and that set forth in Exhibit 183 of $2,500?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. That is correct.

Q. That figure of $2,500 is represented by a loan made by [2875] Cal-Neva to Mayris Chaney, as she testified to, in 1944; is that so?

A. That is correct.

Q. And according to her testimony it was repaid by December 31, 1945? A. Yes.

Q. Is that your recollection?

A. Yes, sir; and I also verified that by the closing entries for Cal-Neva for the fiscal year April 30, 1946, that it occurred during the season of '45; that is, repayment was made during the season of '45.

Q. And so you made an adjustment of increasing the amount of Mr. Remmer's obligation to Cal-Neva for the year 1945 by the sum of $2,500?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you refer to the Cal-Neva records, please, and read the entries showing that that money was repaid in 1945?

A. Dated April 30, 1946, charge E. Remmer with cash received from Mayris Chaney $2,500 as payment of his loan to the company and to write off uncollectable loans.

Q. Now does that entry show that repayment was made in 1945? A. Not necessarily.

Q. And at the time Mr. Weaver made up his schedule, the only evidence before him upon which he could base a net worth computation was the Cal-Neva record? [2876]

Mr. Avakian: That is objected to, your Honor,

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

as calling for speculation, opinion and conclusion of Mr. Semenza as to what was before Mr. Weaver. Only Mr. Weaver would know that.

Mr. Thompson: I will withdraw the question.

Q. Mr. Semenza, do you know of any other record in evidence in this case, relating to the Mayris Chaney loan, which was in evidence at the close of the government's case, other than the entry in the Cal-Neva record which you have before you?

A. I know of none.

Q. And the Cal-Neva are records which the accounting firm of Semenza & Kottinger have kept; is that correct?

A. That is correct. Mr. Weaver made the assumption at other fiscal year-ends that entry occurred in the calendar year, but he did not in that case.

Q. Now under your designation "Liabilities" on your Schedule M-1, you have included item 28, due to William Remmer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And no similar item appears on the government's Exhibit 183; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the effect of including the obligation to Mr. William Remmer at each of the year-ends in question is to reduce the net worth of each year-end of Elmer Remmer?

A. That is correct. [2877]

Q. Upon what evidence or record did you base the entry December 31, 1943, to William Remmer, $358.15?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. The exhibit presented by Mr. William Remmer, of which photostatic copies have been made.

Q. That is plaintiff's No. 186?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That constitutes a photostat of a record of the firm of Remmer & Jordan?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. What does that show?

A. It shows a running account with Mr. Remmer starting in 1942 through November 15, '46.

Q. What does that account show as to what occurred with the balance due at the year-end December 31, 1942?

A. There is an entry December 31, journal 74, marked bad debt $234.36, was credited to the account, leaving a balance of $2.59.

Q. And as an accountant, what does that entry indicate to you?

A. I assume they considered it uncollectible to that extent.

Q. And that was December 31, 1942?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now what does the balance show at December 31, 1943? A. A balance of $358.15.

Q. And that is the amount entered on your Schedule M-1? A. That is correct. [2878]

Q. And in considering that an outstanding liability of Elmer Remmer, did you also take into consideration Mr. William Remmer's testimony that he had not been paid? A. That is correct.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. What is the balance shown on that record at December 31, 1944? A. $559.66.

Q. The figure you have entered on Exhibit M-1 is $1,028.06. Will you explain how you arrived at that?

A. To the balance here I have added these two items—on August 25 of 1944 a credit in the sum of $448.40 was credited to the account and there was noted charge to W. D. Remmer, and on December 31 there is another charge to William D. Remmer, $20, credited to the account. In view of the fact William Remmer's testimony indicated that he had paid some of these amounts, I added the $559.66 to the $468.40 to arrive at $1,028.06.

Q. Now I would like to direct your attention to Item 19 of Exhibit M-1, where for the year ending December 31, 1944, under the head "Autos," you show the sum of $468.46. What does that represent?

A. That represents a charge made July 31, 1944, to Elmer Remmer for a notation, 1936 Dodge, $468.40. Mr. William Remmer testified that there was a Dodge pick-up that he purchased.

Q. And did you have Mr. William Remmer's testimony in mind that according to his recollection the title to that Dodge [2879] pick-up had been transferred to Cal-Neva, Inc.?

Mr. Avakian: Mr. William Remmer's testimony was——

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Thompson:

Q. Mr. Semenza, in connection with the item $468.40 under the heading "Autos," Item 19 on your Exhibit M-1, under the column December 31, 1944, you testified, I believe, that that represents an automobile which Mr. William Remmer testified was purchased by Elmer Remmer from Remmer & Jordan? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And on what date? [2880]

A. July 31, 1944.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. Will you refer to the Cal-Neva ledger under check No. 7225, a check dated June 12, 1946, and tell us what that check was for?

A. June 12, 1944, check No. 7225, was issued to Remmer & Jordan, $470.58. It is charged to auto and truck expense.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, may we have again the date of that check?

The Court: Yes.

A. June 12th.

Mr. Avakian: I thought he said 1944.

A. I beg your pardon—what is the check number?

Mr. Thompson: It is check dated June 12, 1946, No. 7225.

A. June 12, 1946, Remmer & Jordan, $470.58.

Q. Mr. Semenza, I show you plaintiff's Exhibit 188 for identification. Do you recognize that as a photostat of the check, the entry of which you have just read from the Cal-Neva ledger?

A. Photostat of check No. 7225, yes, what I just read.

Mr. Thompson: I offer in evidence as plaintiff's Exhibit 188.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, we have no objection to the use of the photostat, but insofar as the materiality of the offer is concerned, we object to it on the ground it is incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial, has not been connected in any [2881] way with any transactions in this case, has not been connected in any way with the defendant. If your

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Honor will look at the check, you will see that the date of it is two years later than the date of the transaction that William Remmer testified to and concerning which Mr. Semenza is being questioned. The transaction was in 1944, the check is dated June 12, 1946. The amounts are different, the parties are different; namely, William Remmer referred to a transaction he had with Elmer Remmer in 1944. This check refers to a transaction in a different amount in June of 1946 between Cal-Neva, Inc., and Remmer & Jordan. If you will look at Exhibit 186, which is the ledger cards of Remmer & Jordan for the Elmer Remmer account, your Honor will see that there is no transaction on that account that relates to the check that has been offered as Exhibit 188, so that we do not see how it can possibly be connected with anything in this case.

Mr. Thompson: If the Court please, as I recall the testimony of Mr. William Remmer, it was his recollection that the truck in question had been transferred, the title to it, to Cal-Neva, Inc. The record that he has produced purports to be a record of Remmer & Jordan account with Helen and Elmer Remmer, and this check, indicating a payment by Cal-Neva, Inc., to Remmer & Jordan on an account for substantially the same amount as the cost of the truck, which was transferred by title to Cal-Neva by Remmer & Jordan, is sufficient [2882] connection, it seems to me, to render it admissible in evidence. The weight to be given to it is another thing. It is the authenticity of the records of Remmer & Jordan.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Avakian: The records of Cal-Neva Mr. Semenza just read do not even show it was for the purchase of the vehicle, just shows it was for auto expense, $470. That expense might be overhaul of a motor, we don't know. When Mr. William Remmer was here the prosecution had this photostat, it is taken from their files, he might have thrown some light, perhaps he could have connected it, we don't know, but on the present state of the record, a check dated two years after the transaction shown in Elmer Remmer's personal account, has no connection. The amount is different, there is no showing it is for the same item, it is for a different entity; I don't see how we can possibly know, on the present state of the record, without further explanation from Remmer & Jordan, whether these are the same items or not.

Mr. Thompson: The Court will recall when Mr. William Remmer was here he did not have with him his ledger record and that was produced later.

Mr. Avakian: The record also shows, your Honor, that this particular transaction between Remmer & Jordan and Elmer Remmer, as shown on the ledger card, was inquired into by the government more than a year ago when they questioned William Remmer and asked him about that Dodge truck. The record will [2883] show that they had Mr. William Remmer up here twice during the trial, that he had the ledger cards here with him when he came up to be interviewed by the government and they had this photostat available and in the courthouse when Mr. William Remmer was here on the stand. I do not think the prosecution is in the position to say that they were taken by surprise on this matter, because more than a year ago they examined the ledger cards, they have now been put in evidence, they examined William Remmer on this particular matter, they talked to him twice during the trial, and they have had photostat of the check all this time. Now we certainly do not want to be in the position of objecting to anything material, but we do not feel, particularly in the absence of anything in the nature of surprise, things that are not shown to be material, are not shown to be connected, should be received in evidence.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: The exhibit will be admitted in evidence.

Q. Mr. Semenza, do the Cal-Neva records themselves contain any further information relating to that transaction?

A. The only information here is it is charged to auto and truck expense for that year.

Q. Now you have carried that same item of $468.40 over to December 31, 1945, as part of Item 19 on Exhibit M-1; is that correct?

A. That is correct, Mr. Thompson.

Q. And then you have entered a figure for automobiles of [2884] $2,185.31 at December 31, 1946; is that correct?

A. That is correct, Mr. Thompson.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. And how is that figure computed?

A. The difference between $468.40 and $2,185.31 is an amount stated in Mr. William Remmer's testimony as the Pontiac car.

Q. Now in the liability section of your Exhibit M-1, page 2, under Item 28 due to William Remmer at December 31, 1946, you have entered the figure $9,592.88; is that correct?

A. That is correct, Mr. Thompson.

Q. How is that figure computed?

A. In Mr. Remmer's testimony he stated that at the end of '46 it was his recollection that the amount owed by his brother had increased eight to ten thousand dollars, so to the amount shown in the ledger cards here I added eight thousand dollars, bringing it up to $9,592.88.

Q. In including the item of $8,000 at December 31, 1946, as being due to William Remmer from Elmer Remmer at that time, you base that, you say, upon the testimony of William Remmer?

A. That is right.

Q. And did you take into consideration the following testimony of Mr. Remmer, as contained in government's Exhibit 184——

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment — 184 is not in evidence. It is marked for identification only. I believe Mr. Thompson was looking at the clerk's stamp that said 184 was for identification. [2885]

Mr. Thompson: That is correct, it is 184 for identification.

Mr. Avakian: Then we object, your Honor, to

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

any question which relates to a document which is not in evidence. Your Honor will recall that a portion of that statement was by stipulation read into the record, and insofar as it is incorporated in the record, we have no objection. The record should be used rather than any portion of the statement which was not in evidence.

Mr. Thompson: To facilitate the examination, I intended to read from the statement, but if you want to furnish me with a transcript, I have no objection.

Mr. Avakian: We will be glad to make our copy of the transcript available, Mr. Thompson, calling his attention to that portion which was read into the record. I believe it begins at page 2583 and continues for several pages, on both cross and direct examination.

Mr. Thompson: I will read the following testimony of William Remmer to you, Mr. Semenza, as it appears in the transcript, starting with page 2583: (Reads from transcript, page 2583, line 21, through page 2585, line 20).

Q. Do you recall that? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Avakian: May we have an objection and have the answer stricken for the purpose of objecting? He answered as I [2886] was about to make my objection.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Avakian: Our objection is the reading of the testimony is incomplete on that particular point, because Mr. Remmer also testified that at the end of 1946 Elmer Remmer owed him between eight and ten thousand dollars and for 1943 it was approximately $300, and in reading of only a portion of the testimony on that point is improper, leaves a misleading impression with the jury, and is not fair to the witness.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Thompson: I do not consider that to be a proper objection.

The Court: The motion is denied and the answer will stand. The objection is overruled and the answer will stand.

Q. Mr. Semenza, in connection with the William Remmer transaction, do you recall Mr. William Remmer's testimony that Mr. Elmer Remmer also had other automobiles? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what effect, if any, did you give to that testimony in computing the net worth of Mr. Elmer Remmer?

A. None, because I had no information from which I could determine what he had.

Q. Referring to your Item No. 27 under "Liabilities," due to Gene Schriber at December 31, 1945, $125,000, and at December 31, 1946, $75,000, that is the same subject matter as is set [2887] forth in Item 33 on government's Exhibit 183; is that correct? A. It is.

Q. There is a difference, however, in that in government's Exhibit 183 the amount of the liability at December 31, 1945, is set forth as $100,000, while in Exhibit M-1 it is set forth at $125,000; is that correct? A. That is correct, Mr. Thompson.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. I would like to show you government's Exhibit 140, which is a ledger sheet entitled "Furniture, Fixtures, Equipment and Buildings." On that Exhibit 140 what is the amount shown to be due to Gene Schriber as of December 31, 1945?

A. $100,000.

Q. Have you at any time seen the original of Exhibit 140, which is a photostat of a ledger sheet?

A. Not to my recollection. I have refreshed my memory by referring to memorandums regarding the Menlo Club records and we have no indication that that particular ledger sheet was in the record at the time that we got them.

Q. Is it not true that at the time that the photostat of the ledger was shown to Mr. Maundrell and identified by him when he was testifying as a witness in this case you, at a recess, remarked to me, and also to Mr. Campbell, that you had a recollection of seeing the original of that photostat?

A. I said I might have seen it. [2888]

Q. Is it not true that you said that you had seen it, according to your best recollection?

A. According to my best recollection, I said that I might have seen it.

Q. Now in making your net worth computation as set forth on Exhibit M-1, you have entered as net worth certain figures with the notation "plus cash"; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And it is true, is it not, that any amount of cash that may have been on hand at the end of the year-ends in question would increase Mr. Remmer's

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

net worth at that time? A. That is true.

Q. In your chart designating the list of assets and liabilities, to the extent shown by the evidence, you have not attempted to compute an understatement or overstatement of income on the net worth basis, have you?

A. I have not on that exhibit, no.

Q. Is it not true that in making a computation of the understatement or overstatement of income on the net worth basis, it is proper to add to the net worth as shown by the evidence at each year-end the amount of federal or state income taxes paid by the taxpayer during that year?

Mr. Avakian: Objected to as calling for opinion and conclusion of the witness on a matter of law and as containing an erroneous statement of the law. You do not add the expenses [2889] to the net worth by the net worth method. You first determine the increase in net worth and then add it to the increase, not to the net worth.

Q. It is proper, is it not, Mr. Semenza——

The Court (Interceding): Do you withdraw this question?

Mr. Thompson: Yes, your Honor.

Q. ——to add federal income taxes to the increase in net worth in computing the amount of income? A. That is correct.

Q. And it is also proper to add the amount of non-deductible personal expenses of the taxpayer during the year? A. That is correct.

Mr. Thompson: I would like to bring out, your

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Honor, so the jury can see it, chart marked Exhibit M-1, page 1.

Q. According to your computation, Mr. Semenza, for the year 1945, as shown on Exhibit M-1, page 1, Mr. Remmer received income in the amount of approximately $75,000 during that year; is that correct? A. That is correct.

Q. And according to your net worth computation Mr. Remmer, during that same year, suffered a reduction in his net worth of approximately $70,000?

Mr. Avakian: Just a moment. We object to that, your Honor, as showing a statement contrary to Mr. Semenza's testimony. His testimony was first that he couldn't compute the net [2890] worth because the amount of cash was uncertain; secondly, the chart itself shows change in net worth as 70 odd thousand dollars plus or minus change in cash, and that is the very vital thing that is omitted from what Mr. Thompson states in his question Mr. Semenza testified, so the question assumes testimony on the part of Mr. Semenza contrary to his testimony.

The Court: Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. He suffered the reduction of $70,339.21 plus or minus change in cash.

Q. And he had an income during that year, according to your computation, of approximately $75,000? A. That is correct?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Q. As a result of your computations, there remains approximately 145 thousand dollars during the year 1945 which is not accounted for by any books, records or evidence here in Court; is that correct?

A. It may be more or less, depending on change in cash.

Q. But the cash is not accounted for by any book or record, is it? A. No, it isn't.

Q. So the total sum of 140 thousand dollars is not accounted for, according to your computation?

A. That is correct. [2891]

Mr. Thompson: We have no further cross-examination, your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Avakian:

Q. Do you have Exhibit M-1 before you, Mr. Semenza? A. I have.

Q. And you also have Exhibit 169, which is Mr. Weaver's exhibit in regard to the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe? A. No, I do not.

(Hands witness exhibits.)

Q. On page 4 of Exhibit M-1, you have set forth no amount as bank roll of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe at the end of 1943, 1944 or 1946, and I believe you stated that the reason was that you found no evidence in the record of any amount of bank roll on hand on those dates. Now if you will assume that the bank roll of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe at the end of 1943, whatever the amount may have been, was the same as the amount of the bank roll at the end of 1946, would it have made any difference in the computation of income on the net worth method, as contrasted with putting in no amount as bank roll on those years?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. No, it would not.

Q. In other words, in computing income on the net worth method, the significant thing is the change in the amount of the asset from the beginning to the end of the period? A. That is right.

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as not proper redirect examination. [2892]

The Court: The answer may stand.

Q. Now you were questioned at considerable length on cross-examination as to whether the books and records of the various business enterprises, which are in evidence here, contain any reference to a personal loan made by Mr. Remmer to Mayris Chaney, a personal loan made by Mr. Remmer to Hazel Harris and her husband, to some residential property purchased by Mrs. Remmer and her sister-in-law, and to the amount owed to the Bank of America as a loan with respect to the purchase of a piece of residential property, and I believe in each instance you stated that the records of the business enterprises in evidence here did not contain a reference to those transactions. I want to ask you this, Mr. Semenza, in computation of the net income of a business, does it make any difference whatsoever whether the owners of the business made personal loans to personal friends, with respect to any portion of their money?

A. Not as far as the business is concerned.

Q. And does it make any difference in the income of that business whether the records of the business show the amount of a personal loan owed to the bank with respect to residential property?

A. No.

Q. Is it customary, based on your experience as an accountant, to show in the records of a business any personal [2893] financial transactions which an owner of the business may have with personal friends?

A. It is very unusual. In some instances there is reference to it.

Q. But it is very unusual? A. It is.

Q. In computing the net income of the Menlo Club, of the Day-Night Cigar Store, of the 110 Eddy Street, or of any other of the enterprises shown in this evidence, and in analyzing the receipts and disbursements of those businesses, for the purpose of determining the net income, would it make any difference whatsoever to you, as an accountant, how much money Mr. Remmer, as an individual, had loaned out to Hazel Harris or Mayris Chaney or had borrowed from the Bank of America? A. No.

Q. In computing the net income of a business, does it make any difference at all, from an accounting point of view, whether the owner or owners of the business keep in their business records a record of any of their personal transactions, such as the purchase of clothing, the buying of lunches, or anything else of a personal nature?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It isn't necessary.

Q. Does it have any bearing on determining the net income of that business?

A. It does not. [2894]

Q. And is it customary for business men to enter in their business records records of transactions of that type?

A. Well, it is unusual, I would say.

Q. Now I believe you stated that in your judgment the proper method of computing the net income of Elmer and Helen Remmer, from the evidence in this case, is in the manner and with the result set forth on page 1 of your Exhibit M-1?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as leading and attempted recitation of the witness' previous testimony.

Mr. Avakian: I hadn't come to the question yet, simply calling attention to the—as to which the question is directed.

The Court: I think it is leading.

Mr. Avakian: I have not asked the question yet. How can it be leading if you don't know what it is?

The Court: Why not ask it?

Mr. Avakian: I was going to; I was interrupted.

Q. My question, Mr. Semenza, is this—in computing the net income of Helen and Elmer Remmer, as shown on page 1 of Exhibit M-1, did you use the net worth method or did you use receipts and disbursements method?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. I used the receipts and disbursements method.

Q. And in using the receipts and disbursements method, is it or is it not necessary to have a record of the assets of the business in existence at any particular time?

A. It is not necessary. [2895]

Q. It is possible, then, to compute income without that information? A. That is correct.

Q. And is the receipts and disbursements method, rather than the net worth method, the method which is customarily used by accountants in computing the income of businesses?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as not redirect—already asked and answered on direct.

The Court: Objection sustained. It is not proper redirect examination.

Mr. Avakian: Well, I would like to explain why it is proper, because it was gone into on cross.

The Court: I have ruled it is not proper.

Mr. Avakian: Well, may I have the courtesy of explaining to your Honor my position?

The Court: No.

Q. In your cross-examination you were questioned as to whether or not the books and records of these various enterprises, to the extent that they have been introduced in evidence here, contained a record of the assets of these various businesses at the end of the particular years. In computing the income of a business on receipts and disbursements

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

method, is it necessary to have such records?

A. No, it is not.

Q. And do the books and records of the Menlo Club, to the [2896] extent that they have been introduced in evidence here, contain the information necessary for you, as an accountant, to compute the income of the Menlo Club on the basis of receipts and disbursements method? A. They do.

Q. Is that also true of the Day-Night Cigar Store? A. That is correct.

Q. And is that also true of 110 Eddy Street?

A. It is.

Q. Is that also true of the Transit Smoke Shop?

A. It is.

Q. And assuming that the entries of the net wins and losses in the books of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe are correct entries, are those entries sufficient to enable you to determine the net income of the B. & R. Smoke Shoppe?

A. They would be.

Q. Do you have Exhibit 164 before you? Would you refer to page 5 of your Exhibit M-1, balance sheet Day-Night Cigar Store, and particularly to the item of equipment in amount of $10,400 shown in that identical amount at the end of each year, 1943, 1944, 1945, and 1946? A. Yes, sir.

Q. On cross-examination you testified that—that the date of the last entry in the Day-Night books showing that amount of equipment was January 1, 1946, and your attention was directed [2897] to the fact that the 1946 tax return of the Day-Night

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Cigar Store showed an amount of equipment of $2,100 at the end of 1946. Now, Mr. Semenza, if for December 31, 1946, instead of using the equipment figure of $10,400, you had used the $2,100 figure shown on the tax return, would that have increased or decreased the net worth of the Day-Night Cigar Store on December 31, 1946?

A. It would decrease it.

Q. And in computing income on the net worth method, does the decrease of the net worth at the end of the period have the effect of decreasing or increasing the income?

A. It has the effect of decreasing it.

Q. So that by using the higher figure of $10,400 that you did use, the effect of it, in comparison with $2,100 item mentioned by Mr. Thompson, was to increase the closing net worth and to increase any income computed on the net worth method?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that had you used the lower figure, in other words, your results would have been more favorable to the defendant than the results from the figure you did use?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to—calls for conclusion.

Mr. Avakian: It is a summarization.

Mr. Thompson: We object to counsel summarizing.

Mr. Campbell: It is leading, also.

The Court: Objection sustained. [2898]

Q. You also testified, in connection with your

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

computations of the income of the Day-Night Cigar Store, that in making the computations of income which are set forth on pages 7 and 8 of Exhibit M-1, you made certain postings in the general ledger. Will you state from what source you made those postings?

A. From the cash book, cash receipts and disbusements record, of the Day-Night Cigar Store.

Q. And were the entries of receipts and disbursements from which you made the posting contained in the books themselves?

A. They were.

Q. And were you able, from the entries in the books themselves, to get the necessary information to make the posting to the general ledger?

A. I was.

Q. And in your business as an accountant, Mr. Semenza, do you frequently find that bookkeepers keeping the books of a business, fall behind in postings to the general ledger from cash receipts and disbursements record?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: It is very material because inadequacy contention is being made in connection with the charge of fraud.

The Court: He may answer.

A. It is very unusual in our practice to have complete postings. [2899]

Q. That is very unusual, you say?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It is.

Q. Now you also stated that in preparing Exhibit M-1, in some instances it was necessary for you to refer to the testimony in conjunction with the entries in the records, in order to make proper computations. Is it customary or not customary, in your business as an accountant, to have to make inquiries of bookkeepers and other persons connected with the business, regarding the transactions reflected in the books, in order to complete your accounting analysis?

Mr. Thompson: Objected to as irrelevant and immaterial. And the question is also too general as to type of inquiry.

Mr. Avakian: It is the same point, your Honor, as to the adequacy of the records.

The Court: Objection is sustained.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, could I be heard on that?

The Court: No.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor has permitted the prosecution witness to say the records are inadequate——

The Court (Interceding): The ruling will stand.

Mr. Avakian: Well, your Honor, I am forced then to make an offer of proof in order to make our offer of proof in connection——

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Avakian: I would like to make it in [2900] conjunction with the next recess, so as to avoid any unnecessary inconvenience to the jury.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: All right.

Mr. Avakian: I request whenever your Honor suggests at the close of the next recess.

The Court: You call my attention and whenever you want to make your offer of proof, I will ask the jury to leave the court room.

Q. Mr. Semenza, in connection with the books and records and returns of the Menlo Club, you have testified on cross-examination that the records of the Menlo Club were maintained on the accrual basis of accounting rather than on the cash receipts and disbursements basis, and you were asked whether it was your understanding that, under the code and the regulations it was up to the taxpayer to elect whether to be on the cash or accrual basis. What is your understanding in that respect?

A. It is my understanding that the taxpayer must report on the basis on which he maintains his records. If he maintains them on the accrual basis, he reports on the accrual basis; if he maintains them on the cash basis, he reports on the cash basis.

Q. And on what basis were the Menlo Club books maintained? A. The accrual basis.

Q. Have you examined Mr. Weaver's exhibit with respect to the [2901] Menlo Club, which I believe is Exhibit 165? A. I have.

Q. Was that exhibit prepared on the cash basis or the accrual basis?

A. It was prepared on the cash basis.

Q. And did it omit liabilities which on the accrual method should properly have been included?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. It did.

Q. What was the amount of liabilities omitted from Mr. Weaver's exhibit at the end of each of the years 1945 and 1946?

A. At the end of 1945 it is $26,464.18; the end of 1946 it is $17,264.58.

Q. Now you were also asked whether the records of the Menlo Club contained a record of accounts payable and you were directed to answer that question yes or no and your answer was no. Do you have any further explanation to offer in connection with that answer?

A. I have. Included in cash disbursements record I was able to determine the accounts payable, which I have previously stated amounts, $26,464.18 and $17,264.50. Regardless of whether they were shown in the accounts payable, if I find them there I gave consideration to them in my statement.

Q. Let me see if I get this right. Was there a ledger card designated accounts payable in existence? A. There was not. [2902]

Q. But was there the information contained in the books themselves showing the existence and the amount of the accounts payable?

A. There was.

Q. And that is what you used; is that right?

A. I did.

Q. Now in connection with Mr. Remmer's equity in the Menlo Club, as set forth both on page 2 and on page 13 of your Exhibit M-1 your attention was called to the capital account of Elmer Remmer

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

shown in the ledger of the Menlo Club. Do you have that ledger before you?

A. No, I do not.

Q. I will hand you prosecution's Exhibit 125, the Menlo Club ledger, and call your attention particularly to the page designated "Partner's Account, Elmer F. Remmer," and I will ask you whether the amount of Mr. Remmer's capital account, as shown on that page for the end of the year 1945, was lower or higher than the amount shown in your Exhibit M-1 as his capital account for that date? A. What date is that?

Q. The end of 1945. A. It is lower.

Q. And at the end of 1946 is the amount of Mr. Remmer's capital account, as shown in the book, lower or higher than the amount which you set forth in Exhibit M-1 as his capital account for the end of 1946? [2903]

A. It is lower in Exhibit 125.

Q. If you had used the capital account shown in the book for the end of 1946 instead of the figure which you used in Exhibit M-1 for that same date, by how much would Mr. Remmer's 1946 net worth be reduced?

Mr. Campbell: I suggest that is argumentative, leading and incompetent. Necessarily if you change the figure he would have to change on his chart.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, we are entitled to show what the difference would be. It carries inferences created by cross-examination.

The Court: You may answer.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

A. The balance shown by the book December 31, 1946, is $39,508.60, which does not include his share of the profits for the year 1946. If I used that figure, it would result in reduction of approximately $74,000.

Q. And was his share of the 1946 profit credited to him during the following year?

A. It was, in the amount of $45,923.11. If I add that amount to the balance shown in the records at December 31, 1946, his capital account would be approximately $85,400. If I subtracted from the capital account in my report, page 13, Exhibit 125 would be approximately $25,000 less than the balance I show.

Q. As a result of your making your own accounting analysis and determination of Mr. Remmer's capital account, rather than [2904] using the amount shown in the book, did you increase or decrease Mr. Remmer's net worth at the end of 1946?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as argumentative, assuming facts not in evidence. The witness cannot increase or decrease. He can state what figures he found, but I suggest this question is argumentative, if the Court please.

The Court: Let me have the question.

(Question read.)

The Court: You may answer the question.

A. I increased it.

Q. And in computation of net income on the net worth method, does an increase in a closing net

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

worth result in an increase or decrease of income computed on the net worth method?

A. Results in a decrease.

Q. I do not know if you understood the question. Would you like to have it read?

Mr. Campbell: I object—the witness did not indicate he misunderstood.

The Court: Let him read it and see.

(Question read.)

A. Over the period it would result in an increase.

Q. By making your own analysis then, instead of using the figure in the book, did you reach a result which was favorable or unfavorable to the defendant in this case?

Mr. Campbell: That is objected to—— [2905]

The Court: Objection sustained.

Q. In connection with page 12 of Exhibit M-1, which is your analysis of the assets, liabilities and net worth of the Menlo Club, you were questioned on cross-examination regarding the item of improvements and replacements in 1946, which you stated were entered on the books as repairs and replacements but which you capitalized. First of all, let me ask you this, Mr. Semenza, on that item—what is the effect of capitalizing those items instead of treating them as repairs and replacements on income that is computed for that year?

A. It increases the income for the year.

Q. And will you state whether or not you have found it customary in your business as a certified

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

public accountant, that business men frequently deduct as a repair and replacement items which you, as an accountant, consider to be capital items?

A. I have found it very usual.

Q. In connection with your computation, as set forth on pages 14 and 15 of Exhibit M-1 of the amount of cash which you determined and concluded was drawn by Mr. Remmer in each of those two years, 1945 and 1946, your attention was called, on cross-examination, to certain exhibits and testimony. In making that analysis, did you also have in mind the testimony of the various witnesses and the partnership agreements introduced in evidence here, to the effect that Mr. Remmer was to draw out his $175,000 investment in the Menlo Club before the other [2906] partners drew out their share of the profits? A. I did.

Q. And was that one of the reasons why you concluded that cash that was not otherwise disbursed should be charged to Mr. Remmer as drawing?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent in that form.

The Court: It seems to me it is leading.

Mr. Avakian: Well, very well, it is leading, but I thought it would save time. Is the objection sustained, your Honor?

The Court: Yes.

Q. What effect did you give, Mr. Semenza, in testimony relating to that item?

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

Mr. Campbell: I think that is incompetent, if the Court please.

The Court: I think so. Objection sustained.

Q. Now you were also questioned on cross-examination regarding provision in Mr. Kyne's partnership agreement, that is, 15 per cent share of the profits was to be credited to his capital account and that he was not to become an owner of 15 per cent of the assets of the business until Mr. Remmer had withdrawn his 175 thousand dollar investment, and your answer, as I recall it, was that you gave effect to that provision and that this was usual in similar partnerships. Could you explain that further, Mr. Semenza? [2907]

A. It is usual in partnerships—I mean, I have found it in many partnerships—where one partner did not have the funds to supply the business as his share of the investment and the other partner in the enterprise would put up all the funds to begin with and the party not having the funds to invest to begin with allowed his earnings to accumulate until there was sufficient accumulation to cover his share of the investment.

Q. And what have you found in your experience in that type of partnership with respect to the drawings of the partner who supplied the initial investment?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, that is very important and we think we should be heard on it. May we be heard on it?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lawrence J. Semenza.)

The Court: No, the ruling will stand.

Mr. Avakian: Well, I beg leave of the Court to hear me, your Honor, because it is being charged here the partnerships are fraudulent because of that point. Now if it is customary in partnerships of this kind to do just as was done here, that has bearing on the issue whether these are fraudulent partnerships.

Mr. Thompson: I object to counsel making up the government's argument. I think if he wants to argue points of law he should, but not make up the arguments of the government. [2908]

The Court: We will not hear any argument here. Let us proceed with the case.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor is denying me permission to present my position?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Avakian: Very well.

Q. I call your attention, Mr. Semenza, to Exhibits 146 and 188. Are they still before you?

A. They are not.

Mr. Thompson: May I suggest we take our afternoon recess?

The Court: Very well.

RE: ACCOUNTING ANALYSIS

Febr. 13, 1952. Notebook No. 344 PP 57-63.)

The Court: Mr. Avakian, do you care to make an offer?

Mr. Avakian: I would like to make an offer of proof in respect to two points to which objections were sustained.

First, I would like to offer to prove that in making accounting analyses of the books and records of business enterprises it is usually necessary and customary for the accountant to make inquiry of the bookkeepers or other individuals familiar with the transactions and the bookkeeping entries, in order to determine the proper accounting treatment to be made of the entries and transactions.

That is my first offer of proof and perhaps your Honor would like to rule on that before I make the second.

The Court: What is your objection to that, Mr. Campbell or Mr. Thompson?

Mr. Thompson: We object that the offer of proof to be incompetent and immaterial in this case. Mr. Semenza has testified that his accounting analyses has been based upon the books and records in evidence and the testimony of witnesses and the rule of whether or in other instances where people are available to make inquiry of, he may make inquiry to determine the meaning of various entries, has nothing to do with this case.

BLURRED COPY

The Court: What is your point?

Mr. Avakian: My point is in cross-examination questions were asked as to whether it was possible for Mr. Semenza to reach certain accounting conclusions on the basis of entries in the books and records alone, without recourse to the testimony of witnesses, and the implication of that, particularly in view of the fact that the prosecution's witnesses claim that the records were inadequate, and particularly in view of the rule of law that records must be shown to be inadequate before net worth method can be used, it is important, on the question of the adequacy of the records, to show that necessity to defer to the testimony of witnesses in interpreting any entries of the books, is not unusual, but rather is customary.

The Court: I will let you make that showing.

Mr. Campbell: Wouldn't this open the question of inquiry made of the principle here. The very general broad question, if it is proper to make inquiries of the bookkeepers and others, then the question would be if he had done so in reaching certain of these conclusions. Certainly then we would be entitled to know whom, which would include the principle in this case.

Mr. Avakian: Mr. Campbell misunderstands my point completely. Mr. Semenza has testified that he based his analysis on the books and records of this case and also on the testimony of witnesses in this case. The implication of the cross-examination questions and of the testimony of the prosecution witnesses is that the books and records which are here in evidence are inadequate because Mr. Semenza had to refer to something besides books and records, namely, the testimony of witnesses who testified, in order to reach his conclusions, and I want to negative any implication that his resort to the testimony of witnesses who testified shows the inadequacy of the books, by showing that it is customary in accounting practice in analyzing any set of books to make inquiries and not to limit themselves to the entries themselves, but to make inquiries of bookkeepers, such as the bookkeeper who testified here and whose testimony he relied on.

The Court: The question is whether or not the books were inadequate.

Mr. Avakian: That is the issue.

The Court: Can you ask him that?

Mr. Avakian: I wanted to make a direct point of his recourse to testimony of the witnesses.

The Court: You could ask him that question, if that is the question.

Mr. Campbell: I do not believe that is the question, because he does not say in making your analysis did you refer to the books and testimony in evidence here. He says, is it the customary practice, or the usual practice among bookkkeepers or among accountants, is it the usual practice to make inquiries of bookkeepers and others familiar with the transactions, which takes in a large field outside of the record of this case and I believe it opens up the question of whether it is the usual and customary practice to make inquiry of the principle by whom he is engaged and the nature of the information he obtained.

The Court: Well, that being so, if that is the answer to the offer and if there is a question in the case as to whether or not these books are adequate, I think he could inquire of his witness, his expert witness, as to whether or not, in his opinion, they were adequate.

Mr. Campbell: I agree, your Honor.

The Court: I think that would cover the point, rather than have this general question propounded and answered.

Mr. Avakian: If your Honor will permit me to ask the question you have just indicated, I would like to ask that question, but in addition I would also like to ask the question covered by the offer of proof.

The Court: I will permit the question just suggested, but will deny the offer of proof.

Mr. Avakian: Thank you, your Honor.

The second offer of proof is this point—we offer to prove that in a situation of partnerships, where one of the partners provides the initial investment and the other partners put in their share by accumulation in their capital accounts of their share of the profits, it is customary for the investing partner to draw more than his share of the profits until the capital accounts of the partners have been adjusted in proportion with their respective partnerships and percentages in the profits.

The Court: What is your objection to that?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Campbell: That is objected to as incompetent and immaterial here, what is customary. Here we are interested in ultimate facts of this particular case and not as to comparing it to customs. The question, of course, would by implication include a great many factors, including a contractual relationship amongst partners in the customary partnership which he refers to. Here we have certain specific purported agreements, we have a vast mass of evidence which has been considered specifically by this witness, and I do not believe it is material to the determination of the issues here as to what may be customary in certain types of partnerships.

The Court: Couldn't that situation be met by basing your question upon the exact agreements in evidence here?

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, there is no question as to the agreements, as to the fact that Mr. Remmer put up the investment, and as to the fact that the partners built up equities through credits to their capital interests, and as to the fact Mr. Remmer withdrew more than his share of the profits.

The implications arose by questions which the prosecution attorneys have asked of numerous witnesses as to the fact that the partners were building up their equities, did not withdraw their full share, and as to the fact, as shown by the evidence, that Mr. Remmer did, in many instances, withdraw more than his share of the profits. The implication is that because of that fact there is something fraudulent in these partnerships. Now in determining whether that indicated fraud, it is proper to have before the jury information as to whether exactly that situation is customary in the business world, because in trying to decide whether to infer fraud or not, the jury should have before it the question of whether what was done here was different or unusual in comparison with the regular treatment in the business world of this type of partnership situation. That is why we think this is very material, your Honor.

Mr. Campbell: It seems to me we are going into a very large field of opinion evidence on the part of this witness, which could not be compressed into a simple question by any means to make a comparable situation, and it is a matter also, it seems to me, that should be for argument to the jury and not attempted presentation of this man.

Mr. Avakian: How can you ask what was done here is the same thing as done in the business world unless you can consider it in the record.

The Court: Isn't it obvious if the agreements here show investment of a certain man and other parties are to acquire interests from the profits, wouldn't it be obvious, in the matter of observation from the agreement itself, that a partner who made an initial investment would be entitled to take out all or any part of the original investment at any time that the business would permit?

Mr. Avakian: Well, your Honor, that seems obvious to me, but I wondered whether there was some vagueness because I don't understand why we should have been here two and a half months if that is obvious, because it is becoming apparent this entire case is boiling down to the question as to whether the partnerships are frauds and the only attack we can see is that Mr. Remmer, who put up the investment, drew more heavily on his percentage and the other partners drew less than their percentage and permitted the difference to accumulate. I assume from the fact we have been here so long that the prosecution does not agree with your Honor's views.

Mr. Campbell: We do not feel we could argue the case at this time. I disagree with counsel at every turn of what he states the evidence here to show. However, I think the matter here is before the Court not offer of proof, but of asking a question, the question being whether or not in partnerships, where one partner furnishes the capital, it is customary for that partner to draw more than the other partner did, and I submit it is an incompetent question and immaterial to our inquiry and not a subject of expert accounting testimony.

Mr. Avakian: I think it is certainly within the scope of experience of an accountant. He has testified he has great familiarity with just this type of partnership situation.

The Court: I will permit the question.

Mr. Avakian: Thank you, your Honor.

Redirect Examination

By Mr. Avakian:

Q. Mr. Semenza, based upon your experience as a certified public accountant, and based upon your examination of the books and records of the various enterprises, to the extent that [2909] they have been introduced in evidence here, would you state whether or not those books and records are adequate for the determination of the net income of those enterprises? A. They are.

Q. Now, Mr. Semenza, directing your attention to the situation in which one partner puts up the investment for a partnership business and the partner or partners agree to pay for their share of the investment by permitting their share of the profits to accumulate in their capital accounts, and they further agree that the partner who has put up the investment shall withdraw his investment before the other partners draw, would you state what you have found to be customary, in your accounting practice, with respect to the drawings of the partner who made the initial investment?

Mr. Campbell: I did not understand that to be the question: I thought there was to be a specific question as to whether or not in such case the partner putting up the capital would then withdraw more than the others.

Mr. Avakian: I am trying to avoid a leading question. I will ask him the way counsel suggests.

Q. Do you recall the factual situation I outlined in my question? A. Yes.

Q. I will not repeat that then. Is it customary in that type of situation, Mr. Semenza, for the partner who puts up the [2910] investment to withdraw his investment before the other partners make their withdrawals? A. Yes.

Mr. Avakian: No further questions.

Mr. Thompson: We have no further questions of Mr. Semenza, your Honor.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, the defense rests its case.

By Mr. Campbell:

Q. Mr. Morgan, I believe you identified yourself as a certified public accountant and presently engaged as a revenue agent, is that correct?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Robert W. Morgan.)

A. I did.

Q. And you further identified yourself as having taken part in the investigations in this particular case? A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Morgan, will you answer this yes or no—did you, on or about the 8th day of April, 1948, have occasion to go to the law offices of Woodburn, Thatcher and Forman? A. I did. [2911]

Q. And who, if any one, was present with you on that occasion?

A. There was Revenue Agents Weaver and Harkness.

Q. By Revenue Agent Weaver, do you mean Special Agent Weaver?

A. Yes, sir, and a stenographer from the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at Reno, Nevada.

Q. Did you know her name at that time?

A. I did at that time. I have since forgotten it.

Q. You do not recall her name at this time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was any one else with you on that occasion; that is to say, that went with you to the offices of Woodburn, Thatcher and Forman?

A. No, sir.

Q. Will you state whether or not your going there on that occasion was by reason of a prior appointment? A. That is correct.

Q. And do you recall at that time, to the best of your recollection, what time of day it was that you went to that office?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Robert W. Morgan.)

A. I wouldn't state definitely, but I believe it was in the early afternoon.

Q. What is your recollection as to the time originally set for your appointment there on that date?

A. My recollection is that the previous day I called Mr. Woodburn to arrange a time——

Q. Don't relate the conversation, but details had been [2912] arranged the previous day?

A. Correct.

Q. And with whom?

A. With Mr. Woodburn.

Q. Do you know which Mr. Woodburn? I believe the evidence shows more than one Woodburn.

A. I was not aware that there were two individuals at the time.

Q. And as a result of your conversation with Mr. Woodburn, was the appointment originally fixed? A. That is correct.

Q. And for what hour, if you recall?

A. As I recall, he first suggested we meet at approximately 10 o'clock in the morning.

Q. Did you have a subsequent conversation with any one, whereby the time of the appointment was changed? A. That is correct.

Q. With whom, if you recall?

A. As I recall, Mr. Woodburn called me later in the day, I believe at my hotel, and suggested a delay of a few hours.

Q. At any rate, the following day you and Mr. Weaver and Mr. Harkness and this young lady went to those offices? A. That is correct.

(Testimony of Robert W. Morgan.)

Q. Prior to going there, who was your appointment with, as you understood? [2913]

Mr. Avakian: Is this calling for hearsay?

Mr. Campbell: Well, I will strike that.

Q. You say you arrived at the office early in the afternoon. Whom did you see there?

A. We were ushered into the office of Mr. Thatcher.

Q. To what Mr. Thatcher do you refer?

A. We call him Jack Thatcher, John P. Thatcher, I believe is his name.

Q. Who was ushered in there—you say "we" were.

A. Well, the revenue agents I have mentioned, together with the young lady from the Collector's office, and we proceeded to Mr. Thatcher's office.

Q. Relate just what occurred there?

A. Mr. Thatcher, as I recall, asked us first why we were there and we told him it was——

Q. Pardon me—well, just go right ahead.

A. I told Mr. Thatcher——

Mr. Gillen: I think it would be hearsay to relate what was said there.

Mr. Campbell: I started to stop him, I anticipated there might be such an objection.

Q. Will you state, Mr. Morgan, whether or not you have ever met the defendant, Elmer Remmer?

A. I met him at that conference, yes, sir.

Q. By that conference, are you referring to the same occasion [2914] to which you have been testifying here? A. That is correct.

Q. Were you present here in the court room when Mr. Thatcher testified? A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Remmer in the room, if you recall, when you entered Mr. Thatcher's office, or whatever office it was there that you said Special Agent Weaver and Revenue Agent Harkness and the young lady entered?

A. You say was Mr. Remmer there?

Q. At the time you entered the room?

A. No, sir, he was not.

Q. How soon after you entered the room on that day did you see him?

A. We had a discussion——

Q. You can't state what was said.

A. No, I am just trying to refer to the time. I judge maybe 15 or 20 minutes. We had a preliminary discussion.

Q. Then what occurred?

A. Then Mr. Thatcher called Mr. Remmer into the room and he introduced all of us present to him.

Q. Had you yourself ever met Mr. Remmer prior to that occasion? A. No, sir.

Q. And were you introduced to him on that occasion? A. That is correct. [2915]

Q. What occurred after Mr. Remmer came into the room, if you know?

A. To the best of my recollection that was approximately the end of the interview.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Robert W. Morgan.)

Q. Was anything said or anything done at that time?

A. Mr. Thatcher announced that he did not wish to have Mr. Remmer interviewed by the agents and he gave each of us a typewritten statement.

Q. Was that in Mr. Remmer's presence, do you recall?

A. I can not recall whether that statement was given to us prior to the time Mr. Remmer entered the room or following.

Q. I show you Exhibit G-1 and ask you if you have ever seen this, or a duplicate copy of this, Mr. Morgan?

A. Yes, sir, this is copy of the statement that Mr. Thatcher gave to us.

Q. On that occasion? A. On that occasion.

Q. Now had you ever seen Mr. Remmer prior to that occasion? A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever met him or been introduced to him prior to that occasion? A. I had not.

Q. Do you recall whether the young lady from the Collector's office, that you refer to as having gone there with you, was in the room throughout the interview? [2916]

A. To the best of my recollection she was.

Q. Now in connection with that interview, who was in charge of the group of agents, Mr. Morgan?

A. Mr. Weaver.

Q. As Special Agent in charge of the investigation? A. That is correct.

Mr. Campbell: You may cross-examine.

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

Mr. Gillen: No cross-examination of Mr. Morgan.

(Witness excused.)

LYNN HARKNESS

having been previously sworn, testified as follows:

Direct Examination

By Mr. Campbell:

Q. You have previously been sworn here, Mr. Harkness? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And identified yourself as an agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And engaged in the conduct of the investigation of this case? A. That's right.

Q. You have heard the testimony of Mr. Morgan who immediately preceded you to the stand?

A. I did.

Q. And will you state whether or not you were present on the occasion on or about April 8, 1948, referred to? [2917] A. I was.

Q. And will you state whether or not your recollection of the events coincides with his, or if not, will you state in what particulars it does not?

A. It coincides.

Q. Are there any particulars in which it does not coincide? A. I do not recall any.

Q. Now with relation to the young lady who was present, do you recall her name?

A. No, I do not recall her name.

Q. Have you since learned her name?

A. Yes.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Lynn Harkness.)

Q. What is it?

A. Her name is—I forget the last name—I believe Helen Springer.

Q. And she was or is employed in what office?

A. Collector of Internal Revenue office in Reno.

Q. Were you present in court when Mr. Thatcher testified? A. I was.

Q. Was that the same Mr. Thatcher that you saw on the occasion of that visit? A. It was.

Q. Had you ever met Mr. Remmer prior to that visit? A. No, sir.

Q. That was the first time you were ever introduced to him? [2918] A. Yes.

Q. And you recognize him as the same man who is on trial here? A. Yes.

Q. In relation to the young lady who was with you on that occasion, do you recall how long she was present, or if she remained throughout the interview?

A. I am not definite about that, but I recall that she left—I believe she left before we did.

Mr. Campbell: You may cross-examine.

Mr. Gillen: I just want to make an inquiry of counsel, or stipulate—there was an answer given to a rather unusual question as to whether Mr. Harkness' recollection of the incident on April 8, 1948, coincides with his and he said it coincides with his.

Mr. Campbell: Coincides with the testimony given on the stand by Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Gillen: Yes, that is what I wanted to get straightened out. There are no questions.

A. I don't remember, but I don't believe I ever took it out of Mr. Tatcher's office with me.

A. Well, yes, I believe that is the letter I read that morning.

Q. When did you leave Mr. Thatcher's office on that occasion, Mrs. Springer; that is, with relation to the time you met Mr. Remmer and you were shown a copy of this document?

Q. And did you leave at that time?

A. And I left right after that.

Cross-Examination

By Mr. Gillen:

Q. I understand you to say your name was Mrs. Springer? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mrs. Springer, when did you go to work for the Collector of the Nevada District?

A. The first working day after January 1, 1948.

Q. Between January 1, 1948, and April 8, 1948, on how many occasions did you go out with revenue agents or other attaches of the government for the purpose of taking any statements?

A. This was my first time.

Q. How many times since then have you gone out with revenue agents or other attaches of the government to take statements?

A. Well, I wouldn't remember, but it has been several.

Q. Well, more than 20 times?

A. Well, perhaps 15 or 20.

Q. How many times did you go to the office of Thatcher & Woodburn after April 8th?

A. I was only in the office that once.

Q. How many other lawyer's offices have you gone to to take [2924] statements from taxpayers?

A. I have never gone to any other lawyer's office.

Q. When did you first learn that you were going to testify in this case? A. Yesterday.

Q. Who was it that imparted that information to you?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

A. The United States Attorney's office at Reno.

Q. What particular member of the United States Attorney's office?

A. I don't know the name of the party, but it was Mr. Thompson's representative.

Q. Was it in person or by telephone?

A. Telephone.

Q. Did you recall the incident immediately or was it recalled to you?

A. No, I recalled the incident.

Q. And were you told anything by other persons who had been present at that meeting in Mr. Thatcher's office and who had previously testified?

A. I don't understand your question.

Q. I say were you informed that other persons who were present with you in Mr. Thatcher's office on April 8th had testified in the case?

A. No, I wasn't given any information.

Q. Were you asked what you recalled about that incident? [2925] A. Yes.

Q. Were you reminded of anything by the person who talked to you? A. No, sir.

Q. You were not reminded of anything?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall how Mr. Remmer was dressed on that occasion?

A. No, I don't believe I do.

Q. Do you recall what kind of shoes he wore?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there anything unusual about his appearance in the manner of dress to you on that occasion? A. Nothing unusual.

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Q. Before you were talked to yesterday on the telephone and notified that you were to testify in this case, did anybody prior to that time talk to you about the incident of being in Mr. Thatcher's office on April 8, 1948?

A. I was asked once previously, yes. I remember the circumstances.

Q. By whom were you asked?

A. Mr. Harkness.

Q. When was that?

A. Oh, perhaps ten days ago.

Q. And did he recount to you what he recalled about the matter? A. No, sir. [2926]

Q. He didn't tell you what he remembered about it at all? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him what you remembered about it? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he correct you or take issue with you on your recollection of the matter at all?

A. He did not.

Q. Now Mrs. Springer, it is your testimony here now that you have a distinct recollection of this particular incident in Mr. Thatcher's office, although since that time you have been on 15 or 20 other calls outside of your office, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall what the purposes were of any other calls that you made outside of your office?

A. To obtain statements from taxpayers——

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as immaterial.

The Court: It is already answered.

Q. Do you recall whose offices you went to to obtain statements from taxpayers?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent and immaterial.

The Court: Objection sustained.

Mr. Gillen: It is perfectly proper cross-examination for the purpose of testing the recollection of a person who recalls an isolated incident. [2927]

The Court: I will permit the question.

A. In each case I went to the Revenue Agent's office.

Q. I do not quite understand that—you went from your own office to a different office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I asked you about how many other occasions you left your office to take a statement or carry on some duty you were assigned to outside of your office?

A. On each occasion when I have taken statement from a taxpayer it has been at the Revenue Agent's office.

Q. You never went outside the Revenue Agent's office or your own office?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as misleading. It is a matter of common knowledge the two offices are in the same building.

Mr. Gillen: That is not common knowledge to me. That is why I am inquiring.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Q. Your particular office is what office and located where?

A. On the second floor of the Postoffice Building at Reno.

Q. And the Revenue office that you refer to is located where?

A. The Clay Peters Building, between First and Second on Virginia.

Q. You are not sure where it is?

A. Oh, yes, I know where it is. I don't know the number of the office. [2928]

Q. Do you know the name of the building?

A. The Clay Peters Building.

Q. You are sure of that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you recall the names of any taxpayers whose statements you took 15 or 20 other times?

Mr. Campbell: Objected to as incompetent and calling for disclosure of confidential information.

The Court: Yes. Objection sustained.

Q. Do you remember of any agents you went with to take those 15 or 20 statements in the Revenue office?

A. Yes, a Mr. Thurman from Sacramento.

Q. When was that that you went with Mr. Thurman to take statement at the Revenue office?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Can you tell us what fixes it in your mind that you went over to Mr. Thatcher's office on April 8, 1948?

A. Yes, sir. I had been working for the Wage and Excess Tax Division and they loaned me to the

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Audit Section because they had several income tax returns that they wanted processed before April 15th and I don't remember that the date was April 8th, but I do remember it was some time before the 15th of April.

Q. How many other statements did you take between April 8th and April 15th? [2929]

A. I didn't take any.

Q. You didn't take any statements from anybody at all, is that correct? A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't take any statements at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. How recent was this occasion that you went with Mr. Thurman of Sacramento to take a statement?

A. Well, I wouldn't remember. I have taken statements for Mr. Thurman on two or three occasions and I have taken statements for Mr. Kimmel on two or three occasions, but I wouldn't remember the dates.

Q. Do you remember the year?

A. Well, the last one was probably four months ago.

Q. Probably four months ago—you are not sure of that? A. Well, it was last fall.

Q. Do you remember the first time you took a statement with Mr. Thurman from Sacramento, what year? A. No, I wouldn't remember.

Q. But you did have a specific recollection, without being aided by anybody refreshing your memory, that it was in 1948 that you went to Mr. Thatcher's office? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now can you describe Mr. Thatcher's office? Let me break it down this way. Can you describe Mr. Thatcher's office as [2930] you entered the office suite?

A. As I remember it, after getting off the elevator we passed the girl at the telephone switchboard and turned to the right, and I believe his office faces on Second Street, on the second floor of the building.

Q. Was there any delay from the time you arrived in the reception room until you got into Mr. Thatcher's office?

A. Practically none. I don't remember any delay.

Q. You do not recall any delay?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you do not recall the name of any of the agents who went with you excepting Mr. Harkness? A. No, sir.

Q. And the reason you remember Mr. Harkness is ten days ago Mr. Harkness talked to you about this incident?

A. Well, I have seen Mr. Harkness in the Collector's office on occasions since then.

Q. Isn't it a fact the reason Mr. Harkness was the only agent you remember is because he talked to you ten days ago and told you you would probably have to testify?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

A. Mr. Harkness did not tell me I would have to testify.

Q. And Mr. Harkness asked you if you remembered the incident? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you recited what you [2931] remembered? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Harkness didn't say anything about the incident to you? A. That's right.

Q. Do you know a revenue agent by the name of Ray Weaver?

A. No. The name is very familiar.

Q. I shouldn't call him revenue agent, I believe I should have called him a Special Agent.

A. No. The name is familiar but I don't know him.

Q. What time of day was this?

A. It was in the morning.

Q. Can you fix the approximate time in the morning?

A. Well, I believe at the time Mr. Forrester told me to come to his office he told me to be there before ten o'clock.

Q. Are you sure it wasn't two o'clock in the afternoon? A. No, sir, it was morning.

Q. You are positive it was morning?

A. Positive.

Q. And you are equally positive it wasn't two o'clock in the afternoon? A. Positive.

Q. Now reading from page 2193 of the transcript, I am going to read to you, Mrs. Springer, testimony given here by Special Agent Ray Weaver

BLEED THROUGH-- POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

during the course of this trial, and I will advise you that Mr. Ray Weaver has been identified here as the [2932] man who was in charge of this particular investigation, and reading from——

Mr. Campbell: I am going to object to reading testimony of one witness to another witness, if the Court please.

Mr. Gillen: Why yesterday Mr. Campbell asked——

The Court (Interceding): It doesn't make any difference what somebody did yesterday or did today; the question is this present situation.

Mr. Gillen: We have different rules for different sides, I presume.

The Court: You do not infer I have different rules for different sides?

Mr. Gillen: Mr. Campbell——

The Court (Interceding): Please answer—do I understand you to infer I have different rules for different sides?

Mr. Gillen: No, I say I don't believe we have but Mr. Campbell seemed to believe we did.

The Court: There is nothing here involving Mr. Campbell whatever. We should address ourselves to the objection.

Mr. Gillen: Very well, there is an objection before your Honor.

The Court: Objection will be sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Now may I point out to your Honor that cross-examination [2933] of a witness who pretends to relate an incident that occurred, I can properly read—and this is fundamental in cross-examination—I can read that witness testimony of another witness who was present at the same time and would have ostensibly observed the same thing, and ask that witness if this wasn't what happened and if there were three witnesses present, I can read all three witnesses' versions and ask if that wasn't the way it was.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

The Court: I have an idea it is proper for the jury to decide whether certain witnesses' testimony is to be credited or not. The thought I have in mind is that what you are about to do is to ask this witness to pass on the credibility and integrity of the witness Weaver. That is my purpose in making the ruling.

Mr. Gillen: May I point out to your Honor the reason this may be done is that it might refresh the recollection of the witness under cross-examination and direct her attention——

The Court: You may read it, go ahead, but I still feel that this witness is not to pass upon the credibility of any other witness' testimony.

Mr. Gillen: Hearing what another witness testified to might refresh her recollection or she might adopt his theory.

The Court: All right.

Mr. Gillen: I will reframe the question. [2934]

Q. Mrs. Springer, I am going to read you from page 2193 of the transcript, commencing at line 15 of that page. I am going to advise you that this is the testimony of Mr. Ray Weaver, who has been identified here as the agent in charge of the investigation and present at the incident related by you in Mr. Thatcher's office on April 8, 1948, and ask you if this refreshes your recollection as to what occurred at that time. Mr. Weaver was asked:

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

"Q. Was Mr. Remmer present in the room when you and your associates entered Mr. Thatcher's office? A. Yes.

"Q. Was anyone else beside himself and Mr. Thatcher present? A. Not that I recall.

"Q. Will you state again who was with you besides the stenographer, what other agents?

"A. Mr. Morgan, Mr. Harkness and myself."

Now was that, or was that not, the fact, namely, that when you went in the room with the three agents that Mr. Remmer was present with Mr. Thatcher?

Mr. Campbell: That is objected to because that is asking to directly pass upon the testimony of another witness. She can state what the fact is; if it refreshes her recollection that is different, she can so state.

The Court: I think so. Objection [2935] sustained.

Mr. Gillen: Your Honor will recall Mr. Thatcher was asked——

The Court (Interceding): I never heard of any rule that permits one witness to pass upon the credibility of another, on cross-examination or direct; I have never been advised of such a rule.

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Q. Does that refresh your recollection that when you went in the room with the three agents, Mr. Remmer was present with Mr. Thatcher?

A. I do not remember anyone but Mr. Thatcher being there when we entered the room.

Q. So it is your present recollection Mr. Thatcher was there alone?

A. That is the way I recall, yes.

Q. Now do you recall how long the interview between the persons present lasted, approximately?

A. Outside of the introduction——

Mr. Campbell: While she was present.

Mr. Gillen: Of course while she was present. I am talking about while you were present.

A. It was a very short time. After we went into the office one agent introduced himself and the others, Mr. Remmer came almost immediately into the room and Mr. Thatcher introduced him. Then after this letter was given to us, we had time to read that, I was dismissed. [2936]

Q. There was practically no conversation in your presence?

A. There was no conversation outside the introductions.

Q. Then as I understand your testimony, almost immediately after you arrived in the office with the agents and were introduced to Mr. Thatcher, Mr. Remmer arrived, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And immediately Mr. Thatcher introduced Mr. Remmer to all of you? A. Yes, sir.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

Q. And then almost immediately on the heels of that some young lady came in with these papers, one of which was handed to each of you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then immediately after that you were excused? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now I am going to read to you from page 2916 of the transcript and I will advise you that this is testimony which was given here yesterday by Mr. Robert Morgan, the government agent, and ask you if this refreshes your recollection—this is from line 23:

"Q. Do you recall whether the young lady——"

I will state that refers to you:

"——the young lady from the Collector's office, that you refer to as having gone there with you, was in the room throughout the interview? [2937]

"A. To the best of my recollection she was."

Does that refresh your recollection that you remained in the room with the agents throughout the entire interview had there with Mr. Remmer and Mr. Thatcher?

A. No, I was excused. At the time the agent told me I could leave, I wondered if he wanted me to wait outside until they discussed matters, but he told me I could go back to my own office.

Q. Do you recall before the arrival of Mr. Remmer in the room, as you stated he did enter the room, whether or not there was any discussion regarding the purpose of your visit, any discussion with Mr. Thatcher? A. I believe not.

Q. Do you recall whether or not Mr. Thatcher asked the agents, or any of the agents, in your presence, what was the purpose of their visit and what particular thing they were inquiring into regarding Mr. Remmer's income tax affairs?

A. No, we seemed to be expected there.

Q. So it is your testimony that you recollect no conversation at all about the purpose of your visit?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now would you say that the agents, in your presence, had talked with Mr. Thatcher for a period of 15 or 20 minutes before Mr. Remmer came into the room? A. Not in my presence, no. [2938]

Q. It is still your recollection that Mr. Remmer came into the room almost immediately on the heels of the introduction, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When I say "introduction," I mean the introduction of you and the representatives of the government to Mr. Thatcher. A. Yes, sir.

Q. Reading from page 2915 of the transcript—and this is the testimony of Mr. Robert Morgan still, commencing at line 6 of that page, Mr. Morgan was asked these questions and gave these answers:

"Q. Was Mr. Remmer in the room, if you recall, when you entered Mr. Thatcher's office, or whatever office it was there that you said Special Agent Weaver and Revenue Agent Harkness and the young lady entered?"

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

The young lady refers to you again, as the person accompanying the agents:

"A. You say was Mr. Remmer there?

"Q. At the time you entered the room?

"A. No, sir, he was not.

"Q. How soon after you entered the room on that day did you see him?

"A. We had a discussion——

"Q. You can't state what was said. [2939]

"A. No, I am just trying to refer to the time. I judge maybe 15 or 20 minutes. We had a preliminary discussion.

"Q. Then what occurred?

"A. Then Mr. Thatcher called Mr. Remmer into the room and he introduced all of us present to him."

Q. Now does that refresh your recollection that that was what happened instead of——

A. No.

Mr. Campbell: Just a minute—I object to the question in that form. I don't object to his reading the testimony, but the question was——

Mr. Gillen: My question was whether that testimony I read, relating the instance recounted by another witness, refreshed her recollection that that was the way things occurred instead of the way she originally recalled.

The Court: The objection will be sustained.

Q. Well, does that refresh your recollection, what I just read you as Mr. Morgan's testimony, as to what occurred there?

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

A. There was no discussion in my presence.

Q. You have no recollection of a 15 or 20 minute discussion before Mr. Remmer was called into the room? A. None.

Q. Now you stated here that it is your recollection now, Mrs. Springer, that you were instructed by your superior to [2940] be at this place with these agents in Mr. Thatcher's office before 10:00 o'clock in the morning, is that correct?

A. No, sir. I was to report to Mr. Forrester's office and on reporting to Mr. Forrester's office, the agents informed me that we would go to a lawyer's office, and we went from Mr. Forrester's office to Mr. Thatcher's office.

Q. Now I am interested in the time that you fix. What was the time?

A. I am sure Mr. Forrester told me to be there before ten o'clock.

Q. To meet the agents in his office, is that correct? A. Yes.

Q. And what is your best recollection as to the time that you arrived in Mr. Thatcher's office?

A. Well, I was in Mr. Forrester's office before ten and that is when the agents told me that we would go to the lawyer's office and we went immediately from Mr. Forrester's office to Mr. Thatcher's office.

Q. You are sure, are you, that the appointment wasn't delayed until some time later in the day? You are positive it was approximately ten o'clock or thereabouts?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

A. I went in the morning at ten o'clock, yes, sir.

Q. Now I am going to read you from page 2912 of the transcript, commencing at line 14, and this is the testimony of Mr. Robert Morgan, direct examination, and I will ask you to [2941] listen to this testimony, if you please, and tell me whether or not it refreshes your recollection as to the time of the appointment:

"Q. Will you state whether or not your going there on that occasion was by reason of a prior appointment? A. That is correct.

"Q. And do you recall at that time, to the best of your recollection, what time of day it was that you went to that office?

"A. I wouldn't state definitely, but I believe it was in the early afternoon.

"Q. What is your recollection as to the time originally set for your appointment there on that date?

"A. My recollection is that the previous day I called Mr. Woodburn to arrange a time——

"Q. Don't relate the conversation, but details had been arranged the previous day?

"A. Correct.

"Q. And with whom?

"A. With Mr. Woodburn.

"Q. Do you know which Mr. Woodburn? I believe the evidence shows more than one Woodburn.

"A. I was not aware that there were two individuals at the time. [2942]

BLURRED COPY

(Testimony of Mrs. Helen Springer.)

"Q. And as a result of your conversation with Mr. Woodburn, was the appointment originally fixed? A. That is correct.

"Q. And for what hour, if you recall?

"A. As I recall, he first suggested we meet at approximately 10 o'clock in the morning.

"Q. Did you have a subsequent conversation with anyone, whereby the time of the appointment was changed? A. That is correct.

"Q. With whom, if you recall?

"A. As I recall, Mr. Woodburn called me later in the day, I believe at my hotel, and suggested a delay of a few hours.

"Q. At any rate, the following day you and Mr. Weaver and Mr. Harkness and this young lady went to those offices? A. That is correct.

"Q. Prior to going there, who was your appointment with, as you understood?"

There was an objection and voluntarily retracted by Mr. Campbell and then the question was put:

"Q. You say you arrived at the office early in the afternoon. Whom did you see there?

"A. We were ushered into the office of Mr. Thatcher." [2943]

Q. Does that refresh your recollection that the appointment was in the afternoon instead of ten o'clock in the morning?

Mr. Campbell: That is objected to, if the Court please, on the grounds she is called upon to refresh her recollection regarding conversation with Mr. Woodburn. The witness' testimony was that he wasn't sure, he couldn't state definitely the time of day, but he thought early afternoon. It is true the last question read, I assumed in my question, although that was not the question, that the meeting was in the early afternoon.

The Court: She may answer the question.

A. No, I was at the office in the morning.

Q. When you were shown defendant's Exhibit G-1 today—with the Court's permission, I will hand it to you again—you stated that you recalled the letter, that that was the statement that you had handed to you on April 8, 1948, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever seen that statement between April 8, 1948, until Mr. Campbell showed it to you this morning in court? A. Never.

Q. Nobody in the interim showed you what purported to be a copy of that statement?

A. No, sir.

Q. And is it your testimony now that, having only seen that [2944] statement once—did you read the statement on that occasion? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And having only seen that statement once, on April 8, 1948, and never having seen it since that time, you were able to recognize it this morning as appearing to you as the statement which you read that day?

A. The contents are the same as I remember them. The letter was handed to us and was written in the third person and I know it was on Mr. Rem-mer's refusal to give the statement that I was dismissed.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Remmer refuse to give a statement?

A. No, the information was in this letter.

Q. So it is your recollection now that you were able to recognize that letter this morning, although you had never seen it since the one occasion when you read it on April 8, 1948? A. Yes.

Mr. Gillen: I think that is all.

Mr. Campbell: Nothing further.

(Witness excused.)

Mr. Thompson: The government has no further evidence, your Honor.

Mr. Gillen: May it please the Court, the defense rests, but we do desire to call your Honor's attention that we have some legal matters to be presented to your Honor, which would [2945] have to be presented, of course, out of the presence of the jury, and we ask for your Honor's pleasure as to that.

The Court: I am going to excuse the jury at this time until Monday morning, and ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I want you to feel that the Court is not intentionally delaying the final conclusion of this case, but we have matters which must be taken care of and legal matters which will require all of our time until Monday. Now we will be ready Monday to proceed with the arguments in the case.

MOTION FOR ACQUITTAL

(Febr. 14, 1952—Notebook No. 344 P. 90-100, Notebook No. 345 P. 1-17.)

Mr. Avakian: Without entering into discussion in the matter, unless your Honor desires me to, I simply want at this time, your Honor, to renew motions to strike testimony, which were made at the close of the government's case and on the same grounds advanced at that time.

The Court: The motion will be denied.

Mr. Avakian: Now with respect to the motion for acquittal, your Honor, in addition to all of the grounds and matters presented to your Honor at the conclusion of the government's case, which I likewise do not intend to review, unless your Honor desires me to, we have certain additional factors which we think your Honor should consider, so our motion for acquittal made at this time incorporates the grounds and reasons advanced at the close of the government's case, together with the additional factors which I would like to take up at this time.

First of all, I would like to call your Honor's attention to a decision of the Tax Court decided on November 30, 1951, of which I was not aware at the time the motion for acquittal was argued approximately a week ago. For some reason I had been a little bit behind in my reading of advance sheets during the past two months, your Honor, and I did not run across this decision until the last few days.

BLURRED COPY

The case was decided by the Tax Court on November 30, 1951. The name is Blackman vs. Commissioner, cited in 10 TCM decision 18,692 (m). That was the case, your Honor, in which the Commissioner had assessed a deficiency against the taxpayer by the use of the net worth method and the taxpayer attacked the deficiency in the Tax Court on the ground that the net worth method was not the proper method to use and the Tax Court sustained that contention because the case was not a proper one for the use of the net worth method.

Now factually, your Honor, the Blackman case was the case of a man who operated a bar. The evidence showed that during the period involved and at the starting point of the period, he had in his possession in his safe sums of cash money, the exact amount of which was not and could not be determined at the time of the Tax Court trial, and that in addition, during the period involved he had borrowed sums of money from relatives. The evidence failed to show any omission from the records of the business, that is, the records of the bar, of any income of the bar. In other words, it was a case which was like this in all those respects I have mentioned—first of all, there was no evidence introduced in the case of any items of income that were not recorded in the books; in other words, there was no direct evidence of unrecorded income. Secondly, insofar as the attempted use of the net worth method was concerned, there was cash in some amount, which could not then be determined; and third, there were loans.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Now in setting aside the deficiency, the Tax Court made this statement, and I am quoting:

"The use of the increase in the net worth method of determining income has been sustained in cases of failure of the taxpayer to maintain adequate records," citing Harris v. Commisioner, 174 Fed. (2), 70, "and also to produce records."

Citing Frank M. Wisley v. Commisioner, 13 TC 253, confirmed 185 Fed. (2) 263.

Continuing with the quotation from the Tax Court:

"This case, however, differs from those cases and others in which the increase in the use of net worth has been sustained. In this case petitioner's principal source of income was from sales at his bar room. As to those sales, he had records and the respondent did not find error in them in determining the deficiency, nor in any evidence of the trial, although there was considerable examination of witnesses as to the accuracy of the records."

That is the end of the quotation. Now if I may invite your Honor's attention to the rule of that case as applied here, I think it should be applied in two ways. First of all, your Honor, the evidence now clearly shows—and this was not entirely clear at the close of the government's case—but the evidence now clearly shows that the prosecution has in its possession books and records of various enterprises involved in this case which it has not produced in court and which, in fact, it has refused to produce in court. Your Honor will recall that we requested the production of these records during the trial, the prosecution objected to our request and the Court sustained the objection, and you will recall that prior to the trial we subpoenaed those records and the prosecution moved to quash the subpoena and your Honor granted that motion. I can not help but feel your Honor must have had in mind at the time those two rulings were made, that at some time before the trial ended, I am sure your Honor must have thought that the prosecution would bring those records into court, because they were relevant and material evidence and I can not believe your Honor had in mind that the defense would object at the time of this trial to having the jury consider the books and records of these other businesses involved in this case and which were in the possession of the prosecution. For reasons best known to itself, the prosecution has not produced those records. We feel, your Honor, as a matter of fundamental fairness, the prosecution should not be heard to say that the books and records are inadequate, when they refuse to bring in all of the books and records. That is a principle of fair play, which runs not only throughout the law, but through the minds of all of us in thinking of considerations of fair treatment of anybody. It isn't fair, your Honor, for the prosecution to say to this court and to the jury, "The records maintained by the defendant were incomplete," when they refuse to bring in some of those records which they have to let the Court and the jury determine for themselves whether they are complete; and so my first point, your Honor, is that your Honor, as a matter of fair play, as a matter of justice, should say to the prosecution, "You can't contend that the records are inadequate and incomplete and therefore the net worth method may properly be used, in view of the fact that you have not brought into court all of the records and documents."

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Now I don't know, your Honor, what is in those records and documents which the prosecution has upstairs on the third floor of this building. I assume, your Honor, that their production would be harmful to the prosecution and beneficial to the defense, and I make that assumption because of the aggressiveness with which the prosecution has resisted our efforts to get those documents into court. I think it is proper to infer, your Honor, from the persistent refusal of the prosecution to produce those records, that there is something in those records which would help our case and it might hurt their case. Certainly, if the documents were immaterial, they wouldn't be to our benefit. Certainly, your Honor, if those records would be detrimental to us and beneficial to the prosecution, we could assume that the prosecution would have brought them into court. That leaves only one alternative, your Honor, the only reasonable assumption we can make is that there is something in those records helpful to the defense and that is why the prosecution has persistently and consistently refused to make them available to us or to the Court.

Now I think, your Honor, it is a well recognized legal presumption that failure of a party to a litigation to produce evidence in its possession warrants the inference that the production of that evidence would be harmful to that party and beneficial to the other side. So, your Honor, in view of the rule that the net worth method can not be used unless there is first a showing that the books and records maintained are inadequate or incorrect, and in view of the fact that the evidence now shows that the prosecution has in its possession records and books additional to those presented in court here, books and records maintained by the enterprises involved, we submit, your Honor, that it would be unfair and unjust for your Honor to do anything else but to rule that, having taken that position, the prosecution can not, with clean hands, contend that the books and records of these enterprises were so inadequate that the net worth method is the proper method to use.

The Court: Let me ask you a question, please. The thought occurred to me as you were talking—what are books and records? Accounts of transactions. Now any book or record kept of these different enterprises necessarily have been kept within the knowledge of the defendant or his agents. The agents were here and if it had appeared during the trial that some accountant, Mr. Maundrell, or some one else who had custody of these books or records, if there is any other record of any transaction or any record, then we might have a question, but you haven't pointed to any specific record that is in existence or shown that there is any record in existence which has not been produced during the course of this trial.

Mr. Avakian: No, I think, your Honor, that that has been shown.

The Court: What particular record is there now? Can you name one that has been named and kept in the course of the business of any enterprise and not been produced in this case?

Mr. Avakian: Mr. Semenza testified in his discussions that Mr. Weaver told him that among the records he had in his room in San Francisco, on the occasion of that conversation, were some cash register tapes of these businesses. Those have not been produced.

The Court: From whose custody did Mr. Weaver originally get these books and records?

Mr. Avakian: Mr. Weaver, Mr. Ezralow and Mr. Morgan have all testified that they obtained them from Mr. Maundrell and Mr. Kyne and from other representatives with whom they dealt—and that means the accountants Slater and Ayton, now dead —from various representatives who were connected with the bookkeeping or management of these particular enterprises they obtained all of the books and records and documents, material, bank statements, and so on that they knew of. So, your Honor, everything was turned over.

You asked me for instances of things in existence which were not produced here to the jury—poker sheets of the Menlo Club, maintained by the cashier who were employees, three cashiers per day. Those poker sheets for the year 1946 are now in the possession of the prosecution. They chose to present in evidence here the poker sheet for January 1, 1946; for December 31, 1946; for January 1, 1947, and for one other day during 1946. In other words, they have presented the poker sheets for only three days during the year 1946, and they have not presented the poker sheets——

BLURRED COPY

The Court: Have you at any time, during the course of the trial, asked for the production of those identical poker sheets yon now name?

Mr. Avakian: We asked your Honor during the course of this trial for an order directing the prosecution to deposit with the Clerk all the books and records of these enterprises they had in their possession.

The Court: Did you make any requests for any specific item? You knew about all those and did you ask for their production? Will you answer that question?

Mr. Avakian: We have, your Honor. We filed a motion with this Court listing the different types of records by enterprises, naming the enterprises. We made a motion here, got a subpoena issued, your Honor, and your Honor quashed the subpoena. Now, your Honor, as I stated to you, none of the defense counsel has ever been permitted to look at these documents, neither has our accountant ever examined them, the documents in question. He was told in 1949, when he took a small section of these documents and there were four or five boxes of them remaining, he was told those would be available to him at a later time, but, your Honor, they never were made available, so if your Honor is asking me whether I can give you a detailed list of every document in the possession of the prosecution, my answer is no. If your Honor is asking me whether I can state, from the evidence in this record, that there are books, records and documents relating to transactions of these businesses during the prosecution years, in possession of the prosecution, the answer is definitely yes, because the testimony shows it.

Now, your Honor, is it fair for the prosecution to say to the jury and to your Honor that the books and records are incomplete, they are inadequate, when they have in their possession books and records which they refuse to bring in? Your Honor, that is not fair, it violates every fundamental principle of fair play I can think of. That is not consistent with our principle of justice in this country. It is completely contrary.

The Court: If you had pointed out during the course of the trial any specific book or record, I would have been inclined to consider with some thought the request, but there has been no request for any specific book or record and I believe the records of these different enterprises were kept with the knowledge of the defendant or of his agents and if there was any record anywhere that would have been of any service to the defendant in this case, they would have been able to point it out and ask the Court to have it produced and that wasn't done at any time in the course of this trial or in any proceeding prior to this trial.

BLURRED COPY

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, the witnesses of the government, the agents who took these records, testified that they did not give receipts for them, so we have no receipts from them.

The Court: I am going to deny the motion on that ground.

Mr. Avakian: May I complete my answer to your Honor?

The Court: I am satisfied with your answer.

Mr. Avakian: You have not heard my answer.

The Court: I do not want to hear any more.

Mr. Avakian: I want the record to show I am trying to answer your Honor's inquiry.

The Court: I am satisfied with your answer.

Mr. Avakian: If your Honor wants to read my mind, all right.

The Court: You are getting a little bit impertinent.

Mr. Avakian: I am not trying to be impertinent.

The Court: Whether you are trying or not, you are making a pretty fair job of it. Now let us go along and tone things down.

Mr. Avakian: I am sure your Honor appreciates——

The Court (Interceding): I appreciate and understand. Now let's go along.

Mr. Avakian: I have to make a record, your Honor.

The Court: All right, that is the record on that point. You asked on that ground and I am denying it on that ground. Now what is your next point?

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor has made a factual

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

statement of what we have in mind and intend to do, which is not correct and I would like to correct it, and that is this, your Honor—we attempted to obtain through a subpoena duces tecum of this court, we attempted to obtain an opportunity to examine the records of these enterprises in possession of the prosecution, for the purpose of determining whether they had in their possession any specific documents material to this case, so that we could then specifically ask your Honor to force the production of those documents. Your Honor by granting the prosecution's motion to quash that subpoena, and by preventing us thereby from examining what they had in their possession, made it impossible for us to state to your Honor any specific document which we wanted brought in, so we are in the position, your Honor, of having to state to your Honor in a general way that there are books and records relating to these enterprises in the possession of the prosecution, which they have refused to produce and other, your Honor, than the cash register tapes, which I have enumerated specifically, and aside from the poker sheets of the Menlo Club, which I have enumerated specifically, we are not able to give you a detailed list of the precise documents they have and we are able to state to your Honor that there are documents and records in their possession which are the property of these enterprises, which were maintained by these enterprises as a recordation of their business transactions, which have not been produced in this court by the prosecution, although they have possession of them, and your Honor will recall, I am sure, that in addition to the subpoena which was quashed, we sought an order of your court prior to the trial and asked in Las Vegas, by motion, requesting that we have the opportunity at that time, prior to the trial, to examine these records, and that was on November 15th. The prosecution objected to that motion and your Honor denied our motion. Had we been permitted to examine those records between November 15th and November 28th, we would then have been in position to state to your Honor by specific description the exact documents in possession of the prosecution which we desired to have presented. That, your Honor, is why——

BLURRED COPY

The Court (Interceding): I denied that on several grounds. One was you waited until a week before the trial and granting of that motion would have entailed a long delay.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor states we were too late on November 15th and yet you state if we had asked for it during the trial, you would have let us have it.

The Court: I am not going to sit and listen to any further statements from you. Are you ready to take up your second point?

Mr. Avakian: Yes.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Avakian: The second point of the argument is even if the prosecution had laid the preliminary foundation for the use of the net worth method, by means of showing inadequacy and incorrectness of records maintained, or by showing the failure to produce those records to the government, even with that testimony, there was still the factor, your Honor, that the net worth method could not be used under the law of the cases and under the Internal Revenue Code and the regulations, unless a starting point can be established and it can be determined that net worth can be measured accurately. Now that point was covered at the close of the government's case at the argument on the basis of evidence in existence at that time. Now additional testimony has come in, your Honor, and before the Court at the present time, showing, first of all, the impossibility of using the net worth method, in view of the impossibility of determining at this late date—or any date, for that matter—the amount of cash in existence on December 31st in each year involved in the indictment period. If you can not determine the net worth, you can not determine the net worth increase, and if you can not determine the net worth increase, you can not determine income by the net worth method.

In other words, your Honor, we have testimony that is uncontradicted by any accountant in this case, that it is possible to determine the income of the taxpayer, this defendant, by means of the books and records and the testimony of the witnesses in explanation of them in this case. Now that testimony of Mr. Semenza has not been challenged by any government accountants. Not one single government accountant has testified that he, as an accountant, could not determine the evidence from reference to receipts and disbursements through the use of books and records in this case. On the contrary, the government's accountants, in presenting their charts, testified simply this, that they had taken a list of assets and liabilities on Mr. Campbell's instructions, and on the basis of that list, which was enumerated to them by Mr. Campbell, they made computations. In other words, your Honor, they were simply human comptometers. They took the figures given to them by a man who is a lawyer and stipulates he is not an accountant, they took figures that he gave to them and they added them and they subtracted them and they come up with a result, but that, your Honor, is not accounting evidence. That is not evidence of an accountant that this is the correct income. That is not evidence of an accountant that this is the correct method to determine income. That is simply evidence from a man who is an accountant that he has taken certain figures, which have been handed to him, not figures based on his judgment or analysis of what is proper accountingwise, but rather certain items and figures which have been given to him by a non-accountant, and he has added and he has subtracted and he has come up with an answer.

So I say to your Honor that we now have in evidence, as uncontradicted testimony, the testimony of a certified public accountant as to what the proper method is for determining the income on the basis of the evidence in the record and as to what that income is. Your Honor, we now have in evidence, as uncontradicted testimony, from a certified public accountant, the fact that the manner in which the partnership investments and drawings were handled in this case is customary business practice with respect to partnerships in which one man puts up the investment and the other partners build up their equities by leaving their share of the profits in the business.

Now I think, your Honor, that this is a fair statement of the evidence and I think that the charts which have been presented and examination and cross-examination of the witnesses, makes it clear that there is no substantial deficiency in this case for any year, if the partnerships which were set up in the books of these enterprises and which were reflected in the partnership returns, are treated as partnerships, and if the income from those partnerships is taxed on a partnership basis. Now, your Honor, the only basis that I can find, which the prosecution may have in mind for contending that these partnerships are dummies rather than actual partnerships, is that Mr. Remmer put up the investment and the other partners did not, and, secondly, the other partners received credits in their capital accounts for their amount of the profits and, with some exception, did not actually draw out their profits during the years in question, although your Honor will recall substantial withdrawals subsequent to the indictment herein by various partners, Mr. Maundrell, for example, drawing out by February, 1948, substantially the full amount he had accumulated in his capital account; and, your Honor, if the evidence showed that the partners—just to use Mr. Maundrell as an example—if the evidence shows that Mr. Maundrell had taken his share of the profits out of the business and then had surreptitiously turned that money over to the defendant, that would be a good basis for contending that that was not in fact a partnership, that it was a dummy.

The Court: The question of whether the partnership is a real partnership would be left to this jury.

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, that should be left to the jury only if there is some reasonable basis upon which they could infer that the partnerships are phony.

The Court: It will be left to the jury.

Mr. Avakian: Do I understand your Honor has already made up your mind on that point?

The Court: On that point, certainly that is a question to be determined by the jury and all facts and circumstances to be determined by the jury on that question.

Mr. Avakian: I had not finished my presentation of that point.

The Court: You know I have sat here for ten weeks myself and listened to this evidence.

Mr. Avakian: So have I, but it is my understanding, your Honor, no matter how long the case——

The Court (Interceding): On that point I will tell you, and I think it is only fair to tell you, that I think that is a question to go to the jury.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Avakian: I had hoped that your Honor would have an open mind on that until I completed arguing my motion for acquittal, but I assume that your Honor——

The Court (Interceding): I listened to the testimony and your analysis of it is not going to change the impression I got from the evidence on that point. I think that is a question there for the jury. I do not know what the answer to the question is, but I think it is a question for the jury.

Mr. Avakian: I certainly do not question your Honor's right to form that opinion, but I hoped that wasn't your Honor's position and your mind would be open to the extent of listening to what I had to say or not cut me off before I finished, but rather keep your mind open, and in the event I present something to your Honor, you would reconsider, that your Honor would be open for that purpose. I do not know, your Honor, whether there is any point in my completing my presentation.

The Court: On that question I think it should go to the jury.

Mr. Avakian: Is your Honor's mind so definitely made up it is closed to any argument I might present? Shall I stop now or continue?

The Court: Go ahead. I am just telling you how I feel.

Mr. Avakian: I appreciate your telling me, but I hope your mind is open to anything I have to say.

The Court: If you say anything that could be considered sufficient to justify a change of opinion,

BLURRED COPY

I will consider it, certainly. I sat here during this trial and listened to this evidence and made notes and I have some of this evidence in mind and it is my opinion that the question should be answered by the jury.

Mr. Avakian: I recall yesterday your Honor made a statement from the bench, in connection with offer of proof on this particular point, that it appeared obvious to your Honor that if the agreements provided that Mr. Remmer was to withdraw his investment before the other partners drew their part of their share, he was entitled to do that, and the uncontradicted evidence is that he did have that right. Every prosecution witness who has testified on that point has said that that was the arrangement, to the extent that verbal agreements were recorded in the written agreements and the written agreements are in evidence here and show that the defendant had that right, and so, your Honor, I think that if the defendant had the right under his agreement with these partners, as the uncontradicted evidence shows, to withdraw his investment before the other partners commenced withdrawing their share of the profits, and if, your Honor, that practice or arrangement is customary in the business world, I do not see, your Honor, how there is anything from which the jury could infer fraud.

The Court: There isn't from that, of course, on the one circumstance, if it is customary for legitimate partnerships to operate that way, from that circumstances there is no reason why the jury would infer fraud.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Avakian: Your Honor, I have listened to this trial, as we all have, and I have listened intelligently and with a careful ear on that very point, because I had assumed——

The Court (Interceding): I am not going to hear any more argument on that point.

Mr. Avakian: I just wanted to say that I have not heard anything to show fraud.

The Court: I do not want to hear any more argument. I do not know of any rule that requires a judge to sit and listen to argument which incites counsel—I am not going to sit and listen to any more. What other point have you?

Mr. Avakian: That, your Honor, is my point. In view of your Honor's ruling that I should not talk further on that point, that is the conclusion of my argument.

The Court: Now what has the government to say about it?

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Avakian, your Honor, in connection with his motion, has incorporated the same grounds which he asserted at the close of the government's opening case, and to save time I would like to incorporate the same rebuttal that we made at that time to those motions.

The Court: I would like to hear from you on this question of whether or not there are records of these enterprises which should have been produced in this trial.

Mr. Thompson: Here is our position on that, your Honor. The testimony is uncontradicted those records were produced by the government agents and obtained by the government agents from Mr. Kyne and Mr. Maundrell, both of whom were present here and both of whom knew what the records were. Those two witnesses, your Honor will recall, are the principal witnesses who identified the records of these businesses now before the Court. In addition to that, Mr. Semenza testified, and his testimony was supported by that of Mr. Weaver, that in June, I believe, of 1949, he was given full access to all the records then in the possession of the government's agents and was permitted to select from those records the ones which he desired to take. In addition to that, Mr. Weaver testified that Mr. Friedman, another accountant for the defendant, subsequent to Mr. Semenza having access to the records, also was given permission to work in that particular office and had access to all the records.

BLURRED COPY

Now, in the first place, we think that it is clear that the defendant and his counsel know what those records are. We also think it is plain, from what has occurred here during the trial, that whenever any specific record was requested which the defendants thought would help their case, it was brought down immediately. That was done with some poker sheets. Further, we think that it is not proper for the prosecution or the defense, or any party to any case, civil or criminal, intentionally to encumber the record with a group of irrelevant material which does not aid in the prosecution or defense of the case. From our point of view, that is what would have been done had a miscellaneous group of poker sheets of the Menlo Club, for example, for the year 1946, been brought into court, in view of Mr. Maundrell's testimony that all of the information on those poker sheets had been entered in the ledger records of the Menlo Club for the year 1946; that those poker sheets were delivered to him by various cashiers of the club room operation. As a matter of fact, your Honor will recall that certain of the entries from the poker sheets were checked in connection with Mr. Maundrell's testimony and it was shown that the income reported on the poker sheets had been reported by him in the ledger books of the Menlo Club.

It is the contention of the defense that the books are accurate. The only purpose that could be served by producing the poker sheets themselves, for example, would be to show that they are inaccurate. It could not possibly aid the defense to have the poker sheets in evidence if the information transferred from the poker sheets to the ledger books of the Menlo Club is inadequate information on the poker sheets themselves. That would show only that the information was correctly transferred from one record to another and to that extent the books were accurate. So we say on the face of it, it does not hurt the defense a bit not to bring into court all this miscellaneous group of poker sheets from the Menlo Club, or, for example, cancelled checks or bank statements or cash register tabs, I believe were mentioned by Mr. Semenza, if the information from those records is correctly entered in the books themselves. The books compile it all in an easily understandable form and if that information is not entered in those books correctly, it would hurt rather than help the defendant's contention to show that. Inasmuch as the miscellaneous records to which I refer were not brought into court, the presumption is that they were correctly entered in these books which are now before the Court, and to that extent the production of them would only encumber the record in this case with miscellaneous information which would not assist either the Court or the jury or the defense in deciding the issues before it.

Now with regard to books and records, your Honor, you must bear in mind that the Menlo Club is not on trial here, the 110 Eddy Club is not on trial here. The taxpayer is Mr. Elmer Remmer. It is the contention of the government that Mr. Elmer Remmer's books and records were inadequate from which to determine his true net income for the years in question. True, we contend that in certain respects the books and records of these other enterprises were not properly kept. Mr. Semenza, in testifying that they were adequate, disagrees with the testimony of Mr. Weaver, but be that as it may, the most that Mr. Semenza could do on a computation of income on receipts and disbursements method was to use the sources of income of which he was acquainted here in evidence and he limited himself to those certain specific enterprises. You do not, for example, find Mr. Semenza trying to compute how much Mr. Remmer won or lost in gambling during those years, and there is specific evidence in the record that during those years Mr. Remmer did gamble and did have gambling income. As a matter of fact, on one of his returns he reported five thousand dollars gambling income, without any explanation where it came from or what gambling he was engaged in. There is a possible source of income in the liquor transactions, we find in the record of Mr. Remmer relative to the Gallagher and Burton whiskey. We find in the record of Mr. Remmer evidence relating to the purchase and sales of large stock of liquor which the witness was kept in a warehouse at 52 Mason Street. It is Mr. Remmer's records that are inadequate, your Honor. The inadequacy of those records, to a certain extent, is demonstrated by the inadequacy of some of the records of these businesses. The B & R Smoke Shop, the records for the gambling consist of one entry per day. Mr. Kyne testified those are the only records kept by the B & R Smoke Shop. Mr. Kyne did not know—I don't know who knows—if all of the B & R Smoke Shop records are in the record. Mr. Semenza did not testify that the B & R income was correctly reported. He testified that if the entries in those books were correct, the income was correctly reported, and I think it is fairly obvious when the only record of a business, handling thousands of dollars, is the record of one entry, win $200, loss $600, around three thousand dollars each day, that those records are wholly inadequate for the purpose of determining what the true net income of that business was.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The witness testified, for example, that all expenses of the operation of the B & R Smoke Shop were paid out before that net figure was entered. What were those expenses? Certain expenses that that B & R Smoke Shop may have might be considered expenses, but may not be deductible items, so far as income determination is concerned. We have no record of those expenses. As any record of those expenses, that is the B & R Smoke Shop, is wholly inadequate, Mr. Remmer's personal records are wholly inadequate. He got property in the names of three persons, he took license in the Menlo Club in the name of Joseph Billington, he kept no record of those things himself. He had safety deposit box in the name of Henry Clay. All those things, I think, point clearly that there is fully adequate evidence in the record to go to the jury on the adequacy of the record.

It is not my purpose at this time to rehash the argument before the jury. I think there is substantial evidence on any point for the jury to decide that issue. We think there is ample evidence on all points which the defense has mentioned to warrant a denial of the motion for judgment of acquittal.

I do not know just how far your Honor wants me to go. I tried to point out a few highlights to show our contention, and if your Honor desires additional argument on any additional point, I will be glad to give it.

The Court: We will take a recess until one o'clock, and then if counsel wants to argue, they may do so.

BLEED THROUGH-- POOR COPY

1:05 P.M.

Mr. Thompson: I have nothing further at this time.

Mr. Avakian: I wish to be heard, very briefly, your Honor, with respect solely to this question of the matter of records.

The Court: Very well.

Mr. Avakian: Mr. Thompson takes the position, in answer to my argument, that it is not incumbent upon the government to encumber the record in this case with documents which do not aid the case. That argument, of course, begs the question, your Honor, because so far we have only the determination of Mr. Thompson, and the other members of the prosecution's staff, that these records would not aid the case. They have never permitted your Honor to rule on the materiality of these records because they have never brought them in. They have never permitted us, as the parties primarily responsible in determining whether certain evidence should be presented, is beneficial to the defendant, to determine whether or not those records might be material, and I only suggest this to your Honor, if the government really felt these records had no materiality to the case, they would have no objection to our examining them at the court, and even turning them over to us.

Second, Mr. Thompson states that the issue is not the adequacy of the records of the Menlo Club and the other enterprises, but rather the adequacy of the records of Mr. Remmer personally. Now, your Honor, if the government contends, as some of its witnesses have, that Mr. Remmer is the Menlo Club, there is no partnership, the Menlo Club is a sole enterprise of Mr. Remmer, then I do not see how a distinction could be drawn of the kind Mr. Thompson draws. The fact remains that the only evidence of income shown in this case is the income of these different enterprises. Now whether the enterprise is solely Mr. Remmer or is a partnership, does not enter the question of whether the business records of that enterprise were adequate. Now the issue then is, your Honor, whether the business records of these enterprises were adequate. Mr. Thompson states that the production of the poker sheets would serve no purpose because Mr. Maundrell testified that the income shown on the poker sheets was all entered in the books.

Now, your Honor, if the prosecution is right in saying that these partnerships were fraudulent, then Mr. Maundrell is equally guilty with the defendant in the crime of tax evasion, because he was then a direct participant, he would have been a direct participant, in the crime, and so the jury might feel that Mr. Maundrell's testimony that all the income shown on the poker sheets was entered on the books, would not be as competent as an actual examination of the poker sheets themselves and a direct comparison of them, a direct proof that all income shown on the poker sheets was entered in the books, because your Honor will remember that the poker sheets were made up, not by the partners, but by employees, a large number of them, and the jury might very well feel that proof, direct proof from the actual introduction into evidence of the poker sheets, that everything shown on the poker sheets was entered in the books, would be stronger than the simple verbal word of Mr. Maundrell who, under the government's theory, would have been a participate in the crime, that he entered all that evidence, so we think, your Honor, that it must be clear that the production of those poker sheets and the opportunity to so prove, through analysis of the poker sheets themselves, that everything was in evidence, would have been material in this case.

Then he states, with respect to the B & R Smoke Shop, that Mr. Kyne said the one entry per day were the only records of the B & R Smoke Shop. Your Honor will recall that during the time Mr. Kyne was in the service, Mr. Pritchett was keeping the records. Mr. Pritchett testified he turned these 1945 records over to Mr. Slater. The government obtained records from Mr. Slater. Mr. Slater is now dead, died some time ago, and it may be included in these records that the prosecution has upstairs, is material taken from Mr. Slater which may include Pritchett records. Now, your Honor, if that were true, it would be a material fact for the jury to consider what those records show as income of the B & R Smoke Shop for that period. Mr. Slater is not available to us. We do not know whether the records taken from Mr. Slater include the records from Mr. Pritchett or not because the prosecution won't let us look at what they took from Mr. Slater. They won't let the jury look at what they took from Mr. Slater and they haven't shown to your Honor what they took from Mr. Slater; so I think, your Honor, Mr. Thompson's argument simply emphasizes what is an arbitrary position by the prosecution as to which records maintained by these enterprises are material and which are not material. Now I suggest to your Honor again that that sort of procedure violates every principle of American justice. That is not the way criminal trials are supposed to be conducted in this country, and I say to your Honor in all sincerity, in all earnestness, that the proper thing for your Honor to do, under these circumstances, is to say to the prosecution: "You will not be heard in this Court to contend that the records of these businesses are inadequate unless you produce for examination by the Court all of the records of these businesses which you have in your possession."

The Court: The motion is denied.

(Defendant present with counsel.)

(Jury not present.)

The Court: Now at this time I call attention to Rule 30 of the Rules of Federal procedure. The Court has noted that the first part of this rule has been complied with. Counsel have presented their written requests as to instructions to the jury and those requests have, of course, been served on the parties. Now at this time I wish to inform counsel for the government and counsel for the defendant the Court will give, and proposes to give, the instructions, copies of which just before coming into court were handed to counsel for both the government and the defendant, the instructions being numbered 1 to 45, inclusive. I want to at this time inform counsel they have an opportunity now to make objection to the giving of any of these proposed instructions or take exceptions as to the failure of the Court or refusal of the Court, to give instructions requested by counsel. I believe it would be well to take that matter up now.

I want to inform counsel also that that proposed change suggested in regard to the form of verdict and last instruction will not be followed. The Court [2947] will give the form of verdict which is the practice of this court to be submitted to the jury and the form of instruction in that regard will be followed in this case. That probably is the last instruction proposed. That proposal to give the instructions constitutes the Court's action on the requests.

Mr. Campbell: Your Honor, as I understand the Court's order is that instructions previously numbered 1 to 45 will be the instructions as given by the Court.

The Court: As just presented to counsel will be the instructions.

Now at this time the Court will give counsel an opportunity to object to any of the proposed instructions, 1 to 45, inclusive, and also an opportunity to take exceptions to the refusal of the Court to give any other instruction and at this time counsel should make their objections and state the grounds of the objection.

Mr. Campbell: The government has no objections or exceptions.

The Court: Counsel for the defendant?

Mr. Golden: Yes, your Honor. We object and except to the Court giving the instruction which we believe is numbered Court's Instruction No. 7.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: That instruction reads: "You are instructed [2948] that the theory of law——"

Mr. Golden: Yes, your Honor, and the grounds are that it does not state the law, in that the presumption of innocence, in our opinion, applies to every defendant and is not qualified as set forth in that instruction.

We object and except to the Court giving the instruction which the Court has numbered 40, the one that starts: "The matter of sympathy * * *" on the ground that it presents only one phase of the subject matter which it purports to cover and therefore is not an impartial instruction, in that it instructs the jury not to consider the matter of sympathy for the defendant and says nothing about the fact the jury should not consider the matter of prejudice against him. And while those two points are, I believe, covered in another instruction which the Court will give, the addition of this instruction emphasizes the matter of the disregard of sympathy without repeating the matter of disregard of prejudice.

Those are the only objections and exceptions we have to the matter the Court proposes to give.

We do, however, wish to object and except to proposed instructions which the defendant has requested and the Court has refused and we do in each case on the grounds that the instruction refused is a correct statement of the law and applicable to the case; that it is the Court's duty, in a criminal case, to instruct upon every phase of the law which pertains to the [2949] case and that the refusal to give those instructions, or the substance of them, results in the Court not performing that duty. I say that respectfully, of course.

Now those instructions, your Honor, are—I am using now the numbers on our proposed instructions—those requested instructions Nos. 10, 16, 17, 19, 21, 26, 28, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 47, 48, 49, 50, 54, 56, 57, 60, 69, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 88, 89, 90, 107, 108, 109, 111, 114, 124, and 129, and we make the objection and exception to the refusal to give those instructions jointly and severally; that is, we object and except to the refusal to give each one of them. I say that because some of them concern the same subject matter. I think that covers it.

The Court: I think we have complied with Rule 30 now. Any question about it?

Mr. Golden: I think so, yes.

The Court: So we will call in the jury and proceed with the arguments. [2950]

[Title of District Court and Cause.]

JURY TRIAL

Thursday, February 21, 1952, 11:35 A.M.

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO CORRECT ERRORS IN RECORD ARISING FROM OMISSIONS

The Court: You may proceed.

Mr. Golden: If the Court please, this motion is made in writing and filed and the motion has attached to it an affidavit made by myself and Mr. Avakian and Mr. Lohse. It is one affidavit but it is made by each of us for himself, not one for the other, and the motion, your Honor, is to insert some additional matter in the transcript, and the pages in the transcript which are relevant are pages 833 and 834. Now it might assist if those pages are available.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: You may read it.

Mr. Golden: Commencing on page 833, the middle of the page, line 12, Mr. Gillen says: "May I be heard?" and the Court says: [2951]

"Just let me finish. I am doing the talking here. There is no necessity of that remark. Your remark in making that objection to these nicknames received here, imputing something against government's counsel—Mr. Campbell has not conducted himself in any way to merit that kind of treatment. That isn't fair treatment of one lawyer to another. This isn't a contest between counsel for the defendant and counsel for the plaintiff. Now we will call in the jury."

The Court: The record shows that those remarks were made in the absence of the jury?

Mr. Golden: Yes, your Honor—"Now we will call in the jury:

"Mr. Gillen: You are not going to let me say a word?

"The Court: We are going to call the jury.

"(Off-the-record remarks by counsel.)"

The Court says:

"I will direct the reporter not to put your remarks in the record. Sit down. I will make a finding that your conduct, the remarks made this morning, are in contempt of this court and I will fine you $100 and you are committed to the custody of the marshal until the fine is paid.

BLURRED COPY

"Mr. Gillen: I will pay it right now.

"The Court: We will be in recess. [2952]

"Mr. Avakian: Can't we have what was said here in the record?

"The Court: No. We will be in recess for five minutes."

Now according to the affidavit which is on file with the motion, at the point where Mr. Gillen says: "May I be heard?" and the Court says: "Just let me finish. I am doing the talking here," at that point the affidavit states that at that point the Court informed Mr. Gillen, in reply to his question, "May I be heard?" that he would have an opportunity to explain his position to the Court when the Court had completed the Court's remarks, and the first request made by the motion is that at that point, after the Court says: "I am doing the talking here," there be inserted language to the effect that the Court then said to Mr. Gillen that when the Court was finished Mr. Gillen would have an opportunity to explain his position.

Then the second request made by the motion comes at a place in the transcript after the Court says: "We are going to call the jury" and where the reporter has inserted in parentheses the off-the-record remarks by counsel, the affidavit shows that at point Mr. Gillen stated that he wanted the record to show that the Court would not hear what he wanted to say, and we move that words to that effect be inserted at that point.

The Court: Let me ask you a question. Both these requests pertain to matters after the adjudication of the [2953] contempt?

Mr. Golden: No, your Honor, actually they are before the adjudication.

The Court: Both of them are?

Mr. Golden: Both of them, yes, your Honor.

The Court: Go ahead. Pardon me for interrupting. I just wanted to get that point certain.

Mr. Golden: The third and last matter of my motion occurs after the Court's finding Mr. Gillen's conduct to be in contempt of the Court and at the end of the language which I read to your Honor from pages 833 and 834 and that is this, that at that time I, myself, requested that the record show the grounds upon which your Honor found Mr. Gillen's conduct to be contemptuous and the affidavit shows that I made that request and that the Court left the bench without reply to that request.

Now, specifically, the first insertion which we request would occur after the first word on line 14 of page 833 of the transcript and the second requested insertion would occur in lieu of the reporter's statement in parenthesis of "(Off-the-record remarks by counsel)," which on the last line of page 833, and the third requested insertion would occur after line 11 on page 834 of the transcript. I say that in order to make the matter clear.

This is simply a matter, your Honor, where the transcript is admittedly incomplete, if at no other place, in the [2954] place where the reporter says, "(Off-the-record remarks by counsel)." The matter occurred in court on December 14th. The affidavit was made on December 17th and represents the best recollection of affiants as to what was actually said. I suppose no human being could be positive as to the exact words which we used which, of course—I say this respectfully—the precise matter said in court being unreported. However, it represents, we are satisfied, the substance of what was said and there is no contrary showing from the prosecution and therefore we ask that the record be corrected by inserting that matter as set forth in the affidavit at the places I have indicated.

Mr. Campbell: If the Court please, I must confess with Mr. Golden that the matter happened at the time so precipitously and suddenly that I can not definitely state I have a clear recollection of the exact language used at the time. I do recall, however, one statement which Mr. Gillen made immediately after the jury had left and prior to some of the matters set forth here. Mr. Gillen stated something to this effect—I am not trying to quote the exact language—what I am referring to was made during the off-the-record period and prior to the contempt. He stated something to the effect as follows that—"You are just trying to intimidate me with another threat of contempt for the benefit of the newspapers." I do have a definite recollection of a statement to that effect. [2955] As I say, I cannot state the exact words. Now, as to these matters set forth in the affidavit of Mr. Golden and Mr. Avakian——

The Court: I remember such remarks.

Mr. Campbell: ——my recollection would coincide with theirs as to the statements set forth here. That is the extent of my recollection. The thing happened very rapidly at the time, but I do remember that particular statement of counsel after the jury was excused and during the period of time when the Court had instructed the reporter: "Do not take this down. Do not make this a part of the record." I simply want to make that for the record.

Mr. Golden: Apparently, your Honor, Mr. Campbell agrees that the affidavit is substantially correct. Now, it may well be that Mr. Gillen said something to the effect as Mr. Campbell has stated at another portion of the transcript. In other words, your Honor, at the bottom of page 833 the affidavit says that Mr. Gillen requested that he wanted the record to show that the Court would not hear what he had to say.

The Court: I have a recollection here I would like to give you right now. At the time shortly after the jury was excluded we had a discussion here and I, at that time, had no thought of any adjudication of contempt and requested to have the jury brought in, when Mr. Gillen, in an outburst—something which you [2956] can't place in these records, these records are cold—insulting outburst, outrageous, ungentlemanly, in an unkind manner, accused this Court of making a play to the gallery, as you might say, and that interrupted the calling in of the jury and to my mind the conduct of Mr. Gillen at that time left no other alternative, to either get off the bench and step off, or to adjudicate him for contempt. Now, that is my recollection.

Mr. Golden: Your Honor, we understand that is your position but we are not trying to change anything about the contempt——

The Court: I do not see anything about that in the record.

Mr. Golden: It is in your Honor's ruling and I want to point to that certificate, that will give it. Has your Honor got that ceretificate before you?

The Court: No.

Mr. Golden: According to the Court's certificate, page 3 of the certificate, your Honor sets forth that after you said on the second line of page 834, after you said to Mr. Gillen: "Sit down," then your Honor says the following: "After the Court ordered the reporter not to put Mr. Gillen's remarks——"

The Court (Interceding): You recollect what took place and so does Mr. Gillen. You know the manner in which he addressed the Court. He wasn't in any [2957] frame of mind for an ordinary human being to give a sound, decent explanation of anything in this record. Now, I am going to deny this motion now.

Mr. Golden: Your Honor, we are not appealing to do anything about the contempt.

The Court: The motion is denied.

Mr. Golden: Just change the record to speak the truth the way it is.

The Court: Motion denied. [2958]

MOTION FOR AN ORDER THAT DEFENSE EXHIBITS FOR IDENTIFICATION BE INCLUDED IN RECORD OR APPEAL

The defendant, through his undersigned counsel, respectfully moves the Court for its order that the defense exhibits for identification introduced at the trial of the above-entitled action, be included in the record on appeal herein and that the Clerk of the above-entitled Court forward the same to the Clerk of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit as part of said record.

This motion will be made under Rule 47 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure upon the grounds that it is necessary that said exhibits be included in said record and forwarded to the Clerk of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, because one of the assignments of error on said appeal is the trial Court's denial of the offers of said exhibits in evidence and the sustaining of the plaintiff's objections to their admission in evidence, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit can not pass upon such assignment of error and decide whether or not said exhibits or any of them should have been received in evidence, unless said exhibits are before said Court.

Dated this 28th day of March, 1952.

In Replying Refer to Elmer F. Remmer
110 Eddy St.

March 20, 1945.

My dear Mr. Remmer:

Attached you will find two (2) Forms 1040 made out in the name of Mrs. Remmer and yourself. You will sign those forms and return them to this office immediately, otherwise you will be penalized, as they have to come in here the 15th of March. There is also, two (2) copies, one for each of you enclosed.

You will note that you owe $1070 each. I took it off of your estimate for last summer, which has made you a $20,000 basis. If there is any change to be made, we will make it on your first visit to Reno, as you may want to raise the amount. Bring all of the data from the different places, so that we may file a proper amended return.

At this time you are supposed to make a declaration of expected income for year 1945. This should be filed now or March 15.

With very kind regards, I am

Yours sincerely,

/s/ PAT MOONEY,
Chief Field Deputy.

Schedule 1:

During the month of June, 1944, Louis H. Mooser, Jr., Deputy Collector from the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at San Francisco, California, called at the office of the above stated corporation and examined its books and records for the fiscal period ending June 30, 1943, and required said corporation to file forms 1120, 1121 and 707 for said period.

These returns were filed under Section 2606 of the I.R. Code, which gives a deputy collector the authority to file such returns where either no records are kept or where records were not adequately kept.

In the case of the One Eighty Six Club, the records reported only the net daily take and were therefore not adequately kept and this was the status of the accounts of said corporation, up to and including June, 1944, the date on which Deputy Collector Mooser made his audit.

Mr. Mooser determined from an examination that he made of daily tally sheets, that the daily average net take was $70.00. Mr. Mooser believes that this determination would cover the entire period up to June, 1944.

The returns filed by the corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, were prepared on this basis and have been approved by the Collector.

In 1944 the taxpayer filed an application with the Deputy Commissioner, Salary Stabilization Unit, for the following annual salaries for its officers:

Bert Busterno, President	$ 6,000.00
Attilio Casselini, Vice President	4,000.00
W. E. Kyne, Secretary	5,000.00
Sylvan Lando, Treasurer	4,000.00
	$19,000.00

The Salary Stabilization Unit has approved said application.

The books of account for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944, disclose a total net take of $13,265.15.

In preparing the corporate returns (1120 and 1121) for said fiscal year, the corporation is reporting its total net take for the year on the same basis as that which was used by Deputy Collector Mooser: $70.00 per day—366 x $70.—$25,620.(A)

However, when the returns for the prior period were prepared by the Deputy, no provision was made for compensation of administrative officers; this, however, has now been approved at $19,000.00 per year by the Salary Stabilization Unit. Therefore, the net taxable corporate income for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944, is calculated as follows:

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

(A) Net take on basis of Deputy Collector Mooser's findings (before administrative salaries) $25,620.00
(B) Administrative salaries allowed by S.S.Unit..... 19,000.00

Schedule 1:

During the month of June, 1944, Louis H. Mooser, Jr., Deputy Collector from the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at San Francisco, California, called at the office of the above stated corporation and examined its books and records for the fiscal period ending June 30, 1943, and required said corporation to file Forms 1120, 1121 and 707 for said period.

These returns were filed under Section 2606 of the I. R. Code, which gives a deputy collector the authority to file such returns where either no records are kept or where records were not adequately kept.

In the case of the One Eighty Six Club, the records reported only the net daily take and were therefore not adequately kept and this was the status of the accounts of said corporation up to and including June, 1944, the date on which Deputy Collector Mooser made his audit. At the date of this filing—November 14, 1945—the books of account of this corporation are kept on the same basis.

Mr. Mooser determined from an examination that he made of daily tally sheets that the daily average net take was $70.00. The Returns filed by the Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, were prepared on this basis and have been approved by the Collector.

In 1944, the taxpayer filed an application with the Deputy Commissioner, Salary Stabilization Unit, for annual salaries for its officers which has been approved as follows:

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

Bert Busterno, President	$4,500.00
Attilio Casselini, Vice President	(A) 3,000.00
W. E. Kyne, Secretary	(B) 3,600.00
Sylvan Lando, Treasurer	3,000.00

(A) Resigned April 15, 1945—no salary paid during the fiscal year 7/1/44-6/30/45.

(B) Served 7½ mos., succeeded by Elmer F. Remmer, who served during the remaining 4½ mos. at the same rate; said W. E. Kyne earning $2,250.00 and Elmer F. Remmer $1,350.00.

The books of account for the year 1944, disclose a total net take of $20,533.15.

In preparing the corporate returns (1120 and 1121) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, the corporation is reporting its total net take for the year on the same basis as that which was used by Deputy Collector Mooser, $70.00 per day—$70.00 x 365 = $25,550.00 (C).

However, when returns for the prior period were prepared by the Deputy, no provision was made for compensation of administrative officers; this, however, has been approved at $14,100.00 per year by the Salary Stabilization Unit. As stated hereinbefore total salaries actually paid during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, were $11,100.00 (D). Therefore, the net taxable corporate income for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, is calculated as follows:

(C) Net take on basis of Deputy Collector Mooser's findings (before administrative salaries paid)	$25,550.00
(D) Administrative salaries allowed by Salary Stabilization Unit, actually paid by corporation	11,100.00
Net Taxable Income	$14,450.00

Final Return, Fiscal Year Ended June 30, 1945

A. B. Slater, 964-A Market Street, San Francisco, California, appearing before me this 20th day of November, 1946, and being duly sworn, deposes and says that the delinquency in filing Corporate Income Tax return on Form 1120, which should have been filed on or before November 15, 1946, was not due to any intent on his part to evade taxation, but was due entirely to the following causes:—

As noted above, this return was for One Eighty Six Club, 186 Eddy St., San Francisco, on which an extension to November 15, 1945, had been granted and a Tentative Return duly prepared and filed previously as provided for in said extension.

This Final Return was completed and a Cashier's Check—No. 6603433—purchased from Bank of America (11-177) in the amount of $875.38, attached thereto. This was mailed at Rincon Annex Post Office in Mission Street, San Francisco, on the afternoon of November 15, 1945.

Our first intimation that above return had never gone through the Collector's records came through a telephone call from Mrs. Hart, a Cashier in said office, inquiring as to Why a Final Return had never been filed in this matter. Affiant had turned over all records in this account over to an out of town Auditor and got back the carbon copy of Return 1120 as filed only yesterday, and complete copies are attached hereto. Under the circumstances it would appear that no penalties should be assessed.

/s/ A. B. SLATER.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of November, 1946.

Schedule 1:

During the month of June, 1944, Louis H. Mooser, Jr., Deputy Collector from the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at San Francisco, California, called at the office of the above stated corporation and examined its books and records for the fiscal period ending June 30, 1943, and required said corporation to file Forms 1120, 1121 and 707 for said period.

These returns were filed under Section 2606 of the I. R. Code, which gives a deputy collector the authority to file such returns where either no records are kept or where records were not adequately kept.

In the case of the One Eighty Six Club, the records reported only the net daily take and were therefore not adequately kept and this was the status of the accounts of said corporation up to and including June, 1944, the date on which Deputy Collector Mooser made his audit. At the date of this filing—November 14, 1945—the books of account of this corporation are kept on the same basis.

Mr. Mooser determined from an examination that he made of daily tally sheets that the daily average net take was $70.00. The returns filed by the Corporation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1943, were prepared on this basis and have been approved by the Collector.

BLEED THROUGH— POOR COPY

In 1944, the taxpayer filed an application with the Deputy Commissioner, Salary Stabilization Unit, for annual salaries for its officers which has been approved as follows:

Bert Busterno, President	$4,500.00
Attilio Casselini, Vice President	(A) 3,000.00
W. E. Kyne, Secretary	(B) 3,600.00
Sylvan Lando, Treasurer	3,000.00

(A) Resigned April 15, 1945—no salary paid during the fiscal year 7/1/44-6/30/45.

(B) Served 7½ mos., succeeded by Elmer F. Remmer, who served during the remaining 4½ mos. at the same rate; said W. E. Kyne earning $2,250.00 and Elmer F. Remmer $1,350.00.

The books of account for the year 1944, disclose a total net take of $20,533.15.

In preparing the corporate returns (1120 and 1121) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, the corporation is reporting its total net take for the year on the same basis as that which was used by Deputy Collector Mooser, $70.00 per day—$70.00 x 365 = $25,550.00(C).

However, when returns for the prior period were prepared by the Deputy, no provision was made for compensation of administrative officers; this, however, has been approved at $14,100.00 per year by the Salary Stabilization Unit. As stated hereinbefore total salaries actually paid during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, were $11,100.00(D). Therefore, the net taxable corporate income for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1945, is calculated as follows:

(C) Net take on basis of Deputy Collector Mooser's findings, (before administrative salaries paid)	$25,550.00
(D) Administrative salaries allowed by Salary Stabilization Unit, actually paid by corporation	11,100.00
Net Taxable Income	$14,450.00

The Collector of Internal Revenue,
San Francisco, California.

Dear Sir:

In submitting the accompanying Partnership Return, taxpayer desires to state that the daily records of the Cash Receipts and Promotion Expenses of the Menlo Club were inadvertently destroyed in mistake for other papers, and were consequently unavailable for computation. Disbursements for rent, salaries and wages, cards, and all other expenses for which receipts were taken separately and recorded are available, and have been properly reported.

In order to submit what is believed to be more than a fair return to the Government, the cash receipts and promotion expenses for a like period in the preceding year of 1944 have been used as a basis of income after deducting an amount of $6,000.00 per month from the promotion expense, thus increasing the income.

Regretting the necessity for this method of filing, we are,

Very Truly Yours,

Whereas, said 10% interest of Second Party in and to said social room and restaurant businesses shall not come into being until there shall have been paid to said First Party out of the profits of said businesses the sum of $175,000, the original purchase price of said businesses;

Now, Therefore, in consideration of the mutual promises and agreements made by each of the parties hereto with the other, the parties hereto do hereby covenant and agree as follows:

Effective as of May 1, 1945, First Party hereby does assign, transfer, set over and convey to Harold H. Maundrell, Second Party herein, a 10% working interest in and to the profits derived from the operation of the aforesaid social room and restaurant businesses situated as aforesaid;

It is understood and agreed between the parties hereto that said working interest does not represent an actual interest in and to the assets of said business or in or to the leasehold in said premises; that is to say, all moneys credited to the account of Second Party pursuant to said working interest shall be applied on account of Second Party's payment for an actual interest in and to said social club business and restaurant business;

It is further understood and agreed between the parties hereto that an actual interest in and to said businesses and their assets shall not be acquired by Second Party until First Party has been fully reimbursed in the sum of $175,000;

First Party does hereby sell, assign, set over, transfer and convey to Second Party a 10% interest in and to said social club business and restaurant business and their assets upon the receipt by First Party of the sum of $175,000 representing the purchase price expended by First Party as more particularly hereinabove appears;

Second Party shall continue to devote such time and attention as might be required of him by First Party in assisting in the management and operation of said businesses;

In the event of the death of the Second Party herein during the existence of this agreement the interest of said Second Party and his estate shall cease and terminate and the interest of said decedent, together with the interest of his estate, shall revert to and become the property of First Party herein; provided, however, there shall be paid by said First Party or his successors in interest to the legal representative of the estate of Second Party the balance remaining on the account book maintained by First Party in which is set forth the amount of profits accruing to Second Party, if Second Party at the time of his death shall have acquired said working interest;

In the event Second Party shall have acquired at the time of his death an actual interest in said businesses and their assets, then and in that event First Party shall pay forthwith to the legal representative of the estate of Second Party the sum of $17,500.00 in full payment, satisfaction and discharge of any and all interest acquired by Second Party and/or his estate in said businesses;

Statement of William E. Kyne
Finance Section No. 4
Separation Center
Ft. Bragg, N.C. made
November 15, 1945, at the Finance Section No. 4, Separation Center, Ft. Bragg, N.C.

I, William E. Kyne, being first duly sworn according to law, depose and say:

I am at present a soldier in the U.S. Army and have been for the past nine months. I am married and have one child, who resides with me at 654 Hay St., Fayetteville, N.C. I formerly worked and lived in San Francisco, California.

Prior to my entry into the army, and at the present time the bar known as One-Ten Eddy located in San Francisco, California, is owned by myself, and Elmer Remmer in partnership. We do not own the building, but lease it. The equipment and fixtures are owned by Remmer and me and if they were to be sold the money derived therefrom would go to Remmer and me. Frank Cavani, and Chub Turner do not own any interest in the business, except a working interest, that is, they work for us for a salary and a cut of the profits. Cavani and Turner are in full charge of the business in so far as the purchasing of supplies and the payment of all bills in connection therewith. They both sign the checks for the money spent in the operation of the bar. Cavani and Turner are the actual operators of the bar and are both held accountable to Remmer and me, as the owners of the business. The license for the bar is issued in my name. However, neither Remmer or I do any of the actual work in the operation of the bar, but leave its operation up to Turner and Cavani.

I have carefully read the foregoing statement consisting of one page, have been given an opportunity to make corrections, and have signed it as evidence thereof, and the statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

/s/ WILLIAM E. KYNE.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 15th day of November, 1945.

E. Remmer—Account No. 10

Personal Account With Cal-Neva Lodge, Inc.

Explanations of Corrections Made to Book Balances

(a) Under date of Dec. (or Feb.) 29, 1943, this account is credited with ..... $ 2,500.00

The cash receipts book (CR 27) shows this amount as received in February, 1944. This is in accord with a deposit on 2-23-44 to Cal-Neva's bank account of $2,527.08 which as shown by recordak film and record of cashier's checks purchased was the total of a deposit which included cashier's check #6646918 dated 2-18-44 payable to Cal-Neva Lodge, for $2,500.00 and purchased by Wm. E. Kyne at Bank of America, Day & Night Office (11-177).

(b) Under date of 4-30-43 this account is credited with the amount of ..... $ 2,000.00
The cash receipts book (CR 27) shows this amount as received in March, 1944, and there is a deposit of $2,000.00 currency in the bank account on 3-30-44. No deposits were made in April, 1943.

(c) The correcting entry made 4-30-45 (J 35) states that the amount of ..... $ 24.98
Was charged to Remmer in error. The original charge was made 7-31-44.

(d) Under date of 4-30-45 this account is credited with the amount of ..... $ 7,500.00
With the explanation: "Cash advanced by Remmer." The first deposit to Cal-Neva's bank account in 1945 was made on July 6, 1945. Therefore the cash advance referred to here must have been made in 1944.

(e) Under date of 4-30-45 loans to Albert Vellaudy in the amount of ..... $ 8,000.00
Were charged to Mr. Remmer as personal loans. This indicates that these were personal loans when made in 1941 and 1943, and should be so reflected in the balances of this account prior to 1945.

(f) Under date of 4-30-46 this account is debited in the amount of $51,086.34
With the explanation that this amount represents cash advances to Mr. Remmer during the 1945 season. Therefore, this amount should be reflected in the balance of this account at December 31, 1945.

(g) Under date of 4-30-46 this account is credited in the amount of ..... $ 2,215.69
With the explanation: "To credit E. Remmer's account for bad checks which were included in the cash received by him. Since this entry appears immediately after the one above (f) undoubtedly reference is made to the same cash received during the 1945 season. Therefore, the balance of this account at 12-31-45 should be corrected for this amount.

(h) Under date of 4-30-46 there is a debit to this account in the amount of ..... $ 7,000.00
With the explanation that it is to correct for an erroneous charge to the Bank Club in 1945 (check #7163 dated 11-8-45). Since the error was made in 1945 the correction should be reflected in the 12-31-45 balance of this account.

BLEED THROUGH- POOR COPY

(i) Under date of 4-30-47 this account is credited in the amount of $20,000.00
With the explanation, "Cash advanced by Remmer." At the date of this entry Cal-Neva Lodge was closed for the season. The book account showed the following deposits from 1-1-47 to 4-30-47:

January 20	$ 1.00
February 21	2,000.00 currency
March 28	5,000.00 Telegraphic trfr.

The telegraphic transfer is credited to Mr. Remmer's account under date of March 31, 1947. Therefore the $20,000.00 advanced must have been advanced in 1946 and should be reflected in the 12-31-46 balance of this account.

(j) Under date of 4-30-47 this account is debited in the amount of $97,300.00
With the explanation, "To correct items credited to Remmer in error." Since the original erroneous credits were made in 1946 this correction should be reflected in the balance of this account at 12-31-46.

(k) Under date of 4-30-47 this account is credited in the amount of $34,705.83
With the explanation: "Additional cash contributed by Remmer to make up deficit as per Mr. J. B. Jeffress' instruction." As the explanation under (i) above shows this sum could not have been received in 1947. Therefore, it must have been received in 1946 and should be reflected in the balance of this account at 12-31-46.

Dear Mr. Simmons:

I was unable to contact Mr. Lewis, 333 Montgomery St., San Francisco, regarding the partnership returns of Elmer F. Remmer for the 21 Club in El Cerrito.

You may have the returns in your possession at this time and no doubt you can give me the distributive share of Mr. Remmer's net income. It is necessary for me to have these figures in order to complete Mr. Remmer's return.

Thanking you for your courtesy in this matter,

Very truly yours,

DEFENDANT'S EXHIBIT G-1

April 8, 1948.

We have examined Mr. Remmer's income tax returns for the years 1943 through 1946 and we have talked with Mr. Remmer at some length and also with his accountant, Mr. Maundrell.

After such examination and discussion we are of the opinion that Mr. Remmer has made an honest return of all taxable income for the years 1942 through 1947. We have been informed by the agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue that there were no specific charges against Mr. Remmer as to any acts of income tax avoidance or evasion and the agents refuse to state in what particulars, if any, that Mr. Remmer had failed to make a return of taxable income.

Under these circumstances, we do not feel that Mr. Remmer should make any statement to agents of the Bureau or submit to questioning by such agents as to any matters pertaining to his returns for the years 1942 through 1947. At such time as the Bureau, or its agents, in the course of their investigation are ready to state that Mr. Remmer has not returned certain income as taxable, then Mr. Remmer will make a full statement to meet any such charge or charges.

Re: Elmer F. Remmer

Dear Willie:

With Herb Caen's permission we are enclosing Income Tax Extension blanks for Mr. Remmer and Helen L. Remmer for both their signatures.

While we are discussing taxes find out the exact cost to Bones of the Menlo Club. As he may take part of his cost over the period of his lease. In other words, to recover his Capital Investment. Then we will file an amended return for the eight months he owned the club in 1945. We may be able to save him quite a little money over the taxable years. On the other hand, he may have deducted this. Item on the partnership return filed for year 1945. You may make the statement that your books are not fully made up for the year 1946 as a reason for the extension.

With kindest regards to Bones and yourself.

Sincerely,

PAT MOONEY.

*The assets acquired at May 1, 1945, consist of an on sale liquor permit as well as bar, restaurant, and club room equipment. In view of the fact that the equipment acquired was used, an estimated remaining life of five years has been used for depreciation purposes. This estimated life is based on the fact that restaurant operators acquiring new equipment commonly use an estimated life of eight years; therefore, an estimated life of five years for used equipment is reasonable.

The depreciation for each year is, however, overstated due to the fact that the liquor permit is not an asset subject to depreciation. No evidence has been submitted as to the value of the permit at date of acquisition.

Summary of Amounts Owed to Cal-Neva, Inc., by Elmer Remmer as of December 31, 1943, 1944, 1945, and 1946

Date	Amount Owed	Net Amount Borrowed or (Paid Back) During Year

December 31, 1946	60,742.39	(22,989.94)
Net amount borrowed during 1944, 1945, and 1946		$37,589.62

Notes

[1] On April 30, 1945, E. Remmer Account No. 10 was debited with the following loans made to Albert Villaudy:

December, 1941	$2,500.00
April, 1943	3,500.00
July, 1943	2,000.00
	$8,000.00

This adjustment was made on the basis that the amounts were loaned to Mr. Villaudy by E. Remmer rather than the corporation. Therefore, the amount due Cal-Neva, Inc., by E. Remmer at December 31, 1943, has been increased by the amount of these loans.

[2] To correct amounts charged improperly to E. Remmer on July 14, 1944, consisting of:

$23.98
1.00
$24.98

[3] To reflect cash advanced during 1944 season as having been made in that calendar year rather than as of April 30, 1945, the end of the corporate fiscal year, the date the amount was credited in the corporate records.

[4] To reflect the receipt of $2,500.00 by E. Remmer from Mayris Chaney in payment of loan made to her during 1944 season which she repaid during 1945 season and which was reflected in corporate records as of the close of the corporate fiscal year, April 30, 1946.

Dear Pat,

I am enclosing the applications for extension of both Helen and Bones Remmer. I note in your letter that you have asked us what the cost of the Menlo Club was. The total payment is $175,000.00 of which $100,000.00 has been paid down. Up until this time no credit of any kind to cover the capital investment has been entered on the books. The Menlo Club, as you may know, is a partnership consisting of Bones, Wm. Kyne, Oscar Nelson, Thos. Turner and myself. If there is any further information I can give you kindly call upon me.

At the present time I have Bones' income taxes for the following places already filed, namely: Menlo Club, 110 Eddy St., Day-Nite Cigar Stand, and the Transient Cigar Store. Any time you are ready for the figures I will be glad to forward them to you. With my kindest personal regards, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sir:

In submitting the accompanying Partnership Return, taxpayer desires to state that the daily records of the Cash Receipts and Promotion Expenses of the Menlo Club were inadvertently destroyed in mistake for other papers, and were consequently unavailable for computation. Disbursements for rent, salaries and wages, cards and all other expenses for which receipts were taken and recorded separately are available, and have been properly reported.

In order to submit what is believed to be more than a fair return to the Government, the cash receipts and promotion expenses for a like period in the preceding year have been used as a basis of income after deducting an amount of $6,000.00 per month from the promotion expense; and since that period was the most profitable in the Club's history, and the income under the new owners has noticeably decreased; which is amply demonstrated by the reduction of players attending the morning shift.

Regretting the necessity for this method of filing, we are,

Very truly yours,

Depreciation 21

The Menlo Club was purchased by E. F. Remmer and associates on May 1st, 1945, for the sum of $175,000.00, which after deducting merchandise and certain fixtures on hand of $31,985.50 leaves a capital investment of $143,801.50. The term of the lease is five years and the investment spread over this period, makes a capital recovery as follows: eight months of 1945 the sum of $19,173.52 and for each year thereafter, the sum of $28,760.15 until 1950, when the remaining payment will be $9,586.76.

The Menlo Club is used primarily for the playing of cards and is known as a Card Club, the principal game being draw poker.

At the present time in San Francisco a new law is being drafted and if passed in its present form it would put the Menlo Club out of business, also, at this time a new proposed State Law has been presented to the State Legislature, which would outlaw all playing of cards for money, tokens, checks, etc., and this would do likewise to the club.

The Menlo Club is under the supervision of the Chief of Police of San Francisco and any disturbance on the part of any of the players in the club, which might bring any undue notoriety or disrepute, might mean the revocation of the Club's license, as a public nuisance. At the same time several law suits are pending against the Club, and a decision against the Club might result in its closing. There are a great many factors entering into the operation of a club of this nature and while, at the present time, draw poker is within the rights of all Club Members, there is a general antipathy on the part of the public to condemn and call all card rooms, "Gambling Houses," which makes their operation precarious business and one which is more or less intangible as to its existence. There are a great many elements working against Card Rooms and they may be closed or Legislated out at a moment's notice.

We firmly believe this property which was acquired through Capital outlay for the production of income is subject to depreciation:

(1) Because the production of income is limited in duration, because of a great many factors,

(2) That it is a sort of intangible property and the business may be legislated or closed out of existence at any time,

(3) That the estimated useful life of the property is five years.

To Whom It May Concern:

On April 30, 1945, the undersigned, Gene Schriber, received the sum of $25,000.00 cash, lawful money of the United States of America, from Joseph C. Haughey, who was at that time acting as attorney for Elmer Remmer, for and on account of moneys due the undersigned in connection with the purchase of "Tiny's Bar," situated at 18 Turk Street, "Tiny's Restaurant" situated 30 Turk Street, and the "Menlo Club" situated at 32 Turk Street, all in San Francisco, California.

Although the name of Joseph Billington was used in this transaction, Elmer Remmer was in truth and in fact the person who was purchasing said businesses.

Thereafter, in or about the month of August, 1945, Elmer Remmer approached me and stated that he had some partners associated with him in the operation of the foregoing described businesses and that he wanted his records to reflect the payment of the $25,000.00 theretofore paid to me in cash.

A few days later, on August 8, 1945, Elmer Remmer presented me with a check in the sum of $25,000.00 payable to my order, and I thereupon endorsed my name thereto and cashed the same and gave the $25,000.00 to Elmer Remmer. This check was not an additional payment on the purchase price of the Menlo Club but was merely an accommodation transaction for Remmer's record. A memorandum made by me at the time shows that this check was made, executed and endorsed on August 8, 1945.

Thereafter, and on September 8, 1945, Elmer Remmer paid to me the sum of $25,000.00 by check.

Subsequent to September 8, 1945, the liquor license of "Tiny's Bar" situated at 18 Turk Street was suspended by the State Board of Equalization because of the failure of the undersigned to effect a transfer of such license. Accordingly, "Tiny's Bar" was closed and the third payment which was due during the year 1945 was not made by Elmer Remmer because of the failure of the undersigned to deliver a Liquor License to said premises occupied by "Tiny's Bar" as per agreement.

This payment of $25,000.00 was thereafter made on February 28, 1946.

On May 1, 1946, I received a payment of $25,000.00 and thereafter on May 1, 1947, I received another payment of $25,000.00 from Elmer Remmer.

Between April 30, 1945, and May 1, 1947, I received a total of $125,000.00 from Elmer Remmer on account of the purchase of the said businesses and the leasehold interests upon said premises hereinabove described. Also, on July 1, 1949, I received from Elmer Remmer on account another $25,000.00 making a total received from April, 1945, to July, 1949, of $150,000.00.

The Undersigned, Elmer Remmer, has read the foregoing statement, and does hereby certify that the foregoing statement made by Gene Schriber is true and correct in all respects.

ment please state the nature of this case for the guidance of the venire in the box and all others in the court room. Please give attention to this statement.

Mr. Pike: This is a criminal case, in which the United States of America is plaintiff and Elmer F. Remmer is the defendant. The formal charge, or indictment, is in six counts, each of which counts charges that for the particular calendar year involved referred to in that count the defendant violated a certain federal statute, which is referred to as Section 145(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, and the same section, Title 26, United States Code Annotated, which statute makes it an offense for any person to wilfully attempt, in any manner, to evade or defeat any tax.

As applied to this particular case, the charged violation against the defendant is that the particular calendar years 1944, 1945, and 1946 he wilfully and knowingly attempted to defeat and evade a large part of the income tax due and owing by him to the United States, by filing and causing to be filed, with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Internal Revenue Collection District of Nevada, at Reno, Nevada, a false and fraudulent income tax return, wherein he stated that his [3] net income for the particular calendar year was in a certain specified amount and the amount of tax due and owing on that amount was a certain amount, whereas, according to this charge, as the defendant well knew, his net income for the calendar year, computed on a community property basis, was a larger amount than had been reported in the false income tax return and the amount of the tax due was larger than the amount that he had paid.

The first count of the indictment refers to the calendar year 1944 and alleges, in substance, what I have already stated, that the defendant Remmer filed a false and fraudulent tax return, stating that his income for that year that was taxable was the sum of $9,500 and the amount of tax due and owing on that amount was $2,570, when it is charged that he knew that his income was $33,734.61 and that the net income tax owed to the United States was $16,-295.54.

Mr. Golden: May I correct counsel. He stated $33,734.61 and that was $33,734.60, and also the amount he stated as alleged in tax owing was $16,-295.54. That is $16,259.54.

Mr. Pike: The copy I had was wrong as to one cent and as to the second item, I incorrectly read by transposing the figures, and the correct figure is $16,259.54. That is the amount due.

Mr. Golden: While I am on my feet, your Honor, may I at this time take exception and offer objection to the remark which [4] counsel made a few moments ago, in which he states that it is a false return. I object to stating it is a false return —it is alleged false return.

The Court: You may have an exception.

Mr. Pike: I am referring to the form of indictment. May I have the official copy, so there will be no further mistakes.

The second count on this formal charge, indictment, also refers to the calendar year 1944 and besides the substance already referred to, it charges that the defendant Remmer, who was then, during the calendar year 1944, married to Helen L. Remmer, did wilfully and knowingly attempt to defeat and evade income tax for the calendar year 1944, by filing and causing to be filed, with the collector of Internal Revenue for the District of Nevada, a false and fraudulent income tax return for and on behalf of the said Helen L. Remmer, in which it was stated that her net income for the said calendar year, computed on the community property basis, was the sum of $9,500 and that the amount of tax due and owing thereon was the sum of $2,570, whereas he then and there well knew her net income for the said calendar year, computed on the community property basis, was the sum of $33,734.60, upon which net income there was owing to the United States an income tax of $16,259.54.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Now with reference to that second count, it is to be noted that the defendant is charged with filing, or causing to [5] be filed, a false and fraudulent income tax return for and on behalf of Helen L. Remmer, his wife, during the calendar year 1944, and has already been pointed out, Elmer F. Remmer is the only defendant in this case.

The third count refers to the income tax return filed by the defendant for the calendar year 1945 and charges that a false income tax return was filed, wherein the defendant stated that his net income for that year was $28,888.68, and that the amount of tax due and owing thereon was the sum of $13,072.02, when he knew that his net income for that calendar year, computed on the community property basis, was the sum of $37,157.10, upon which net income he owed to the United States an income tax of $18,586.83.

The fourth count of the indictment likewise refers to the calendar year 1945 and it charges that the defendant, then being married to Helen L. Remmer, during that calendar year, wilfully and knowingly attempting to defeat and evade a large part of the income tax due and owing by the said Helen L. Remmer to the United States for that calendar year, filed, and caused to be filed, with the Collector of Internal Revenue for this district a false and fraudulent income tax return for and on behalf of Helen L. Remmer, in which it was stated that her net income for that calendar year, computed on a community property basis—I might say all counts have that language—was the sum of $30,429.68 and the amount of tax due and owing was the sum of $14,074.29, [6] whereas the defendant knew that her net income so computed was the sum of $38,708.09, upon which said net income there was owing to the United States an income tax of $19,649.82.

The fifth count of the indictment relates to the calendar year 1946 and it charges that the defendant Remmer, so seeking and attempting to defeat and evade a large part of the income tax due and owing by him for that year, filed and caused to be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue of this district a false income tax return, wherein he stated that his net income, so computed already referred to, was the sum of $11,244.79, and that the amount of tax due and owing thereon was the sum of $2,776.87 and that the defendant well knew that his net income for the calendar year referred to, that is 1946, was the sum of $94,235.84, upon which said net income he owed to the United States an income tax of $61,341.68.

The sixth and last count of this indictment, or formal charge against the defendant, relates also to the calendar year 1946 and it states and charges in substance that during the calendar year 1946 the defendant, Elmer F. Remmer, then being married to Helen L. Remmer, did wilfully and knowingly attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the income tax due and owing by the said Helen L. Remmer to the United States of America for the calendar year 1946, by filing and causing to be filed, with the Collector of Internal Revenue for this district, a false and fraudulent income tax return for and on behalf of the [7] said Helen L. Remmer, in which it was stated that her net income for that calendar year, computed on the community property basis, was the sum of $11,244.79 and that the amount of tax was the sum of $2,776.87, whereas, as the defendant then and there well knew, her net income for said calendar year, that is, 1946, computed on the community property basis, was the sum of $94,235.84, upon which said net income there was owing to the United States of America an income tax of $61,341.68.

Now the reference I have made to the indictment is, of course, in no way evidence in the case and the indictment itself is the mere formal charge made by the government against the defendant in the case.

The Court: The Court now desires to inform the government and the defendant that if either the government or the defendant desires to challenge a juror, the challenge must be made when the juror appears and before he or she is sworn to try the case. The defendant has ten peremptory challenges, the government six peremptory challenges and I am going to try to arrange the matter this way, that as we approach selecting the jury, we will arrange and alternate the challenges so that toward the end there will be as near as possible an equal number remaining on each side of the peremptory challenges. Now I wish all members of the venire would give close attention, because what is being said here now will apply perhaps to you.

Mr. Gillen: May I interrupt, your Honor. According to [8] my notes, as I took them down, Mrs. Sanford should be in seat 11. She is in seat 12. (Mrs. Sanford takes seat No. 11) I thought it might cause some confusion later on.

The Court: Now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, you have just heard a statement of the nature of this case. Have any of you heard anything other than the statement of this case. In other words, do you know anything about this case? Have you heard any one discuss this case? I want to be sure you understand this question. Have any of you heard about this case before you came into court today?

Juror Humphrey: I have read it in the paper.

The Court: Did what you read amount to any more than what you have heard in this statement?

A. No, just about the same.

Q. Anything you read, did it leave with you an impression as to whether or not the charge was true, or any opinion as to whether the charge was true?

A. I am afraid I did form an opinion.

Q. You formed an opinion in the case from just what you read in the papers?

A. Yes.

Q. That is all you know about the case?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you discussed the case with any one who knew anything of the facts? [9]

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any idea what the evidence in this case will be? A. No, I do not.

Q. All you know is that the defendant is charged with this offense? A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Any one else here who has read about the case? I suppose several of you have, but the mere reading about this case, has that left with you an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant?

Juror Hillygus: I have heard gamblers at my bar.

Q. Did they claim to know anything about the evidence?

A. They thought they did. I don't know whether they did or not.

Q. And the conversation that you had with gamblers has left an impression on you, or an opinion one way or another? A. Yes, sir.

Q. It would be difficult then for you to sit in this case and listen to this evidence and free your mind from the opinion or impression you gained in your conversations with other people?

A. I don't know.

Q. From what you have heard, if you were asked to give a decision, could you give a decision one way or another at this time?

A. Well, from what I have heard, I think I could.

The Court: Any objection to excusing this juror? [10]

Mr. Thompson: We have no objection, your Honor.

The Court: Any challenge for cause?

Mr. Lohse: Your Honor, the defense has no objection to excusing of either Mr. Hillygus or Mr. Humphrey.

The Court: Mr. Hillygus, you will be excused until January third. Call another name.

(Frank Golden called and sworn.)

The Court: You heard the statement made by Mr. Pike? A. I have.

Q. Have you heard any conversations concerning this case or have you any knowledge of this case other than from what you found from Mr. Pike's statements? A. What I read in the papers.

Q. From what you have read, have you an opinion one way or another as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant? A. None whatsoever.

Q. Your mind is open? A. Yes, sir.

The Court: Is there any one here now who has any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant? Mr. Humphrey, did I understand you to say that you have an opinion from what you read?

Juror Humphrey: I believe I have.

Q. Do you believe that impression you obtained from reading newspaper accounts would remain with you throughout the trial? [11]

A. I would try to think it out but I don't know whether I would be able to or not.

The Court: Now I want to see if this would apply to you. Forget this case for the time being. Consider any case and there is an article appearing in the press that so and so had been indicted for such and such an offense. In your opinion he is guilty, is that the idea? In other words, just because a man is indicted and the newspapers publish some account of the charge, that causes you to form in your mind some feeling that you can not be a fair and impartial juror if you happened to be selected in that case—is that your situation?

A. No, I don't believe it is.

The Court: Then why would your feeling be such as you say it is in this case? What is the difference? You can understand how difficult it would be to obtain a fair juror in any case if the average citizen, upon reading an article in the paper that such and such a case was pending, came into court with a fixed opinion. We just couldn't obtain jurors, could we? Now what is there about this case that makes it different from any other matter that you might read about? A. Well——

The Court (Interceding): You don't know anything about the evidence in this case? A. No.

Q. You don't know what to expect from any of the witnesses who [12] testify here, do you?

A. No, sir. The only way I can explain it, maybe that the occupation being gambling may have influence.

Q. Well, if you were selected as a juror, you would follow the instructions of the Court?

A. Yes, sir, I would.

Q. And you know when a man is charged with an offense, he is being tried only for the offense set forth in the indictment or information, that's all?

A. That's all, yes, sir.

Q. And just because something might appear during the course of this trial concerning some activity of the defendant, if it did occur, that did not seem just right to you, that wouldn't cause you or influence you in arriving at a verdict in this case, would it? A. No.

Q. You would be instructed by the Court, as the jury would be, that they are to decide this case entirely upon the evidence brought into court and that the charge against the defendant is the only issue before the Court, and if you are a juror, you are going to be asked to determine one question—is this charge true? Now don't you believe that you could be a fair and impartial juror in this case if you were sworn as a juror? A. Yes, sir, I do.

The Court: Now we have here the attorneys for the [13] defendant and the attorneys for the government. We have Mr. John R. Golden and Mr. Leslie C. Gillen and Mr. Spurgeon Avakian. These gentlemen, I understand, are from San Francisco; and Mr. Lohse and Mr. Fry. I don't see Mr. Fry here today but Mr. Lohse and Mr. Fry are associated—these are the attorneys representing the defendant in this case. Have any of these gentlemen recently acted as attorneys at law for any of you? Have you consulted any of them recently on any business or professional or legal matters?

Now on the other side of the table we have Mr. Pike, United States attorney, and Mr. Shelton from San Francisco, Mr. Bruce Thompson, Assistant United States Attorney and in that office they have Mr. Kane and Mr. McDonald. Mr. McDonald is in court here, and we have in Las Vegas, as a member of the United States attorney's staff, Mr. William Compton. Now have any of these gentlemen recently acted as attorneys at law for any of you? Have any of you consulted any one of these gentlemen or any of them on any legal or professional matters?

Juror Smith: Some months ago I had occasion to consult with Mr. Fry, who is representing another party.

Q. Anything about that that would influence you one way or another? A. No, sir.

Juror Kofoed: In the field of insurance it is sometimes necessary to consult with an attorney and in the past year I have had occasion to consult with Mr. Lohse and Mr. Thompson, not directly in regard to fire of my own, but in regard to fire of my client.

The Court: Nothing about those conferences that would influence you one way or another?

A. No.

Mr. Lohse: At this time I thought your Honor was going to pursue the questioning of the prospective juror, J. W. Humphrey.

The Court: Just let me proceed here. Now I take it at the present time that we have no one in this jury box who has any idea or knowledge as to what the evidence in the case is going to be. We have no one in this jury box who has any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant. You have [15] heard some reference here to the indictment. The defendant has been indicted and you have heard Mr. Pike make some statements of the general nature of the indictment and of the charges contained in it. The indictment is merely the vehicle, the means, by which a person is brought into court for trial. It is a complaint. It is a charge, and by virtue of it, the defendant is here in court for trial. It is not evidence of his guilt and it must not be considereed as evidence in any degree of his guilt. You have heard people say—there are some people who thoughtlessly have such a view of these things —you meet a friend of yours and you hear him say, "I hear so and so has been arrested," or "So and so is on trial in court. Well, if he wasn't guilty, he wouldn't be there." Now that is such an unfair thing and any person who has such an idea just throws out the window all at once all the principles and purposes of our government. In other words, if we are the kind of people who think a man is guilty because he is charged with an offense, we are worse than the people we are having trouble with today and in this country, and in every free country, no one is deemed to be guilty of an offense by merely having been charged and no one can be considered and found guilty of an offense until his guilt is proven beyond a reasonable doubt.

Now there are two great principles that go hand in hand and are the bulwark of our liberty. They are in effect everything we have got. A defendant is presumed to be innocent [16] unless and until his guilt is proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Without those principles we wouldn't have any freedom whatever. So each of you must, and I am sure you will as American citizens, if you are selected as members of this jury, start out with the idea fixed in your mind that this defendant is innocent. That is the way you must approach this case and that idea must remain in your mind, unless and until the evidence in this case should convince you to the contrary beyond a reasonable doubt. Now that is the way we want this case tried and that is the way, I am sure, you, as good American citizens, would have it tried. So the defendant stands here in court indicted, that is true, but he is here as an innocent man and he must be considered and treated as innocent and he is innocent. This thing is a little more than a presumption, it is a substantial thing. The defendant is innocent, unless and until that event should occur, that he is proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Now what is a reasonable doubt? Our Nevada statute defines that term as concisely and as completely as any definition I have had had the opportunity to consider, in my own humble opinion. It is a rather difficult thing sometimes to understand, but the Nevada statute states: "A reasonable doubt is one based on reason. It is not mere possible doubt, but is such a doubt as would govern or control a person in the more weighty affairs of life. If the minds of the jurors, after the [17] entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, are in such a condition that they can say they feel an abiding conviction of the truth of the charge, there is not a reasonable doubt. Doubt to be reasonable, must be actual and substantial, not mere possibility or speculation. The mind can not contain these two conditions at once. You can not have in your mind a reasonable doubt and at the same time have an abiding conviction of the truth of the charge." So, if after hearing the evidence in this case and after considering it, you have in your mind an abiding conviction of the truth of the charge, your work has been completed and all you have to do is to vote for a verdict of guilty. Now keep in mind during the course of the trial those two things—that the defendant is presumed to be innocent, that he is innocent unless and until the evidence in the case, if it should—I don't know whether it will or not, I don't know anything about the evidence, any more than you know about it—keep in mind those two principles, the defendant stands here and is to be considered and treated at all times as innocent and is innocent, unless and until the evidence in the case should put into your mind an abiding conviction of the truth of the charge.

Now at the conclusion of the taking of the testimony, the Court will be called upon to instruct you as to the law of the case. You are going to be the judges of the facts of the case. The judge will be called upon to rule on whether or [18] not evidence is admissible when objections are made. He will be called upon to state to you the principles of law which he believes applicable to this case and to the evidence, after the evidence is in. Now we may have a situation like this—we may have, during the course of this trial—we have a lot of lawyers here—they may be popping up all over this room with objections. The Court may sustain some of them and overrule others, but don't let that influence you in any way. The attorneys for the defendant have a duty to perform here. The attorneys for the government likewise have a duty to perform and they perhaps will be zealous to see that nothing goes into the record or before the jury that shouldn't go in, from their point of view. That is, they may have ideas that certain offered evidence is not material, not legal evidence, and are going to object. Sometimes during the course of the trial the judge gets awfully tired of that and so does the jury, but don't be influenced by it. Remember they are doing their duty to their clients, whether it is the government or the defendant. We have to make allowances for that and not have any prejudice against either the government or the defendant on account of what may seem to us an annoying conduct, when it isn't intended to be at all.

Now the Court will have to take care of questions of law. The jury has to find the facts. There is going to be no interference by the judge with the jury in its province of deciding [19] the facts of the case, no expressions from the Court and if any should be made or any matter should be stated by the judge in the course of this trial, I want you to remember that there is no intent on the part of the Court to show his inclination one way or another or that he has any inclination towards either side. The judge is not going to have anything to do with these facts. Those are matters for you to decide. On the other hand, questions of law are for the judge. Now there might be some instruction given, or there might be a ruling that the Court has made here on an offer of testimony and you might say, "Well, the judge was wrong in not letting that in," or "He shouldn't have let it in," one or another. You must not conjecture what might have been the effect of a ruling. Just take the rulings as they are given and let the thing go at that, and in the instructions there might be some principle stated in there that you might feel is not law at all, or if it is law, you might say to yourself, "Well, I don't like that kind of law. I won't follow it." You must not do that. You must follow the law as given you by the Court. There is a very plain reason for that and you will see how important it is that you accept without question the instructions of the Court. Now if the Court, in instructing the jury, should make a mistake—and that, of course, is possible—and one of the parties here, either the defendant or the government, was injured by that mistake, that party could take an appeal to a higher court. [20] There the matter could be corrected and remedied. If there was an error, the court could send it back to this court for a new trial so no harm would result from the judge's mistake as to the matter of law. But suppose a member of the jury refused to follow instructions and went on the idea that is not the law and if he should happen to make a mistake—and that might be possible—somebody would be hurt and there would be no way of remedying the injury, because there could be no appeal from that situation, so you see how important it is to follow the instructions of the Court.

Now you have been informed that this case has something to do with income tax and we have all read in the papers recently a lot of things about income tax, but remember we are trying this case. We just have to keep our nose right into this case and have nothing to do with anything outside of it. Whether all this stuff you see about the Internal Revenue is true or isn't, has nothing to do with anything in this case. You must decide this case entirely upon its merits.

Jury duty is a great responsibility. It is perhaps the most important duty a citizen is called upon to perform off the firing line. To be called upon to judge important matters between fellow citizens' controversies is a great responsibility, a great responsibility to decide between the government and a citizen, where a person's liberty may be involved, but it has to be done. I am sure there is none of us enjoy doing it. I [21] don't believe there is any judge that enjoys it—I am sure there is no juror who does—but it is a duty that has to be done and there is only one way to do it, without fear, favor prejudice or sympathy, and when we do it that way, it isn't such a hard thing to do. It may not be pleasant to do, but it is not such a hard thing to do. All you have to do is to find out what the truth is. What is the truth? Is this charge true or isn't it true? If you believe, beyond a reasonable doubt, that it is true, find the defendant guilty. If you have not been convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the charge, or any one of the charges in this indictment, it is your duty to find him not guilty. So if you will keep out of your minds outside matters, this will not be a difficult task for you, but if you are going to be influenced by sympathy or prejudice, it is going to be a miserable, difficult job and it is going to be a job that is going to leave its mark with you. You are going to be sworn to try this case and render a true verdict according to the evidence. You are going to be sworn to take a solemn oath before your God that you will do what is right, and the only way you can do what is right in this case is to follow the evidence and follow the law as given to you by the Court, unaffected or uninfluenced by sympathy on the one hand or prejudice on the other. It is your duty, Mr. Humphrey, to keep out of your mind any thought you might have about any gambling or any of the rest of you. Keep those things [22] out of your mind. It has nothing to do with this case at all. I mention you, not to point you out but because you had some little thought there. Just decide this case on the facts. Is this defendant guilty or not guilty of the charge contained in this indictment?

Now it is necessary in our country and in every State that the law be administered as equally as possible. We are all human and we find some variance in the administration of law throughout the country, but we are all straining towards perfection and we never get there, of course, to see that there is an equal distribution of justice, so here we do not want a situation like this—we want a jury's verdict based upon the evidence alone and upon the law. Now if juries did not decide cases uninfluenced by outside matters, such as sympathy or prejudice, and if they went off on their own ideas, accepting what they thought was the law and it wasn't the law, you might find a situation like this—we in the northern end of the State have a defendant on trial or in Sacramento have another defendant on trial for the same thing, the same evidence. The jury down below finds him guilty and the jury here finds him not guilty, the same case and the same kind of evidence. What kind of a mess would that be and how unfair that would be. So in order to obtain as near as possible an equal and fair administration of justice, it is not hard to do, if you will decide the case entirely upon the evidence and keep out of your mind any suggestion [23] of sympathy or prejudice. Now we are all sorry for anyone who is accused of an offense. We are all sorry for him and many times those who are found guilty of offenses don't suffer nearly as much as their relatives or mothers or fathers or wives or parents. Those are matters that come up in every criminal trial, and this is a criminal trial, but we can't act on a thing of that kind. For instance, look at the situation we would have there. Some fellow who didn't have a friend in the world is up for a crime, convicted in five minutes and some fellow who has a mother, who suffers worse than he does, is turned loose. You can't consider those things. Stay away from any evidence of sympathy or prejudice. Now that might come into your mind, if the evidence disclosed some things—

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

I don't know whether it will or what it will—about gambling. We are here to find out if this charge is true and we must not be prejudiced against this defendant because of anything else that might appear in this case except this charge.

Q. You believe that the defendant is presumed to be innocent unless proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt? A. That's right.

Q. And you would consider the defendant innocent and would vote for a verdict of not guilty if the government did not convince you beyond a reasonable doubt that he was guilty?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if the government convinced you beyond a reasonable [32] doubt by the evidence, and the evidence only, that the defendant is guilty, you would so decide the case? A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your decision in this case would be unaffected by any outside influence of prejudice on the one hand or sympathy on the other?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would try the defendant only for the offenses charged in the indictment and for no other matters that might appear during the trial?

A. Yes, sir. I would like to state that I know Mr. Fry.

Q. I forgot to ask you those questions. Any of these attorneys acting as attorneys for you?

A. Well, Mr. Pike has from a business standpoint and I am personally acquainted with Mr. Fry.

Q. Are your relations with Mr. Fry and Mr. Pike about the same? Is Mr. Pike acting as your attorney? A. Not as my personal attorney.

A. Not at the present time.

The Court: Any further questions?

Mr. Golden: May we ask if he has ever served before as a juror?

The Court: I don't think so.

Mr. Golden: May we ask Mr. Parsons if he ever sat on a court martial of the United States army?

The Court: I won't ask that either. I can't see what difference that makes at all.

Mr. Golden: I wanted to ask your Honor just now whether it is necessary to note an exception to the refusal?

The Court: You can have an exception to all rulings of the court.

Mr. Golden: May we ask for whom Mr. Parsons conducts investigations?

The Court: I am not going into Mr. Parsons business affairs.

Mr. Golden: We want to know if he works for any of these people.

The Court: Are you working for Mr. Pike or the government?

Mr. Parsons: No, sir.

Mr. Pike: I would like to have the Court ask if I had anything to do with that investigation, or the United States attorney's office?

The Court: Did the United States attorney's office have anything to do with it?

A. Only if the court—it was turned over to the court.

Q. What department of the government was that made for?

A. At that time I was connected with the Nevada State Police and dealt with the traffic.

The Court: Any further questions?

Mr. Golden: I would like to ask Mr. Parsons whether his investigating work is solely for federal and State or also private investigating.

The Court: I will not go into his business or ask it.

Mr. Golden: I would like to ask whether his employment with the government, and particularly the case to which he referred about a year ago, would affect his deliberations in this case?

The Court: Did you have any investigating work in regard to the defendant here?

A. No, sir. [35]

Mr. Golden: I would like to ask the prospective juror, your Honor, whether his investigating work, and/or his contact, whatever it may have been we don't know, with Mr. Pike about a year ago would make it more likely that he would believe the government's side of this case or would have more confidence in the prosecution than in the defense.

The Court: I will ask you this question, Mr. Parsons. The fact you have engaged in work for the government, would it influence you one way or another in your decision in this case, if you were instructed by the Court that you should decide this case according to the evidence in this case and the evidence alone? Would the fact of your former employment get you off that track and cause you to go on something else in this case?

A. It would be definitely the evidence and instructions of the Court.

Mr. Golden: I would like to ask him whether or not he is hopeful or expectant in the future of further investigating work from the government.

The Court: I will not ask that question.

Mr. Golden: We note exceptions to all rulings.

In other words, as I have tried to explain—I won't take the time to do it again—it is necessary for an equal and fair administration of justice that courts and juries decide cases only upon the evidence before it, legally admitted before it. The Court: You have heard the statements made here this morning, have you not? Do you know anything about this case, any of you three gentlemen?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever heard anything about the case before you came into court this morning?

A. No.

Q. Are you acquainted with the defendant, Mr. Remmer? A. No.

Q. The attorneys here, Mr. Pike, Mr. Thompson, and Mr. McDonald, they are Nevada attorneys here. I take it you are not acquainted with the gentlemen who are from out of the State, and then there is Mr. Lohse and Mr. Fry—are any of these attorneys acting as lawyers for you now?

A. No. [43]

Q. Have any of them recently? A. No.

Q. Have you talked with any of them on any business or legal matters? A. No.

Q. Now I have tried to point out this morning that the defendant here is charged with the matters set forth in the indictment and that is all we are concerned with, is the charge here in this indictment. This indictment is not evidence in the case. It is merely the means by which the trial is brought on, the means by which the defendant is here before the court for trial, and at the beginning of the trial, and all through the trial, he is to be considered as an innocent man and he is so to be considered as innocent unless the evidence that you would hear from this witness stand would convince you to the contrary beyond a reasonable doubt, and if, after hearing this evidence, you have in your minds an abiding conviction that the charge is true, then you should vote for a verdict of guilty. In other words, if that condition of your mind should result from the evidence, there is in your mind then no room for a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of the defendant. The presumption of innocence then no longer applies and the verdict should be guilty. Now on the other hand if, after hearing this evidence, you are not satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, if, after hearing this evidence, you do not have in your minds a conviction, [44] abiding conviction, that the charge is true, then you should vote for a verdict of not guilty. In other words, it means just this—that it is the burden of the government to prove this case against this defendant beyond a reasonable doubt and if they fail to do that, then you should vote for a verdict of not guilty, and the case should be decided without any outside influence, be decided entirely upon the evidence brought into this court room, that you are not to be influenced by any feeling of prejudice. If anything like that should occur during the course of the trial, you must drive it out of your minds and decide the case entirely upon the evidence here and you are to decide this case without being influenced by any feeling of sympathy. We have to find out what the truth is and we must do that without being influenced by anything but the evidence. Now do you know of any reason why you could not be a fair and impartial juror, any of you, if you are selected to try this case? A. No.

BLURRED COPY

Q. And if you were selected to try this case, you would decide this case entirely upon the evidence, wouldn't you? A. Yes.

Q. I am in the same position you are. I have no idea or knowledge of what the evidence in this case is to be. It doesn't make any difference how we feel towards any kind of business or occupation and if it should occur during this trial, or the [44a] evidence in this trial should point to certain things concerning this defendant or any of his activities that we might not like, we must remember that we are not concerned with any questions concerning those things. We are concerned only with the case set forth in this indictment. Now I do not know as anything like that will appear here, but if it does, our duty would be, under our oath, to leave that out of our deliberations and consideration. Now some of us might have a prejudice against gambling; some of us might have a prejudice against gambling that might be conducted in a State where gambling is prohibited by law. If it should appear by this evidence that this defendant has engaged in such activities, those activities have nothing whatever to do with this case, so far as arriving at your verdict is concerned.

Now is there any member of the jury—assume, just for the sake of consideration here that such events might appear in this evidence, and you will be instructed by the Court to decide the case upon the evidence alone—is there any one here who would feel they could not do that and would be influenced by any such outside activities? Is there any one here who would be influenced or tempted to decide the case against the defendant if any such conditions appear here? I take it that none of you would and it is right that you should not. You must keep in mind at all times that we are here just to try the issues set forth in this indictment. The defendant is either [45] guilty or not guilty. The charge is either true or not true, and the jury will have the duty of coming to that decision.

BLURRED COPY

OUND CLOSE IN CENTER

The Court: Any further questions that you would like to suggest to the Court?

Mr. Thompson: We would like to inquire by whom Mr. Carter is employed.

The Court: Mr. Carter, whom are you employed by?

A. No one at present. I do a little contracting work.

The Court: Any further questions suggested?

No questions.

The Court: Now is there any challenge for cause?

Mr. Golden: Of those three, your Honor?

The Court: Well, I want to explain that now. When you are considering your peremptory challenges, you are not bound as to any in the box whom you have passed. You are at liberty to exercise all your peremptory challenges to any person in the box at any time. Now any challenge for cause?

The Court: I want to ask another question of all of you. This is addressed to every one. Is there any one here in this jury box at this time who has an opinion one way or another as to the guilt of this defendant, as to the truth or untruth of this charge?

None. [46]

The Court: Any challenge for cause?

No challenge.

The Court: Defendant's 5th peremptory challenge.

Mr. Lohse: Excuse Vernon Ennor.

The Court: Have you ever heard of this case before you came into court room this morning?

Q. You understand the indictment here is not evidence in the case? A. I understand.

Q. It is merely the means of bringing the case to trial. You heard the statement Mr. Pike made this morning? A. Yes.

Q. Did you gain any information from reading in the newspapers anything in addition to what you heard Mr. Pike say this morning?

A. Nothing that would influence me one way or the other.

Q. At the present time you know of no reason why you could not be a fair and impartial juror?

A. I know of no reason.

Q. At the beginning of the trial, and throughout the trial, the defendant is presumed to be innocent, you understand that? A. I understand.

Q. And that presumption remains with the defendant unless and [47] until, if the event should occur, that the evidence in the case should convince you beyond a reasonable doubt that he was guilty, you understand that? A. Yes, sir.

Q. You understand if the evidence is such that you have in your mind an abiding conviction that the charge is true, then there is no room in your mind for a reasonable doubt, and in that event the verdict should be guilty. The burden of proof is upon the government to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt. At the present time if you were selected as a juror, you would enter upon the case with an open mind, would you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it would be your purpose to be fair and impartial to both the government and the defendant? You would be fair to the government and to the defendant? A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now the defendant should not be convicted unless the evidence in the case should convince the jury that he is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. On the other hand, if the evidence should convince the juror beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty, the verdict, under the juror's oath, should be guilty. The laws of our government must be upheld and they must be upheld in every particular, regardless of whether you like this or that law, and you would be governed by those ideas if you were selected as a juror in this case? Now we want on this jury people who will be fair, people who will be fair to the defendant and fair to the government. We do not want any one on this jury who is going into the case with a fixed opinion. We expect the decision of this case will be based on something that the jury doesn't know anything at all about now, it will be based upon the evidence coming from the witnesses and from the documents that are introduced here in evidence, so at the outset of the trial each juror should have an open mind on this case. If the case was submitted to the jury right now, there is only one verdict that could be rendered and that would be not guilty, because the defendant is presumed to be innocent until his guilt is established beyond a reasonable doubt by the evidence, and you have heard no evidence and I pointed out a little while ago that there might be matters coming into this case as to the activities of the defendant which some of you might not approve of, or you might, I don't know. I don't know what they are. Even if something should come into this case as to the activities of the defendant that you might not do yourself if you were in his position or wouldn't approve of them, remember that those matters having nothing whatever to do with the case. Now if anything like that should happen, any testimony of that kind should come into the case, is there any member of this jury who, for that reason and on that basis, would be influenced against this defendant to the extent that it would cloud or interfere with the juror's purpose to be fair and decide the case entirely [56] upon the evidence that comes into court. That is rather involved and probably difficult to understand, the way I so cumbersomely expressed it, but what I am trying to get at is, no matter what happens or appears here, this defendant should not be found guilty unless the evidence proves that he is guilty of the material facts charged in the indictment. Is there any one here at this time who has that feling, he could not decide on that basis and decide the case entirely on the basis of the evidence on the charge in this case?

The defendant has exercised six peremptory challenges and has four remaining. The government has exercised four of its challenges and has two remaining. Defendant's next peremptory challenge.

Mr. Gillen: My motion, I made inquiry, your Honor, as respecting the juror, has been denied?

Mr. Gillen: That is correct.

The Court: I will grant the motion. Now you will renew the challenge.

Mr. Gillen: Then, may it please the Court, I challenge [57] Mr. Humphrey for cause.

The Court: You traverse?

Mr. Pike: That is correct.

The Court: What is the cause?

Mr. Gillen: Some expressions Mr. Humphrey made in the course of examination by your Honor. It is my recollection Mr. Humphrey stated—and it is no reflection on Mr. Humphrey, we appreciate Mr. Humphrey's frankness and truthfulness in expressing his state of mind to your Honor; it was a very fair thing for him to do and I hope my challenge does not in any wise make Mr. Humphrey feel he should be embarrassed by it. We are simply trying to get a jury that has no fixed opinion in mind about the matter and we are all human and can't help develop opinions in our minds from things we read about here. Now it is my recollection, may it please the Court, and I believe the record will bear me out, that Mr. Humphrey first said he read about this matter in the newspaper and as a result of such reading he had formed an opinion in his mind, and it is my recollection that subsequently he said it would be difficult for him to remove that opinion from his mind, and it is my recollection further, and I am ready to be corrected or either have him confirm it or otherwise by the record, that he also said he would have some fear there would be some deterrent effect—I am not quoting verbatim--because it would come to his attention that the defendant was engaged in [58] activies involving gambling, which in my humble opinion, and the opinion of my associates, means that first of all the gentleman did form an opinion here on more than evidence that came into his purview by reason of the newspaper account—and I might say we all know newspaper accounts are not accurate.

The Court: That is your challenge?

Mr. Gillen: Yes.

The Court: Let us find out. Mr. Humphrey, at this time, from any source whatever have you an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant?

Mr. Humphrey: No, sir, I have not, as to his guilt or innocence.

Q. Do you know of any reason, Mr. Humphrey, why you could not, if you are selected as a juror in this case, decide the case entirely upon the evidence that would be brought into court here?

A. No; the things told me and heard this morning, and in giving all these things consideration, I feel that I would be fair and would consider everything as to the evidence and make my decision in accordance with the evidence put before me.

Q. Now if evidence should appear here of gambling activities—the charge that we have here is set forth in this indictment, that is what the defendant is being charged with and you are to decide the case entirely upon the evidence, and you [59] understand that? A. Yes.

Q. Now take those two propositions together, that the defendant is charged with certain specific offenses in this indictment and that we are to decide the case entirely upon the evidence and that there may or may not be some evidence here of gambling activities, have you such a feeling that if there was evidence of some gambling activities that might have occurred in a State where gambling is not legal, could you decide the case without consideration of those matters?

A. Yes, sir, I believe I could.

Q. You would decide the case entirely upon the evidence here, without regard to those matters of gambling? A. Yes, sir, I believe I could.

The Court: The challenge is denied.

Mr. Gillen: May I propose two other questions?

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Gillen: One question I would like to propose, the question respecting that your Honor ask this gentleman what he meant when he said he had formed an opinion from what he read, and also what he meant when he said he would be affected by the fact when he heard the defendant had been engaged in gambling activities.

The Court: I am not concerned with that. I am concerned only with his present state of mind, that is all. I [60] will not ask that.

Mr. Gillen: My last question was intended to develop this, what did he mean by reference to gambling activities, that it would be more difficult to presume innocence of the defendant who had been in the gambling business than a defendant who had been in some other line of business?

The Court: I am only interested in his present state of mind and I think I have covered the ground very fully and what he meant by some expression he made here a short time ago, I do not think we are concerned with.

Mr. Gillen: That is the only way we get at a person's state of mind.

The Court: We asked him now what he means. I am not going over it again and I think it is clear here that this juror would decide the case entirely upon the evidence.

Mr. Gillen: If your Honor knows what he meant, I certainly do not and neither do my associates.

The Court: Sometimes a person gets an impression when he reads something in the paper.

Mr. Gillen: That is true.

The Court: And it may at the time have some influence with him.

Mr. Gillen: That's true.

The Court: And we know, I think, as a matter of law, that opinions formed from newspaper articles and ordinary [61] rumor are not of the character that will stand a challenge for cause.

Mr. Gillen: If they remain, they have.

The Court: Have you any opinion now—I asked the question a little while ago and I will ask you again—have you an opinion from any source whatever now as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant? A. No, sir.

Q. And at the time you read those newspaper articles, did you form an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant?

A. Not as to the guilt or innocence, no.

Mr. Gillen: As to what then?

The Court: We are not concerned with anything else.

Mr. Gillen: If he formed an opinion about this case, it may be of great interest to us.

The Court: The challenge is denied.

Mr. Gillen: May we have an exception.

The Court: Yes.

Mr. Pike: Your Honor, I do not like to take the time, but I do think——

Mr. Gillen: Do I understand your Honor's policy, since the government has accepted the jury as it now stands, the remaining challenge that there is in the hands of the government can only be exercised against any new venireman?

The Court: No, I made that plain a little while ago. I addressed it to the defendants, that I do not want them to feel bound to accept any persons in the box and still have remaining challenges. I am going to allow each side to exercise its full allotment of challenges.

Mr. Gillen: It is perfectly all right, only I understand your Honor to mean if you pass a challenge it does not prevent you to go back.

The Court: That has been the practice in Nevada for years, but I think the Ninth Circuit held against that practice and I think the fair thing to do is when the statute gives you 10 peremptory, you can exercise 10 peremptory challenges.

Mr. Gillen: I was just inquiring. It does not

I think in view of the fact the government has accepted the jury, their remaining peremptory challenge should be used only as to any new venireman in the box.

Q. And you would be governed according to the evidence and nothing else? A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Golden: Will your Honor ask whether, in the event it appears there is some gaming or gambling concerned, whether that would make any difference?

The Court: Now, Mrs. Mack, you have heard me go over this matter with some other people in the jury box. We must keep in mind that the offense, or offenses—there are several [76] counts in this indictment—the matters with which we are concerned and which this defendant is concerned and with which the government is concerned are those matters in the indictment and nothing else. Now during the course of this trial it may be—and I have no more knowledge of what the evidence will be than you have—it may be that some activities of this defendant might appear, matters that are so completely connected with other facts of the case that it can't very well be avoided from appearing here. Some of those matters will be matters which you, or anybody else, would disapprove of. I don't know whether they would be of that character or wouldn't be and whether you would approve or did not approve, but regardless of that, what I am trying to get at is we must decide the case entirely upon the charges contained in the indictment, so if those other matters came into this case we must decide this case entirely upon the evidence and not be prejudiced against this defendant on account of any of those matters.

A. I can.

Mr. Golden: I don't know what the lady's acquaintance is with Mr. Pike.

Q. It wouldn't influence you any more than any other lawyer and the time you have been living in Reno you probably do know a great majority of the lawyers who have lived there for any considerable period of time, don't you, and if any of those other gentlemen were in this case, it wouldn't make any difference, so far as the facts are concerned, so fas as Mr. Pike is concerned? BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court: I am talking to both of you now. Have you any opinion, either one of you, as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant?

A. No. [79]

Q. Do you know anything about this case or heard anything about it, through your reading or any other source, in addition to what Mr. Pike said here this morning when he gave a brief statement of the nature of the case? A. No.

Q. You understand that the defendant is presumed to be innocent and he is to be considered innocent unless, from the evidence, it should appear to a juror that he is not innocent. In other words, at the outset of the trial the defendant is considered an innocent man and is to remain so in the minds of the jury, or an individual juror, unless and until the evidence should convince a juror beyond a reasonable doubt to the contrary. You understand that and you appreciate the necessity of striving—perhaps we will never be able to accomplish it but we are striving to have an equal and fair administration of justice throughout the country, and the only way that can be obtained is to see that courts and juries decide cases on the evidence and the law of the case along and without influence of any matter from outside. You understand that, don't you? A. Yes.

Q. And would you be so governed in this case, decide this case entirely upon the evidence?

A. Yes.

Q. Now it may be that one or both of you will be called upon [80] to act as jurors in the case if selected as alternative jurors. Do you know of any reason, either one of you, why you could not be a fair and impartial juror if selected as a juror in this case? A. No.

The Court: Any further questions?

Mr. Golden: May we inquire whether the gentleman would be influenced should it appear during the course of the trial that his paper takes a position one way or another in this case?

The Court: I am going to ask something right here now. I have a feeling that the average man and woman has respect for his oath. I think we all ought to have that feeling and I have it and I think we are all conscientious and we try to do what is right. Now I am going to ask this jury to do something that probably is going to be hard to do. I am going to ask every member of this jury, and each of the alternate jurors, not to read, during the course of this trial, any newspaper accounts of this trial. Will you promise you will not do that, each and every one of you? The reason for that is, you are to get your impressions and views of this case from the witnesses and from the documents which may be introduced in court. Now you are going to hear a certain witness testify, say, for example. You might read accounts of his testimony in the paper in the next four or five days, one right after [81] another or several papers. They would give undue emphasis to that individual's testimony. Do I make myself clear? In other words, you might give importance to one individual's testimony because the newspaper article which you might read would emphasize something about his testimony. You are to give emphasis to the testimony you hear here and be influenced by it as it appears to you and not by any newspaper articles. I think you understand. I am going to ask each and every one of you to avoid reading any newspaper articles of this trial. I do not say there would be anything in the paper not proper, I am not saying that, but it would give undue emphasis you are to give to this evidence as it comes in here. For the same reason I would not permit any juror to take any notes during the trial, and that is for the same reason. A juror might take notes and then when they get into the jury room it was a question as to what this witness said or didn't say, but somebody has a note. The person who has the note might have misunderstood but because he has notes, the jury might say, that is it, so I don't want any notes taken and I don't want you to read any articles in the papers, so I am going to ask you not to do that and I feel confident you won't. All we want is fair and impartial treatment given this defendant and the government and a fair trial. Now will you refrain—I ask you especially because you are connected with newspapers.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Mr. Golden: The question is whether working there, he [82] could hardly fail to know the paper's policy, whether that paper's policy would have any influence on an employee of that paper, that is the question.

Mr. Golden: We again ask whether he has read the local papers of yesterday and this morning and whether from that he would have any opinion as to the policy of those papers?

Orr, Circuit Judge:

OPINION

Appellant stands convicted on four counts of an indictment charging wilful attempts to defeat and evade taxes due and owing from him and his wife for the years 1944 and 1945 in violation of §145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code, 26 U.S.C.A. § 145 (b).[1] He was sentenced to imprisonment for five years and a fine of $5,000 on each of the four counts, the sentences of imprisonment to run concurrently and the fines to be cumulative. The judgment is challenged upon numerous grounds.

I. Bill of Particulars.

Appellant first contends that the trial court erred in denying his motion for a bill of particulars made pursuant to the provisions of Rule 7 (f), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.[2] Particular stress is placed upon the fact that the indictment did not inform him as to the source or sources of his alleged net income, the item or items making up his alleged net income, and the method or methods by which the Government computed his alleged net income. An application for a bill of particulars is one addressed to the sound discretion of the court. Our inquiry: Was that discretion abused? Wong Tai v. United States, 273 U. S. 77 (1927); Himmelfarb v. United States, 175 F.2d 924 (9th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 338 U. S. 860; Maxfield v. United States, 152 F.2d 593 (9th Cir. 1945), cert. denied, 327 U. S. 794. A bill of particulars should be granted where it is thought necessary (1) to protect the defendant against a second prosecution for the same offense, or (2) to enable the defendant to adequately prepare his defense and avoid surprise at the trial. In the instant case the indictment charged that appellant filed tax returns disclosing a certain net income and tax due, whereas, in fact the net income and tax due were of a specified greater amount. It is apparent that the offense charged is sufficiently defined to protect appellant from double jeopardy. We deem it significant that appellant has not contended that he was subjected to surprise during the trial by the nature of the Government's case and thus unprepared to meet the charges against him. See Himmelfarb v. United States, supra; Maxfield v. United States, supra. The situation is quite different from that in Singer v. United States, 58 F.2d 74 (3d Cir. 1932), upon which appellant relies, since there emphasis was placed upon the frequent interruptions of the trial that were necessary so that the prosecution could give the defendant information which would have been contained in a requested bill of particulars. Thus, the defendant in that case was in fact unable adequately to prepare his defense because of the failure to grant the bill. Moreover, the indictment in the Singer case failed to distinguish certain partnership gross income from partnership net income, an item upon which the defendant should have been advised and which could have been ascertained only from a bill of particulars. No such prejudice to appellant is evident in the instant case. The offense charged was specifically stated in the indictment. Appellant was in a position to know whether the facts alleged were true. The most to which appellant was entitled prior to trial was disclosure of the theory of the Government's case. United States v. Caserta, 199 F. 2d 905 (3d Cir. 1952). That the Government was proceeding upon a net worth theory was made known to appellant during the course of argument on the motion for a bill of particulars.[3] The District Court in the exercise of its discretion determined that granting the requested bill of particulars would merely apprise appellant of information in the hands of the prosecution to which he was not entitled. Under the circumstances, no abuse of discretion appears. A bill of particulars has been denied in prosecutions under similar tax evasion indictments. See United States v. Rainey, 10 F.R.D. 431 (W.D.Mo. 1950); United States v. Mangiaracina, 10 F.R.D. 415 (W.D.Mo. 1950); but see United States v. Kelly, 10 F.R.D. 191 (W.D.Mo. 1950).

II. Accessibility of Records.

Appellant asserts that the trial court erred in denying the defense access to certain books, papers and documents in the possession of the Government. The following facts are pertinent to consideration of this contention.

Long prior to the filing of the criminal indictment in April of 1951, appellant knew that the Government was investigating his income tax liability. The Bureau of Internal Revenue issued 90-day letters in 1949 and prior to February of 1950 a federal income tax lien in excess of $800,000 was placed against his property. Numerous conferences were had subsequent to January 11, 1950, with various attorneys and accountants representing appellant in tax matters. Power of attorney was executed by appellant to counsel of record in the present litigation as early as March 10, 1950, for the purpose of representing appellant in tax conferences with the government. Other attorneys and accountants have represented appellant with the Treasury Department since early in 1949, powers of attorney filed with that department disclose.

During the course of its investigation, the Government acquired voluntarily from third parties certain books, papers and documents pertaining to businesses in which it was alleged that appellant had an interest.[4] Being advised, in the course of conferences, that an audit of appellant's affairs was being conducted, the Government gave appellant's accountants complete access to the aforementioned records in its possession. An affidavit executed by one of these accountants stated that the material consisted of a "mass of original documents" and that "this material filled a packing box of approximately fifty cubic feet in volume plus several other smaller cartons." Although the accountants surveyed the material at this time, spring of 1950, no complete analysis of the records is said to have taken place since appellant did not make sufficient funds available for the task. At another time prior to the filing of the indictment in this case, accountant Lawrence Semenza sought permission to examine these records in connection with work he was doing for appellant in computing his civil tax liability subsequent to issue of the 90-day letters. Semenza was not only allowed to examine the business records in the possession of the Government, but was allowed to select any records he desired for use in his own office.

After the filing of the indictment, no request was made by appellant's counsel for examination of the records not previously selected by Semenza until October 22, 1951, more than six months after the filing of the indictment. The Government agreed to allow inspection of these records only on the compliance with certain conditions: a sufficient showing of appellant's interest and consent of the third parties who had originally given the records to the Government.

Appellant first sought a court order on November 14, 1951, when a motion was made to inspect and take copies pursuant to the provisions of Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.[5] In conjunction with this motion, appellant also sought a continuance of his trial until April 1, 1952, to enable sufficient time for examination of the requested records. In this regard, it should be noted that trial was set for November 28, 1951. The motions to inspect and take copies and for a continuance were denied by the trial court after a hearing.

The District Court properly exercised its discretion in denying these motions. As has been observed, at no time prior to the filing of the indictment was the freedom of appellant to examine the records

"Rule 16. Discovery and Inspection.

The order shall specify the time, place and manner of making the inspection and of taking the copies or photographs and may prescribe such terms and conditions as are just."

in the possession of the Government in any way limited. At least three accountants representing appellant did in fact survey the material in question and one accountant was allowed to take all records he thought necessary for the computation of appellant's tax liability.[6] Although it is true that accounting analysis of these records was at that time only for the purpose of settling appellant's civil tax liability, based on net income alleged by the government in its 90-day letters to be $136,718.94 for 1944 and $265,661.78 for 1945, analysis of the materials for that purpose would of necessity cover the same ground and consider the same sources of income as would analysis for the purpose of the present criminal proceedings where the Government alleged lesser sums as income: $67,469.21 for 1944 and $75,865.19 for 1945. The opportunity afforded appellant to examine the records in question was sufficient to enable him to prepare an adequate defense. Furthermore, there is no adequate explanation as to why appellant waited more than six months after filing of the indictment to request permission of the Government to examine the records and first made his motion under Rule 16 two weeks before the trial was due to commence. The affidavits supporting the motion to produce and take copies conceded that accounting analysis of the records would probably take two or three months. One of appellant's counsel averred in his supporting affidavit that he first learned in October of 1951 that the Government had possession of various books and records of some of the business in which appellant had an interest.[7] But the facts to which we have already referred show that other representatives of appellant knew of the existence of the records, and at the very least had surveyed the material, many months earlier. The motion to produce and take copies therefore was not timely. To refuse to continue the trial until April 1, 1952, as requested, was not an abuse of the court's discretion in view of appellant's tardiness in bringing his motion.

Subsequent to denial of his motion to inspect and take copies under Rule 16, appellant on November 23, 1951, filed a motion for production and inspection under the provisions of Rule 17(c), Federal

[7]However, another of appellant's counsel stated during oral argument of the motion that counsel learned at an "early stage in this case" that the Government had "quite an abundance of records."

Rules of Criminal Procedure.[8] A subpoena duces tecum was served on Government counsel, which they thereupon moved to quash. After a hearing on the day before the trial was to commence, the trial court granted the Government's motion and denied appellant's motion. Because of the circumstances already discussed, the court did not err in determining that compliance with the subpoena would be unreasonable and oppressive.

The case of Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, 341 U.S. 214 (1951), is not authority for the proposition that the trial court's denial of the motion under Rule 17(c) was an abuse of discretion, as appellant has argued. The Supreme Court in that case held that the trial court had the power to order the Government to produce certain documents.

It did not hold that a refusal to grant the motion to produce would have been an abuse of discretion.

We think it important to stress, in considering whether denial of appellant's motions should be upheld, that the purpose of motions of this type is to expedite the proceedings and enable a defendant adequately to prepare his defense. No specific showing has been made by appellant as to how the denial of these sweeping motions calling generally for production of all records in the possession of the Government pertaining to businesses in which it was alleged appellant had an interest prejudiced the defense during the course of the trial. The court stated that appellant's counsel would be given ample opportunity during the trial to examine any document offered by the Government. Only once during the trial did appellant seek the production of particular papers, certain daily poker sheets from the 186 Club, and the request was granted.

We have referred to certain books, papers and documents given voluntarily by third parties to the Government, which were selected by appellant's accountant Semenza prior to the indictment and taken by him to his own office for use in computing appellant's tax liability. These records were given to Semenza upon the condition that he return them to the Bureau of Internal Revenue. Semenza later gave the records to Friedman, another accountant employed by appellant, who in turn gave the records to appellant's counsel. When subpoenaed before the grand jury, and later during the trial, Semenza said he was unable to produce the records because ap-pellant's counsel would not return them to him. The District Court then ordered appellant's counsel to deliver these records to the clerk of the court, the records to be available to both Government and defense counsel during the trial. Appellant thereupon made a motion under Rule 41(e), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure,[9] for return of these records and suppression of their use as evidence. The motion was denied.

Appellant contends that the trial court's order violated the Fourth and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. We do not agree. The records given to Semenza were obtained by the Government from third parties rather than from appellant. Use of such records by the prosecution would not violate appellant's constitutional rights, even were it true that the third parties originally obtained the records from appellant illegally.[10] See Lustig v. United States, 338 U.S. 74, 78-79 (1949); Feldman v. United States, 322 U.S. 487, 492 (1944); Symons v. United States, 178 F.2d 615 (9th Cir. 1949). Since the Government's possession was such as properly to entitle it to use of the records as evidence, the condition that the records be returned was lawfully imposed when Semenza's request to select certain records for accounting analysis was granted. Such a promise to return the records was enforcable. Cf. Greenbaum v. United States, 280 Fed. 474, 478 (6th Cir. 1922). Appellant's counsel took the records subject to the imposed condition and therefore could not retain them by asserting so-[10]There is no indication in the record on appeal that the books and documents were ever taken from appellant's possession illegally. At the hearing on the motion for return of the books and documents and suppression of their use as evidence, appellant sought permission to adduce testimony as to the circumstances of the Government's original acquisition of the records. The District Court held that appellant's attempt to raise this question for the first time at that point in the proceedings was not timely, relying upon the last sentence of Rule 41(e), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

called constitutional rights of appellant. As the Supreme Court said in Hale v. Henkel, 201 U.S. 43 (1906) at 69-70: "The right of a person under the Fifth Amendment to refuse to incriminate himself is purely a personal privilege of the witness. It was never intended to permit him to plead the fact that some third person might be incriminated by his testimony, even though he were the agent of such person." (Emphasis added.) Nor was appellant in a position to assert constitutional rights, because appellant never acquired personal possession of the records after they were given by the Government to Semenza. "A party is privileged from producing the evidence but not from its production." Johnson v. United States, 228 U.S. 457, 458 (1913).

The case of People v. Minkowitz, 220 N.Y. 399, 115 N.E. 987 (1917), referred to for the first time by appellant during oral argument, is distinguishable. That case involved papers originally in the possession of the defendant which had been given to his attorney in the course of an attorney-client relationship. The court held that under those circumstances the possession of the attorney was the possession of the defendant, and the attorney therefore could not be compelled to produce the papers. In the present case, however, the records were not acquired by appellant's counsel from appellant in the course of an attorney-client relationship, but were instead received from the Government subject to the condition that they be returned.

III. Sufficiency of the Evidence.

The Government's case is based upon the net worth method, the underlying theory of which is that where a person's net worth at the end of a particular year is greater than his net worth at the beginning of that year, and such increment is not attributable to gifts, devises, loans, or other non-income sources, an inference may be drawn that the increase in net worth represents income to the taxpayer. The net worth computations of the Government tended to show that appellant had failed to report taxable income of $31,747.91 in 1944 and $11,747.04 in 1945. No attempt was made by the Government in this case to increase this sum by the amount of appellant's non-deductible expenses during the years in question. The Government not only relied upon numerous documents and the testimony of more than fifty witnesses to establish the increment in appellant's net worth during the years 1944 and 1945, but also extensively investigated possible non-income sources of net worth in order to exclude their effect. The question of the sufficiency of the evidence was raised by appellant's motion for judgment of acquital made at the close of the case.

The net worth method of computing income may be used only where a taxpayer does not keep books or such books are inadequate in that they do not clearly reflect income. See 26 U.S.C.A. § 41. The jury was so instructed in the present case, and the evidence is sufficient to sustain a finding that appellant's records were inadequate. Ray Weaver, the special agent in charge of the Bureau of Internal Revenue investigation, testified, as an expert, that in his opinion the records of the enterprises in question were not adequately kept. Specific illustrations of such inadequacy were given by Weaver and other witnesses.[11] As hereinbefore stated, appellant's accountants had made a survey of the records pertaining to appellant's business enterprises in the Government's possession prior to trial. Therefore, the alleged failure of the Government to introduce in evidence all such records in its possession is not significant since if any records adequately reflecting income were in existence appellant could have specifically requested their production during the trial.

Appellant attacks the accuracy of the Government's computation of his starting point net worth, that is, his net worth on December 31, 1943. It was necessary for the Government to establish appellant's net worth at the beginning of the period during which the alleged evasion occurred in order to compare his increment in net worth with the income actually reported by appellant on his and his wife's tax returns. The fundamental question presented is what quantum of evidence must be offered by the Government before a trial court can properly submit the case to the jury. Whether sufficient evidence has been introduced in a given case will of course [11]For example, William E. Kyne testified that he kept the records of the B-R Smoke Shoppe; that these records consisted of a single entry each day, whether the business had lost or won; that this daily entry was a net figure arrived at after all the expenses of doing business had been paid, including salaries.

BLURRED COPY

depend upon the facts of that particular case. In deciding whether the trial court properly denied appellant's motion for judgment of acquittal, the evidence must be taken in the light most favorable to the Government. Gendelman v. United States, 191 F.2d 993 (9th Cir. 1951). Proof of the exact amounts of unreported income is not required. The evidence is sufficient if the jury is justified in finding therefrom, beyond a reasonable doubt, that there has been a wilful attempt to evade taxes. United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503 (1943); Goldbaum v. United States, ... F.2d .... (9th Cir. April 13, 1953).

In the instant case the Government thoroughly investigated appellant's potential sources of net worth. It was not incumbent upon the prosecution to prove appellant's net worth to a mathematical certainity before the case could be submitted to the jury. As the Fourth Circuit said in Bell v. United States, 185 F.2d 302 (4th Cir. 1950), cert. denied, 340 U.S. 930: "An estimate of the taxpayer's net worth as the means of determining his income is resorted to in the absence of accurate records which it is his duty under the statute to make and to preserve, and by its very nature it is an approximation; but it has been held in this and other jurisdictions to be an appropriate method to support a criminal prosecution under the statute * * *." (Emphasis added.) 185 F.2d at 308. See also Gariepy v. United States, 189 F.2d 459 (6th Cir. 1951); Schuermann v. United States, 174 F.2d 397 (8th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 338 U.S. 831.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Reference was made during the trial to a certain safe deposit box in which appellant purported to keep money. Appellant contends that the possibility that substantial funds were kept in the box destroys the validity of the Government's net worth computations, yet appellant did not attempt in any way at the trial to prove that substantial funds were in fact kept in the box. Other evidence introduced at the trial, such as the fact that a judgment of $1800 obtained against appellant in 1938 was not paid until 1945, tended to show that appellant did not have substantial cash at the beginning of 1944. Requests by the Government to examine the contents of the safe deposit box were refused. If a defendant could prevent a case of this type from being submitted to the jury merely by stating he had further assets not taken into consideration by the Government, yet refusing to disclose them, enforcement of the tax evasion provisions of the Internal Revenue Code would be completely frustrated. Skillful concealment cannot be made an invincible barrier to proof. United States v. Johnson, supra, at 518. More than mere speculation is required to support a motion for judgment of acquital. The only affirmative evidence concerning the safe deposit box in question was the testimony of one witness that on December 3, 1943, he placed $17,000 in the box. Were we to assume that this money remained in the box on December 31, 1943, the Government's case would not fall since the net worth computations, including the additional $17,000 as part of opening net worth for 1944, would still show unreported income of $14,747.91 for the year 1944.

Reliance is placed by appellant upon the cases of Bryan v. United States, 175 F.2d 223 (5th Cir. 1949)[12] and United States v. Fenwick, 177 F.2d 488 (7th Cir. 1949), where judgments of conviction were reversed because of the insufficiency of the evidence. This court, in Davena v. United States, 198 F.2d 230, 231 (9th Cir. 1952), questioned the "vitality" of the Fenwick case, and the majority opinion in the Bryan case was accompanied by a strong dissent. Although these decisions may well have been appropriate because of the particular facts there involved, we believe the general language of the opinions too narrowly limited the function of the jury as the triers of fact.

It is true, as appellant contends, that proof of increased net worth is only circumstantial evidence of taxable income.[13] The test to be applied on motion for judgment of acquital in such a case, however, is not whether in the trial court's opinion the evidence fails to exclude every hypothesis but that of guilt, but rather whether as a matter of law reasonable minds, as triers of the fact, must be in agreement that reasonable hypotheses other than guilt could be drawn from the evidence.[14] Stoppelli v. United States, 183 F.2d 391 (9th Cir. 1950), cert. denied, 340 U.S. 864. If reasonable minds could find that the evidence excludes every reasonable hypotheses but that of guilt, the question is one of fact and must be submitted to the jury. Curley v. United States, 160 F.2d 229 (D.C. Cir. 1947), cert. denied, 331 U.S. 837; Stoppelli v. United States, supra. Judged by this standard, the motion for judgment of acquital was properly denied in the present case.

Appellant argues in his reply brief that even if there was sufficient evidence to show a tax deficiency there was no evidence of fraud. A state of mind can seldom be proved by direct evidence but must be inferred from all the circumstances. A wilful intent to evade income taxes may be inferred from such factors as appellant's failure to include a substantial amount of income on his and his wife's tax returns, the failure to keep adequate books which would clearly reflect income, and the concealment of the ownership of property such as a safe deposit box, real estate interests, and business licenses. These factors, all present in the instant case, are but part of a general pattern of conduct engaged in by appellant from which the jury could infer the requisite intent. See Norwitt v. United States, 195 F. 2d 127, 132 (9th Cir. 1952).

[14]We interpret Karn v. United States, 158 F. 2d 568 (9th Cir. 1946), as holding in that case's factual context that no reasonable jury could have found that the evidence excluded every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt.

BLURRED COPY

The Government contended during the trial that certain unincorporated business enterprises of the appellant were to be treated as sole proprietorships for tax purposes, while appellant contended that they were partnerships.[15] The test for determining recognition of a partnership for federal income tax purposes is whether "the parties in good faith and acting with a business purpose intended to join together in the present conduct of the enterprise." Commissioner v. Culbertson, 337 U.S. 733, 742 (1949). The question is one of fact. Toor v. Westover, 200 F. 2d 713 (9th Cir. 1952); Harkness v. Commissioner, 193 F. 2d 655 (9th Cir. 1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 945. There is substantial evidence to support the Government's contention that the alleged partnerships should not be recognized for tax purposes. The record discloses, among other things, that the enterprises were financed by a single fund belonging to appellant, that appellant made the policy decisions, that the purported partners were not to acquire an interest in the assets of the business until appellant had withdrawn an amount equal to his original capital investment, that no profits were actually distributed during the years in question to persons other than appellant, and that in at least one instance a new partner [15]The enterprises in question included the B-R Smoke Shoppe, Day-Nite Cigar Store, 110 Eddy Street, and the Menlo Club. The extent of appellant's interest in the 21 Club and the San Diego Social Club was not in dispute.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

entered the business without another partner knowing the terms.

Two further contentions are made by appellant which pertain only to Counts Three and Four, the counts based upon the year 1945.

(1) Appellant asserts that in computing closing net worth for the year 1945 the Government improperly included $15,000 in markers or IOU's as cash of the B-R Smoke Shoppe, one of appellant's enterprises. Regardless of whether such markers should technically be treated as cash or accounts receivable, they were properly included as part of the assets of the business. Appellant can hardly rely upon the fact that the enterprise was engaged in the illegal business of bookmaking, and that therefore, under California law, the markers were unenforceable. It is obvious that appellant accepted markers as a substitute for cash from his customers because he thought he could find certain effective if not legal means of enforcing them. He considered the markers to be assets of his business, capable of being reduced to cash. We do not believe as a practical matter he was mistaken.

(2) In computing closing net worth for the year 1945 the Government recognized a debt of $100,000 owed by appellant to Gene Schriber as part of the $175,000 purchase price of the Menlo Club. Appellant argues that actually a sum of $125,000 was owing at the end of 1945. His position is supported by the testimony of Schriber and what purports to be a page of the 1947 Menlo Club ledger, this ledger being part of the records given to appellant's accountant Semenza prior to the trial and subsequently impounded with the court clerk by order of the Court during the trial. The Government relies upon a photostat of a page of the 1945 ledger of the Menlo Club, stating that the original was part of the records given to Semenza, that this page was never returned, and that the alleged page of the 1947 ledger upon which appellant relies first made its appearance upon return of the records to the clerk of the court. Appellant seeks to explain the inconsistency in the ledgers by stating that the first payment of $25,000 was returned to appellant so that a check for the same amount could be substituted in order to enable appellant to keep a record of the transaction. It is said that the 1945 ledger is in error in that it treats this transaction as two separate payments. This was a question of fact for the jury; it was resolved against appellant.

IV. Admissibility of Evidence.

Complaint is made to a number of rulings by the trial court in regard to the admission and exclusion of evidence during the course of the trial. Appellant's contentions must be considered in conjunction with the salutary rule that the discretion of the trial court should not be disturbed in such matters unless the accused has been deprived of substantial rights. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 52(a). Upon reviewing the alleged errors in the light of the aforesaid principle of law, we cannot say that the District

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Court erred. See United States v. Johnson, 319 U.S. 503, 519-520 (1943).

Witness Agnes Badobinatz was allowed to testify over appellant's objection, that in February of 1947 her husband, now deceased, told her that he was going to repay $5,000 he had borrowed from appellant. Appellant argues that since there was no testimony as to when the obligation was incurred the Government failed to lay a proper foundation for Badobinatz's testimony. Admission of this testimony, however, could not have been in any way prejudicial to appellant since the Government's final computation of appellant's net worth did not include this $5,000 for any of the years in question.

Witness A. V. Brady, an agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, testified concerning the investigation of appellant's tax liability and the preparation of the net worth statement upon which the Government's case was based. Appellant objects to Exhibit No. 183, the financial statement prepared by Brady to reflect changes in appellant's net worth during the years 1944-1946, which was admitted in evidence during the witness' testimony. It is urged that there was insufficient evidence to support admission of the statement. We have already held that the Government's evidence was sufficient to take the case itself to the jury. The net worth statement in question was constructed from all the evidence in the case. There was, therefore, sufficient evidentiary basis in the record for admission of the statement. Brady's estimate of appellant's federal income tax liability based upon the net worth computation was also admissible, since he was testifying as an expert witness.

During the trial appellant had sought to prove that at the end of 1946 he owed Robert Jeffress the sum of $50,000. The Court ruled that testimony by Jeffress' wife that in July of 1947 her now deceased husband told her of the debt and that part of it had been repaid was inadmissible. Since the jury was unable to agree in regard to the counts of the indictment pertaining to the year 1946, the propriety of this ruling is not before us. We mention it, however, because of its connection with the following. Appellant told the Court that James Jeffress, the son of Robert Jeffress, was being called as a witness "to give testimony which raises the identical issue which was presented to your Honor in the matter of the testimony of Mrs. Jeffress, with relation to conversation with her late husband." Since at that particular time in the trial the prospective witness was unable to appear, appellant merely made an offer of proof, his counsel stating that he assumed the Court would make the same ruling as in the case of Mrs. Jeffress' testimony. The offer was rejected. In the course of the rather extended offer of proof there was one statement that in 1944 Robert Jeffress had told his son that he owed appellant the sum of $10,000 for money borrowed in 1943. Appellant now urges that the testimony of James Jeffress would have been admissible to show this fact. It seems clear to us that the offer of proof was at least primarily made to establish the debt of appellant to James Jeffress at the end of 1946 rather than a debt owed by Jeffress to appellant at the beginning of 1944. Appellant had a duty to make the purpose of his offer of proof clear. Evidence excluded for the only purpose for which it was offered cannot be properly asserted on appeal to be admissible for another purpose theretofore undisclosed. Flowers v. Bush & Witherspoon Co., 254 Fed. 519 (5th Cir. 1918). It is the duty of the party making the offer of proof rather than the Court to separate the various items of evidence embraced in a single offer. Lane v. United States, 142 F. 2d 249 (9th Cir. 1944).

Appellant also contends that the Court unduly restricted the cross-examination of witnesses Schriber, Weaver and Brady. The trial court may in the exercise of its sound discretion limit the extent of cross-examination. Todorow v. United States, 173 F. 2d 439 (9th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 337 U.S. 925; Chevillard v. United States, 155 F. 2d 929 (9th Cir. 1946). No abuse of discretion appears.

V. Instructions to the Jury.

Appellant urges that the trial court failed adequately to instruct the jury on the law applicable to the case in that the charge did not contain certain supplementary instructions which had been proposed by appellant.[16] The instructions given by

---

[16]The Government cites Ziegler v. United States, 174 F. 2d 439 (9th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 338 U.S. 822, in contending that there could be no objection to any portion of the charge to the jury until the charge was given and that appellant has accordingly failed to satisfy the requirements of Rule 30, the Court in the present case are similar in substance to the instructions reviewed in Barcott v. United States, 16 F. 2d 929 (9th Cir. 1948), cert. denied, 336 U.S. 912, where we held that the charge fully and fairly presented the law of the case. Upon examination of the instant charge in its entirety, we find that the instructions given fully protected the rights of appellant.

The instructions of the Court as to the net worth method of proving tax evasion and the instructions as to the methods of accounting to be used by a taxpayer were adequate when considered as a whole with the instructions concerning the elements of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The facts in the Ziegler case were that the only objection made was at the time requested instructions were exchanged by counsel, and no objection was taken when the Court informed counsel of his proposed charge prior to final jury arguments. In the present case, on the other hand, objection was made by appellant to the instructions at the time provided by the Court, which was after the Court informed counsel of his proposed charge but prior to closing arguments to the jury. Since the record clearly discloses that the Court and counsel for both sides considered the procedure sufficient to satisfy Rule 30, and since the purpose of the rule has been served by giving the trial court opportunity to correct alleged errors in his charge, appellant's objections to the instructions have not been waived. Plain error in instructions should of course be noticed regardless of whether the matter was properly brought to the attention of the trial Court. Fed. R. Crim. P. 52(b); see such earlier cases as Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 107 (1945); Morris v. United States, 156 F. 2d 525, 527 (9th Cir. 1946).

---

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

crime, the Government's burden of proof, and other basic principles of criminal law applicable to this case.

The jury was also properly instructed as to the test for determining the validity of a partnership for federal income tax purposes. The instruction requested by appellant, requiring the jury to find a valid partnership if certain testimony was believed, unduly emphasized particular phases of the evidence and would violate the rule that the question is one of fact to be decided from all the evidence.

Appellant was not entitled to an instruction as to a possible inference to be drawn from the Government's failure to introduce in evidence all of appellant's business records in its possession. The records were originally prepared by appellant's business associates, were accessible to appellant prior to trial, and were at least surveyed by his accountants subsequent to the commencement of the Government's investigation of appellant's income tax liability. As we have previously noted, if any specific records had been thought beneficial to his case, appellant could have requested their production.

VI. Fair Trial.

After the jury had returned its verdict, appellant moved for a new trial. The only new proposition asserted was that appellant had been substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of certain conduct on the part of the jury, the

BLURRED COPY

Court, the prosecuting attorneys, and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Appellant's counsel averred in a supporting affidavit that the following facts were learned by them subsequent to the verdict of the jury: that in the early stages of the trial one of the jurors had been told by a person unknown to appellant's counsel that the juror could profit by bringing in a verdict favorable to appellant; that the juror thereupon reported this conversation to the trial judge; that the trial judge discussed the matter with the prosecuting attorneys, but did not at any time inform appellant's counsel of the incident; and that the Federal Bureau of Investigation was notified, conducted an investigation, and made a report to the trial judge. It is appellant's contention that the juror to whom the remark had been made would be apprehensive of being suspected of taking a bribe if he voted for a verdict in favor of appellant, and would therefore be prejudiced against appellant. The motion for a new trial requested the opportunity for a hearing to adduce evidence concerning the various conversations among the juror to whom the remark had been made, the trial court, and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation "in order to fully investigate the same to determine to what extent it had any effect upon the jury and was prejudicial to the defendant."

The District Court in denying the motion did not abuse its broad power to grant or deny motions of this type, since there was a failure on the part of appellant to show prejudice. The very newspaper articles upon which appellant relies, and which were made a part of his motion, disclose that the juror believed the statement had been made to him in jest and only notified the trial judge because of his admonitions not to discuss the case. The judge also believed the statement had not been made seriously, but took the precaution of requesting an investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which in fact substantiated his belief that the remark had been made in jest. These circumstances do not indicate prejudice to appellant. It is obvious that if in fact an attempt had been made by persons associated with the defense to bribe a juror disclosure of the planned investigation would have greatly decreased the likelihood that such investigation would be successful. Appellant relied solely upon the affidavit of defense counsel stating what counsel had learned through the newspapers. If any jurors had received communications from the trial court or the Federal Bureau of Investigation of a nature which would tend to prejudice them against appellant, or had been subjected to other extraneous influences, such fact could have been appropriately presented by submitting affidavits of the jurors themselves. See, for example, Clyde Mattox v. United States, 146 U.S. 140 (1892).

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

Petitioner, Elmer F. Remmer, by his counsel, prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, affirming the judgment of the United States District Court for the District of Nevada.

OPINIONS BELOW

The District Court wrote no opinion. The opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3748, 3777) is reported in 205 F. 2d p. 277.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on May 28, 1953 (R. 3778). An order denying a petition for rehearing, rehearing en banc, and staying mandate was entered on June 30, 1953 (R. 3779). On July 17, 1953, an order was entered by Mr. Associate Justice Tom C. Clark of this Court, extending the time for filing a petition for writ of certiorari to and including August 29, 1953. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. sec. 1254.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Do mere errors in the taxpayer's books authorize the Commissioner to substitute another method of accounting?

2. Was the sufficiency of petitioner's accounting system a question for the jury?

3. Where all of the books and records are not in evidence, the court has denied petitioner's motion for discovery, and has quashed a subpoena requiring the Government to produce a mass of petitioner's original records, can a finding be made that petitioner did not keep adequate books which clearly reflect income, so as to permit a computation on the net-worth theory?

4. Where it is clear that a computation by the net-worth method has omitted an asset shown to have been in existence at the beginning of the indictment period, can any assumption be made that the difference between the net worth at the beginning of the year and the net worth at the end of the year represents taxable income received during the year?

(a) Without that assumption, does a net-worth computation establish a prima facie case of unreported income?

5. In computing income by the net-worth method, must the traditional basic distinction between the cash and accrual methods of accounting be observed or is the net-worth method independent of conventional accounting concepts?

6. May accounts receivable be included in a computation of net-worth on the cash basis?

7. Does the defendant have the burden of establishing the amount of a cash item which has been omitted from the Government's net-worth computation?

8. Are the tests for determining whether partnerships will be recognized for the purpose of computing civil liability, equally applicable to the determination of liability for criminal penalties?

(a) Are the tests used in civil cases so clear and certain that a defendant in a criminal case can properly be charged with knowledge in 1945 and 1946 of the development of the law in this field up to the year 1949?

9. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, providing for a motion for discovery and inspection "at any time after the filing of the indictment", authorize the denial of the motion on the ground that it is not timely?

(a) If timeliness is an element, does the Rule permit the time to be charged against the defendant where the Government has contributed to the delay?

10. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure authorize the court to substitute its judgment for the defendant's and to deny inspection of records on the ground that the court disagrees with the defendant's appraisal of the expected benefits?

11. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure require a showing of the specific need for individual papers?

12. Bureau of Internal Revenue
Regulations 111:

Sec. 29.42-2. Income Not Reduced to Possession.

Income which is credited to the account of or set apart for a taxpayer and which may be drawn upon by him at any time is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. To constitute receipt in such a case the income must be credited or set apart to the taxpayer without any substantial limitation or restriction as to the time or manner of payment or condition upon which payment is to be made, and must be made available to him so that it may be drawn at any time, and its receipt brought within his own control and disposition. A book entry, if made, should indicate an absolute transfer from one account to another. If a corporation contingently credits its employees with bonus stock, but the stock is not available to such employees until some future date, the mere crediting on the books of the corporation does not constitute receipt.

Sec. 29.3797-4. Partnerships.

The Internal Revenue Code provides its own concept of a partnership. Under the term "partnership" it includes not only a partnership as known at common law, but, as well, a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization which carries on any business, financial operation, or venture, and which is not, within the meaning of the Code, a trust, estate, or a corporation. * * *

STATEMENT

Petitioner was convicted in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, upon an indictment under Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 USC 145 (b)), charging that petitioner willfully and knowingly attempted to defeat and evade income taxes for the years 1944 and 1945. The jury disagreed with respect to additional counts which involved the year 1946.

During the years 1944 and 1945, petitioner was in the gambling, cafe and food business (R. 1032, 1134, 1290). Petitioner and his wife filed separate returns. Each return showed the combined income and, on the community property basis, calculated a tax on one-half (R. 3519-3529). The returns of both petitioner and his wife disclosed income from the following enterprises (R. 3525, 3527-8):

San Diego Social Club and 21 Club
The 311 Club
The Menlo Club
110 Eddy Club
186 Day-Nite Club
186 Day-Nite Cigar Store

Corporate returns were filed for the 186 Club (Ex. 87-87A, R. 3541, 3551). (Ex. 88-88A, R. 3562, 3563). Partnership returns[1] were filed for the following enterprises:

21 Club (1944 return, R. 1077)
21 Club and San Diego Social Club (1945 return, R. 1076)
311 Club (1944 and 1945 returns, R. 1077)
110 Eddy (1944 return, Ex. 81, R. 3531)
110 Eddy (1945 return, Ex. 82, R. 3533)
186 Day-Nite Cigar Store (1944 return, Ex. 84, R. 3535)

[1] The return forms were designed for partnerships, syndicates, pools, joint ventures, etc. (R. 3530). They are commonly referrd to merely as partnership returns.

186 Day-Nite Cigar Store (1945 return, Ex. 85, R. 3538)
[2] Menlo Club (1945 return, Ex. 89, R. 3576)

Each return showed that petitioner had an interest.

A partnership return for the year 1944 was also filed by the B-R Smoke Shoppe (Ex. 78, R. 3530). It showed that petitioner had a one-half interest and that his share of the income was $600. The witness, Lando, who was shown on the return as a partner of the B-R Smoke Shoppe, testified that 1945 was a loss year (R. 1330). See also R. 1965, 1968.

On the premise that some of the partnership books were incomplete, the income of all of the partnerships was recomputed by the prosecution on the theory that increases in net worth represented taxable income. This assumed that the partnerships were the individual enterprises of the petitioner, which was the principal issue in the case. If the partnerships were recognized and petitioner's individual books were adequate, the use of the net-worth method in a prosecution of petitioner as an individual would have raised other questions. A revenue agent testified that the 21 Club had a fairly complete set of records, consisting of a general ledger, journal, and cash receipts and disbursements (R. 1250). Witness Semenza testified as to the condition of the books (R. 3275, 3281, 3283-5, 3287, 3289, 3290, 3299, 3413, 3415, 3417, 3418) and concluded that they were adequate (R. 3432).

Although the prosecution's own case included uncontradicted evidence that varying amounts of cash were held in safes and deposit boxes throughout the years involved (R. 1268, 1484, 1535, 1536), the prosecution exhibit used in computing petitioner's net worth at the beginning of 1944, 1945 and 1946 showed no figures for cash outside the banks (Ex. 183, R. 3613). Witness Semenza testified that without that cash figure it was impossible to determine correct net worth (R. 3292-3). Two government witnesses reluctantly agreed (R. 2557-8, 2878-80). Government counsel instructed the accountant with respect to treatment of various items (R. 2870-78-81-85).

The prosecution computed the net worth of each partnership separately. For present purposes the Court is concerned only with the following four partnership enterprises:[3]

110 Eddy Street (Ex. 163, R. 3589)
Day-Nite Cigar Store (Ex. 164, R. 3593)
Menlo Club (Ex. 165, R. 3597)
B-R Smoke Shoppe (Ex. 169, R. 3601)

These computations were based on the petitioner's books and records and were merely a restatement of the results of the operations in a different accounting form. Some changes involved the capitalization of improvements instead of treating them as expenses (R. 1268, Ex. 165, 174), and the treatment of taxes as additions to costs instead of as expense items, Ex. 175. The prosecution did not rely on the discovery of any specific item of new income or any new source of income beyond those reported in the books or tax returns.

After calculating the net worth figures of the partnerships separately the figures were transferred to a composite exhibit showing the net worth computation for the petitioner and his wife (Ex. 183, R. 3612). This exhibit reflected the theory of the prosecution that all of the income of the enterprises should be allocated to petitioner. This was done upon instructions of the prosecuting attorney (R. 28.70) not of the accountant.

The amounts of partnership net worth, all of which was charged to petitioner in Ex. 183, are as follows:

---

[3] The 186 Club was treated by the prosecution as a corporation and therefore no net worth figure representing its income was included in Ex. 183. The 186 Club occupied the back room of Day-Nite Cigar Store (R. 1425). It was bought in 1943 by Nealis and Kopstick (R. 1425), who later withdrew and were paid off (R. 1427). The prosecution recognized the partnership status of the 21 Club and San Diego Social Club (R. 2894). In Tax Court proceedings all enterprises are recognized as partnerships. Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No. 23486.

	1944	1945
B-R Smoke Shoppe	$18,231.47	$23,344.66

Menlo Club		183,647.94
Total	$97,724.36	$281,704.47

In this manner the prosecution arrived at the conclusion that petitioner had understated his income as follows (Ex. 183, R. 3613):

	1944	1945
Total Income per Exhibit 183	$50,747.91	$71,065.40
Income Reported	19,000.00	59,318.36
Difference	31,474.91	11,747.04

The relationships between petitioner and his partners were evidenced by oral and written agreements. Prosecution witness, Kyne, had an interest in six different enterprises (R. 1493, 1496) including the four which are of present importance here. A written agreement between Kyne and petitioner concerning the Menlo Club was introduced as Government Exhibit 113, R. 3582. A similar written agreement was made with witness Maundrell (Ex. 130, R. 3585) and other partners. There was also a written agreement concerning the Transit Smoke Shoppe, a later enterprise (R. 1189, 1523). Kyne testified that the oral agreements were similar in nature.

The written agreements deal with two different kinds of interest: An immediate "working interest" in the profits (R. 338) and an "actual interest" in the assets to be acquired by credits of undrawn profits (R. 1509). Because petitioner financed the enterprises, the arrangement contemplated that the shares of the profits of the other partners would be credited to their capital accounts until such time as the accumulated credits equalled their shares of the original investment and that petitioner's capital would be withdrawn in the same proportion as the other partners' earned credits. Witness Semenza, an accountant, testified that this is the usual practice in partnerships of a similar nature (R. 3388, 3423, 3433). With respect to the Menlo Club, for example, the equities of the various partners were credited with their working interests and charged with their withdrawals (R. 1807-8). Maundrell withdrew from the enterprise in 1948 and received all but $1700.00 of his equity in cash (R. 1807-10). Other partners drew on their accounts from time to time (R. 1833-5). The tax returns showed the distributive share of each partner and defendant's Ex. M-1 contained summaries of the partners' accounts (R. 3632, 3637, 3642). No ledger accounts were set up for the B-R Smoke Shoppe; the profits were divided between the partners at the end of each year. The other enterprises maintained regular books, with complete and detailed records of receipts and disbursements on a daily basis. The ledger posting was not up-to-date, but could readily be made current from the original records (R. 3275).

Petitioner spent little time around any of the enterprises (R. 1494). The other partners were active in the business (R. 1323, 1494). Cavani and Turner ran the 110 Eddy Club; Lando ran the B-R Smoke Shoppe; Maundrell was office manager for the Menlo Club, card room, bar, and restaurant (and also supervised the Day-Nite Cigar Store in Kyne's absence). Nelso, Ditto, Fricker, and Turner, who were also partners in the Menlo Club, had supervision of the various shifts in the 24-hour operation conducted there (R. 1330, 1385).

Petitioner did not participate in keeping the books (R. 1494-5). Public accountants were employed for that purpose. Lando was well known in the sporting and racing fraternity and his contribution to the partnership was his knowledge of the game and his ability to make prices (R. 1322-3). Kyne's working interest in the 110 Eddy Club was for services (R. 1382). He was the real manager of all of the enterprises (R. 1494).

With respect to the partnership issue, the instructions to the jury were as follows:

Instruction No. 24, R. 142:

Individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity. Partnerships as such are not subject to income tax, but are required to make returns of income.

A partner in a partnership shall include in his individual net income his share of the net income or loss of the partnership. If he draws either more or less than his share, his income tax is nevertheless based on the share to which he is entitled under the partnership agreement.

Instruction No. 28, R. 143, 144:

Certain businesses were described in the income tax returns in evidence as partnerships. The law does not prescribe any specific form of agreement as a requisite for partnership status. A partnership is an organization of two or more parties who have intended in good faith, and acting with a business purpose to join together in the present conduct of an enterprise. The arrangement between them may be either written or oral, and can be either an express or an implied agreement. It is not necessary that they contribute equal amounts of capital, or devote equal amounts of time to the business of the partnership, or have an equal share in the drawings, or have an equal right to draw money out of the business. The important question is whether the parties, including the defendant, actually had the intent in good faith to join together in operating the business as partners.

Petitioner's request for instructions dealing specifically with the "working interest" was denied (R. 83-4).

Proceedings Under Rules 16 and 17 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

The criminal indictment was filed on April 9, 1951 (R. 8). The case was set for trial on November 28, 1951 (R. 36). A motion for a bill of particulars was filed April 27, 1951, and denied June 15, 1951 (R. 1[illegible]).

On November 13, 1951, petitioner filed a motion for a continuance (R. 16-17), and on November 14, 1951, a motion seeking a court order to inspect and take copies of certain books and records pursuant to the provisions of Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The records sought were described as "The books of account, journals, ledgers, cash books, expense books, vouchers and other records maintained by, or pertaining to the income and expense of" several named enterprises and any others from which the Government contends petitioner received income as an owner during the years 1944, 1945 and 1946. Supporting affidavits were filed with the motions (R. 20-34). They recited that the Government had placed liens against petitioner's funds; that a certified public accountant who had assisted the petitioner prior to the indictment had withdrawn because of petitioner's inability to compensate him for his services (R. 49); that petitioner's tax counsel had become associated with the case in March, 1951; that in September, 1951, a certified public accountant had finally been engaged; that access to the records had been denied by the Government after the indictment, and that the records covered by the motion were material to the preparation of the defense.

The Government filed an affidavit in opposition (R. 35-41). This affidavit recited that certain records had been procured by the Government from third parties. (At the trial the third parties were identified as certain other partners in the enterprises (R. 2122-2126)). The affidavit in opposition to the motion also recited that prior to the indictment certain of the records had been turned over to an accountant for his use in behalf of the petitioner; that the accountant had turned them over to one of the petitioner's attorneys who continued to hold them and that the accountant had been unable to return them to the Government in accordance with his agreement. These latter records were subsequently deposited with the Clerk of the Court, pursuant to an order of the Trial Judge, and made available to both parties during the trial (R. 928-929, 1151). Petitioner's motion covered a considerable quantity of original records such as adding machine tapes, bank statements, cancelled checks, dealers' daily reports, etc. (R. 48). These were never made available to petitioner during the trial (R. 2717, 2771, 3250), although they were actually in the court house (R. 2451, 3483-6).

Both of petitioner's motions were denied (R. 42, 3492). The Court of Appeals held that prior opportunities which had been afforded petitioner's representatives to examine the material were sufficient (R. 3755), that the motion to inspect and take copies was not timely (R. 3756), and that no specific showing of prejudice had been made (R. 3758).

Pursuant to Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, petitioner filed a motion on November 23, 1951, together with supporting affidavits filed November 26, 1951, and procured a subpoena (R. 46-7) for production and inspection of books, papers, documents and objects (R. 42-54). The prosecution filed a motion to quash the subpoena, based upon the earlier affidavit (R. 55-58). The petitioner's motion was denied and the motion of the prosecution was granted (R. 58). The Court of Appeals sanctioned the denial of petitioner's motion because of the circumstances discussed in connection with the motions under Rule 16 (R. 3757). The Court of Appeals did not hold that compliance with the subpoena would have hampered the Government in any way.

Improper Communication With Jury

The verdict of the jury was returned on February 22, 1952 (R. 88). On February 24, 1952, certain stories appeared in California newspapers to the effect that during the trial the District Judge had enlisted the aid of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate a remark made to one of the jurors at his home to the effect that money might be paid to the juror if he supported the defense (R. 114, 117). The defense had no prior knowledge of the incident (R. 112). A motion for new trial was filed on February 29, 1952 (R. 106) which included as Ground 17 (R. 109) the contention that the defendant had been substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by the incident. In addition, petitioner moved that there be a trial of the issue and that evidence be produced to adduce what had actually transpired. In support of Ground 17, an affidavit by petitioner's counsel was filed (R. 111) to which copies of the newspaper stories were attached. The affidavit alleged that the petitioner had been prejudiced by the incident and that the interests of justice required a trial of the issue (R. 112). The facts alleged in the affidavit were not challenged by opposing affidavits or by any remarks of the Trial Judge or the prosecuting attorneys. No hearing was held and no findings were made. The motion for new trial and the motion for a hearing for the purpose of developing the facts were denied without any comment (R. 93-94).

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Treatment of Accounts Receivable as Cash

The evidence with respect to petitioner's taxable income on the net worth theory was summarized in prosecution Ex. 183 (R. 3612). Item 2 of that exhibit dealt with the B-R Smoke Shoppe and brought into the computation the results shown by Ex. 169 (R. 3601). The latter showed bank roll, cash on hand, at the end of 1945 to be $20,000. Exhibit 169 indicates that it was based on the testimony of Pritchett, a prosecution witness, and on Ex. 111-A. Pritchett testified (R. 1949) that the "cash" consisted of $15,000 of "markers" and only $5,000 in actual cash. The term "markers" was identified as meaning IOU's or Accounts Receivable which had not been paid (R. 1962, 1968). Pritchett's testimony dealt with the "markers" of customers and represented bets which had not been paid and which affected the business profits (R. 1965-1969). "Markers" representing the indebtedness of partners were considered as cash on settlements between the partners (R. 1734). Defendant's Exhibit M-1 omits the markers and shows cash on hand as $5,000 (R. 3628-9).

BLURRED COPY

The only bank roll figure shown in Ex. 111-A was the amount as of January 1, 1943 (R. 2773). Exhibit 169 assumed, without any evidence to support it, that the bank roll remained the same at the end of 1943 and at the end of 1944 (R. 2773). Government witness Weaver testified that the result of his treatment of the markers was to increase the net worth of the business by $15,000 (R. 2781). He thought the markers represented cash advances, despite Pritchett's testimony (R. 2780). The Court of Appeals understood that the markers represented unpaid bets but held that they were properly treated as cash because of its belief that they were collectible (R. 3769).

Weaver further testified that in preparing the net worth computation for the Menlo Club he had used "mostly" the cash receipts and disbursements method and that it was impossible to secure an accurate picture "by sticking to any one particular method specifically" (R. 2621). At another point Weaver testified that "there has actually arisen a sort of hybrid basis" (R. 2727).

SPECIFICATIONS OF ERROR

The Court of Appeals erred:

1. In holding that the tests for determining the recognition of a partnership for Federal income tax purposes as set forth in Commissioner v. Culbertson, 377 U.S. 733, are applicable in a criminal case, and that a failure to report all of the partnership income in his individual return is evidence of the defendant's willful intent to evade income taxes.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

2. In not holding that the method of accounting employed by petitioner is capable of clearly reflecting the income; or in not holding that the applicable method of accounting must be determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

3. In holding that the petitioner failed to keep adequate records which would clearly reflect income and that the net-worth method of proof was therefore permissible.

4. In holding that, despite the omission from a net worth computation of a cash item which was known to exist at the beginning of the indictment period, the case could be submitted to the jury on the assumption that the difference between the opening net worth and the closing net worth represented taxable income received during the year.

5. In holding that the defendant had the burden of establishing the amount of the omitted cash item.

6. In holding that the Government's net worth computation for a taxpayer on the cash basis properly includes accounts receivable.

7. In sanctioning the denial of petitioner's motions under Rules 16 and 17 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure.

8. In sanctioning the denial of petitioner's motion for a hearing to determine the facts of a reported incident during the trial involving one of the jurors and a third person.

9. In affirming the judgment of the District Court.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

1. Conflicts of Decision with Respect to the Necessity for Establishing the Net Worth at the Beginning of the Indictment Period.

The decision of the Court of Appeals is in conflict with the decisions in two other Circuits, viz: Bryan v. United States, 175 F. 2d 223 (CA 5) affirmed without considering point in issue here, 338 U.S. 552, and United States v. Fenwick, 177 F. 2d 488 (CA 7). Those cases hold that where the prosecution attempts to establish an understatement of income by the net-worth method, the case should not be submitted to the jury if the starting point net worth is not definitely established, because the evidence is not sufficient to make out a prima facie case. In civil fraud cases the Tax Court similarly requires a definite establishment of the net worth at the beginning of the taxable period. James Q. Whittemore v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket No. 13421, 7 T.C.M. 845, 849 (1948).

BLURRED COPY

In criminal tax cases, several methods of proving unreported income are available to the Government. For example, it may show specific instances of failure to account for gross business income; it may show that deductions claimed on the tax returns were fictitious or false; it may show that false entries were made in the books or that a duplicate set of books was maintained for the purpose of concealing the true condition of the business. In the absence of direct evidence of this nature, unreported income may be shown, under certain conditions, by indirect evidence such as an analysis of bank deposits; by showing an increase in net worth; or by evidence of purchases, expenditures, and investments in excess of the reported income during the indictment years.

In this case, there is no evidence of any specific item of income which was not reported in the books or tax returns. The Government elected to prove its case exclusively by the net-worth method (R. 549-554), and it is bound by the limitations which have been established upon the use of it. In this method of proof, a showing is made that at the beginning of each year the defendant's assets were worth a specific sum and that at the end of the year his assets were worth a greater sum. The difference is then adjusted for any funds received as gifts, loans, inheritances, etc., for taxes paid, and for living expenses. The resulting figure is assumed to be taxable income. The Court of Appeals emphasized (R. 3764) the statement in Bell v. United States, 185 F. 2d 302 (CA 4) certiorari denied, 340 U.S. 930, that the net-worth method "by its very nature (it) is an approximation." This should require all the more care in the use of the method, lest improper conclusions be drawn from it. Cf. Thomas A. Talley v. Commissioner, Docket Nos. 33140, 33141, 20 T.C. No. 101, June 30, 1953.

COPY BOUND CLO

It is well settled that in a net worth case "the starting point must be based upon a solid foundation" (United States v. Chapman, 168 F. 2d 997, 1001 (CA 7)). No prima facie case is established unless it is clear that the net worth at the beginning of the indictment period accurately reflects the defendant's total assets. Infirmities in net-worth computations are matters for the court to determine, not the jury. (United States v. Venuto, 182 F. 2d 519, 523 (CA 3)). Accounting testimony in this record supports the necessity for an accurate starting figure (R. 1259, 3292-3). The reason is plain. New assets indicate the receipt of income; but assets are not really "new" if acquired with cash on hand at the beginning of the year, or in exchange for other assets. Accordingly, where the starting point net worth is not established, the source of apparently new assets is in doubt, and the assumption that the difference in net worth represents income, may not be made. Without that assumption, the net-worth computation is meaningless because no reasonable mind could conclude that it was evidence of the receipt of income in the taxable year.

The prosecution introduced in evidence a computation of net worth made by a Revenue agent (Ex. 183, R. 3612). Line 25 is marked "Cash in Safe Deposit Boxes" but no figures are shown which affect the computation. Instead of figures, the column listing the assets for each year shows an interrogation mark. The exhibit was prepared in that manner on instructions from Government counsel (R. 2878). The prosecution showed by its own witness that the petitioner held cash in safes and deposit boxes at all times (R. 1268, 1484, 1535, 1536, 2956). There was no evidence to the contrary but neither was there any evidence as to the exact amount of the cash on December 31, 1943. There was evidence that a check in the amount of $17,739.50 was cashed on December 3, 1943, and the proceeds placed in a safe deposit box (R. 1483-4); that the cash in the box varied every day and that there were, in addition, two safes where money was kept. A third safe, mentioned in the evidence, affects an enterprise which came into existence during the year 1945.

Petitioner objected to the introduction of Ex. 183 (R. 515-538, 2856-2857) and moved for a judgment of acquittal on the ground that the use of the net-worth method was not available to the prosecution because of lack of evidence as to the starting point (R. 3477). The instructions to the jury on the point were inadequate (R. 136-138) and the petitioner's request for other instructions was denied (R. 79-83).

On a review of this evidence, together with evidence that petitioner did not pay a 1938 judgment of $1800 until 1945, the Court of Appeals sanctioned the use of the net-worth method in this case and declined to follow the decisions in the Bryan and Fenwick cases (R. 3766). The District Judge expressed the opinion that those cases are ridiculous (R. 2969). It is apparent that both courts below missed the significance of the starting figure (R. 2880-1, 2964).

The Court of Appeals expressed the view (R. 3765) that the Government would be frustrated in its attempt to enforce the tax evasion provisions of the Internal Revenue Code if net-worth cases were withdrawn from juries because of mere statements that defendants had additional undisclosed assets (R. 3765). However, that is not the situation here because the existence of cash in some unknown amount was not open to question. The testimony regarding the existence of the cash was produced by a prosecution witness (R. 1483-4); there was no evidence to the contrary and there is thus virtual agreement that a cash asset in some amount existed. Line 25 of Ex. 183 shows Government recognition of the existence of the asset. The suggestion of the Court of Appeals that the unpaid $1800 judgment outstanding on the critical date tended to show that petitioner did not have any substantial amount of cash overlooks the cash in bank shown by Ex. 163 (R. 3589) and Ex. 169 (R. 3601) in the amount of $8,425.51 as of December 31, 1943.

Moreover, this reluctance of the Court of Appeals to require the Government to prove its case undermines the principle that the Government has the burden of proof and it shifts to defendants the obligation to show the amount of starting-point cash. The Internal Revenue Code does not require taxpayers to keep records on a net-worth basis and they are ordinarily no better prepared than the Government to produce evidence of their cash position after a lapse of several years. Here there can be no doubt that petitioner habitually kept considerable amounts of cash outside of the banks. That is not speculation; it was established as a part of the Government's case. The practice of holding considerable cash outside of banks was not unusual in the light of the nature of the enterprises. We submit that petitioner is entitled to be tried and judged under the traditional principles generally applicable in courts of criminal justice and that, since the Government did not make a prima facie showing, it was not entitled to submit the case to the jury.

It is quite evident that there is a lack of understanding in the courts of the fundamentals underlying the net-worth method of showing receipts of taxable income in specified years and that the guidance of this Court is required to secure uniformity.

2. Commissioner's Authority to Depart from Taxpayer's Method of Accounting.

In approving the Government's use of the net-worth method for all of petitioner's enterprises, the Court of Appeals has decided a frequently-recurring question of federal tax law and has reached a result which probably conflicts with an applicable decision of this Court. The Court of Appeals has misconstrued the term "method of accounting" and has permitted departure from the taxpayer's method upon a showing which this Court held to be insufficient in an analogous situation (R. 3762). Except for the B-R Smoke Shoppe, the evidence of inadequacies in petitioner's books amounted to no more than normal accounting errors (R. 2630-88, 2755, 2772). Section 41, Internal Revenue Code, permits taxpayers to select any method of accounting which properly reflects their income. The Commissioner's authority to select a different method is limited to situations where (1) no method of accounting has been regularly employed, or (2) the method employed does not clearly reflect the income. This does not mean that the Commissioner is free to disregard the "method" merely because the books contain errors. Thomas A. Talley v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket Nos. 33140, 33141, June 30, 1953, 20 T.C.—No. 101. Inaccuracies and delayed posting from original records are not uncommon occurrences, but they do not condemn the "method" and permit the Commissioner to select another.

BLURRED COPY

This was the authoritative interpretation of an earlier tax statute. The Revenue Act of 1916 permitted returns on the taxpayer's "basis of keeping accounts" and this Court held that the quoted language "refers to the general bookkeeping system followed by the taxpayer and not to the accuracy or propriety of mere individual items or entries upon the books." United States v. American Can Co., 280 U.S. 412. Accordingly, this Court held that where the Commissioner revalued inventories, disallowed an unauthorized mark-up, corrected the erroneous entries, and made reassessments in the amount of several million dollars, he did not reject the accrual basis upon which the returns were made, and that the cash basis could not be substituted.

Before taxpayers are subjected to criminal penalties based on the results of a method of accounting which they did not themselves employ and whose results they could not foresee, it would appear that if the courts are authorized to deal with the question at all[4] they should require a showing that the basic methods actually employed were inherently inadequate and not capable of producing correct results. Here the Government produced no evidence of the use of an accounting method which was basically inadequate or calculated to deceive, and we submit that the Court of Appeals erred in approving a departure from the method of accounting employed by the petitioner.

Moreover there was no sufficient showing that the petitioner's books and records were inadequate in the sense that they were incomplete or inaccurate. This necessarily follows because all of the books and records were not in evidence. A large quantity of petitioner's original records was in the possession of the Government, they were not introduced in evidence, and petitioner's attempts to reach them through a motion for discovery and a subpoena for production were unavailing. See Infra, pages 31-33.

The net-worth method is frequently employed by the Government in civil and criminal fraud cases (Montgomery v. United States, 203 F. 2d 887, 892 (CA 5)). Admittedly, it gives only an approximate result (R. 3764) and this Court should review the Government's policy in order to correct an apparent disregard of basic principles.

3. Relationship of Net-Worth Method to Basic Cash and Accrual Methods.

This Court has not previously considered the question whether the net-worth method of proving income is a permissible hybrid method of accounting. The Court of Appeals has indicated that the basic distinction between the cash and accrual methods of reflecting income is not applicable. With respect to the markers which represented accounts receivable (R. 1962, 1968), the Court of Appeals

[4] Section 41, I.R.C., provides that the Commissioner shall make the determination. He has determined deficiencies without departing from the method of accounting adopted by petitioner's enterprises. Tax Court Docket 23486 held that they were properly included as part of the assets of a business accounting on the cash basis, regardless of whether they should technically be treated as cash or accounts receivable (R. 3769). The Government's brief in the court below made the same statement (fn. 16, p. 68). Unless the net-worth method is an exception, this is a departure from the well-settled rule that income may be computed on either a cash or an accrual method, but not on a hybrid system. In Security Flour Mills Company v. Commissioner, 321 U.S. 281, this Court said: "We are of the opinion that the purpose of the language which Congress used [Secs. 41, 43, Revenue Act of 1943] was not to substitute, whenever in the discretion of an administrative officer or tribunal such a course would seem proper, a divided and inconsistent method of accounting not properly to be denominated either a cash or an accrual system."

Either the Court of Appeals recognized the net-worth method as a hybrid system or it has decided a Federal question in conflict with applicable decisions of this Court. The statement in the Government's brief below supports the first alternative. In either event, the supervisory authority of this Court should be exercised.

Accounts receivable are definitely accrual items. They may properly represent income only where the accrual method of accounting is employed. The net-worth method was employed here by the Government on the theory that the annual difference would represent income to a taxpayer on the cash basis. Accordingly, any asset which did not represent the investment of cash should have been omitted. Accounts receivable may not properly be regarded as income on the cash basis and their inclusion in Exhibit 183 was definitely prejudicial to the petitioner.

While Exhibit 183 (R. 3612) was a statement of assets, it was not a statement of asset values (R. 551) because the annual difference between asset values does not represent taxable income on any basis. With respect to items other than cash, it reflected cash outlays which had been made to procure or improve the assets on hand at the end of the year (R. 2555). See, for example, the item in Ex. 169, R. 3601, "Cost of Business Purchased from Sherwood." The markers are reflected in Item 2 of Ex. 183 as a portion of the assets computed for the B-R Smoke Shoppe on Ex. 169. Exhibit 169 shows an asset of cash on hand, of $20,000, which is identified as supported by Ex. 111-A, and by the testimony of prosecution witness Pritchett. The latter testified (R. 1949, 1962, 1968) that the cash on hand was $5,000 and that the other $15,000 was in markers which represented unpaid bets. Thus, it is clear that the markers were not assets which had been purchased by the expenditure of cash; instead, they represented the amount of credit which had been extended to customers; they were mere promises to pay, not cash. When markers were paid the cash on hand was increased (R. 1360). The markers differ from the loans shown in Ex. 183 (e.g. Item 13). While the latter represents promises to pay, they were not included in the Exhibit for that reason; rather they were included because they represented investments of cash during the year. The witness who prepared Ex. 183 testified that he included the markers at the direction of one of the prosecution attorneys (R. 2878).

This question vitally affects the year 1945. For that year the prosecution contended that petitioner understated income in the amount of the difference between the total income as shown by Ex. 183 and the amount of income reported. This difference was said to be $11,747.04 (R. 3613). Accordingly, it is clear that if the $15,000 represented by markers were eliminated from the computation, there would be no difference (understatement of income) whatever for the year 1945.

The net-worth method is frequently used by the Government in criminal tax cases. In United States v. Johnson, 319 U.S. 503, this Court approved of the use of such a method as "reinforcement" to evidence of unreported income from a specific source. Here, and in other cases, the net-worth method is the sole proof. It is important in the administration of criminal justice that this Court consider and settle the question whether the net-worth method (which is never used in income tax returns) is a permitted hybrid method, or whether, in employing it, the Government must adhere to the conventional cash and accrual systems.

4. Tests for Determining Liability for Criminal Penalties Where Government Disagrees with Taxpayer's Interpretation of Technical Statutory Provisions.

This case presents a question of far-reaching importance which has not heretofore been considered by this Court and which requires an authoritative answer It affects all of the technical questions of tax law which are embodied in the Internal Revenue Code and will determine whether laymen can be subjected to criminal penalties on the presumption that they have a clear and certain undertsanding of the law.

As shown by the statement of facts, petitioner's returns disclosed the receipt of income from various enterprises, and those enterprises filed partnership returns, disclosing that petitioner was liable for his share of the income. The Government contended that four of the partnerships should not be recognized for tax purposes and that petitioner was therefore liable to criminal penalties because he had not reported all of the income individually. This was the paramount issue.

The prosecution recognized two of the six enterprises as partnerships (21 Club and San Diego Social Club) (R. 893-4) and the jury failed to convict on the counts dealing with the year 1946, for which partnership returns were also filed. The written partnership agreements were drawn in 1946 but related back. The 186 Club was eliminated from the partnership issue because the Government recognized it as a corporation. Notwithstanding the uncertain legal status of the enterprises, petitioner has been found guilty of tax evasion on the presumption that he willfully and knowingly failed to report all of the income of the enterprises on his individual returns. The records of the Tax Court show that an official deficiency letter was issued on May 6, 1949, in which the 186 Club and all other enterprises were recognized as partnerships. Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No 23486.

The Court of Appeals held (R. 3768) that the tests of liability for partnership income laid down in Commissioner v. Culbertson, 377 U.S. 733, 742, were applicable and that the question was one of fact for the jury. The Culbertson case was a civil case and this Court held that the question was one of fact for the Tax Court, the experts.

Fact-finding tribunals in tax cases are at liberty to look beyond the formal evidences of title, etc. United States v. Cumberland Public Service Co., 338 U.S. 451, fn. 3. Permitting similar latitude to juries, and subjecting defendants to criminal penalties for reliance on formal documents, is a novel and dangerous extension of a policy adopted to give finality to the decisions of administrative agencies. Moreover, the Culbertson case was decided in 1949. Accordingly, it was not available to petitioner in 1945 and 1946, when he is alleged to have committed the offenses upon which he was convicted. But even if the tests applicable in civil cases are likewise to be applied in criminal cases, the tests are not sufficiently well understood that knowledge of the correct conclusion could safely be attributed to every layman.

The earlier cases in this field, Commissioner v. Tower, 327 U.S. 280, and Lusthaus v. Commissioner, 327 U.S. 293, were decided on February 21, 1946, about the time when the latest alleged offense of the petitioner occurred. These cases were rather widely misinterpreted by taxpayers and by the Courts (See Trapp v. Jones (W.D. Okla.) 87 Fed. Supp. 415; Spies, et al, v. United States, (N.D. Iowa), 84 Fed. Supp. 769). Even the Justices of this Court were not in agreement in the Culbertson case as to what tests should be applied, nor as to the proper conclusion to be drawn in that particular case. The decision did not completely clarify the situation and the courts have been flooded with litigation ever since. The proceedings following this Court's remand of the Culbertson case are illuminating. Both courts attempted to apply the Culbertson decision, but they reached different conclusions. The Tax Court decision rendered on the remand, 9 T.C.M. 647, was reversed by the Court of Appeals, 194 F. 2d 581 (CA 5). It is not an overstatement to say that the tests for determining the civil liability are still uncertain and it is a new departure in the law to hold a taxpayer liable for criminal penalties when he mistakenly claims that his income should be computed on the partnership basis The partnership issue was not included in the criminal case, Paysoff Tinkoff v. United States, 86 F. 2d 866, (CA 7), nor were fraud penalties asserted in Paysoff Tinkoff v. Commissioner, 120 F. 2d 564 (CA 7), which this Court referred to as evidencing a claim by Tinkoff which carried the partnership theory to the reductio ad absurdum: Culbertson v. Commissioner, supra, fn. 8.

The Senate Finance Committee report on H.R. 4473, Proposed Revenue Act of 1951, discloses the then current confusion with respect to the recognition of partnerships for tax purposes. In 1952, the Bureau of Internal Revenue published a ruling outlining the Bureau's position with respect to recognition of partnerships for years prior to 1951 Mim. 6767, Cumulative Bulletin 1952-1, p. 111. A current ruling states that "the term 'partnerships' for tax purposes is broader than the term under common law, the Uniform Partnership Act, or individual State laws." Rev. Rul. 144, Internal Revenue Bulletin No. 16, Aug. 3, 1953, p. 29. The Bureau of Internal Revenue has attempted to require some partnerships to file corporate returns on the theory that they are associations. (The Olmsted Hotel v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket 28375, 11 T.C.M. 694.) Recent decisions of the Tax Court illustrate that some doubtful partnerships are still recognized. In Frederick B. Hill, Jr. v. Commissioner, Docket No. 32356, 12 T.C.M. 757, the Tax Court recognized a limited partnership for tax purposes. All but one of the partners were related. The partners bought their interests from Hill and paid for their interests with notes. With one exception, none of the other partners was required to devote any time to the business. There was a written partnership agreement, but it was not recorded. Taxpayers are faced with a hard choice if they are liable to criminal prosecution when they persist in their claim to the right to file partnership returns.

COPY BOUND CL

Today the tax liability for partnership income is one of the most prolific sources of litigation. A recent analysis of cases on the Tax Court docket for the period November 8, 1951 to January 19, 1953, shows over one thousand disputes in the partnership field (1953 Commerce Clearing House, Par. 8637). In such cases the question usually is whether the taxpayer is correct in his conclusion that he is liable for only a portion of the partnership income. This is a criminal case, but if it presents only the same question as the civil cases, any of the taxpayers in the thousand Tax Court cases would likewise be liable to criminal prosecution. If it be the law that the civil tests are applicable in criminal cases, any taxpayer who claims to be a partner may be indicted if the Bureau disagrees. If the Government really believes that the same tests apply, the dearth of reported criminal cases is difficult to explain.

However, we submit that the question in a criminal case is not the same as in a civil case. The offense of tax evasion requires, first, a knowledge that certain omitted income should be included in the tax return. The question here is whether petitioner knew that he had not created a partnership (or a syndicate, pool, joint venture, etc.), and knowingly misrepresented that he had. Where, as here, a taxpayer joins with others in the conduct of certain enterprises, his liability to include all of the income in his individual return is so uncertain that there is no basis on which a jury could properly convict him of knowingly and willfully failing to report the entire partnership income with intent to defraud the revenue.

BLURRED COPY

In a recent civil case where the Commissioner asserted fraud penalties because of his refusal to recognize the taxpayer's claimed partnership, the Tax Court agreed that the partnership should not be recognized for tax purposes, but it declined to approve the fraud penalties even though it held, on the authority of the Culbertson decision (P. 903), that "the parties did not in good faith intend to become partners for the operation of the business." (C. C. Cooke v. Commissioner, 10 T.C.M. 881). The Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit reversed the Tax Court and held that for some of the years involved the partnership should be recognized, 203 F. 2d 258. It did not disturb the Tax Court decision with respect to the fraud penalties and apparently the Commissioner did not file any appeal on that issue. The Cooke case is presently pending in this Court on a petition for certiorari, Docket No. 77, October Term, 1953.

In the case at bar, the jury was instructed (R. 144) that "The important question is whether the parties, including the defendant, actually had the intent in good faith to join together in operating the business as partners." In the Cooke case, supra, the Tax Court held that such a finding will not support even a civil fraud penalty. The jury was also instructed that the partnership must serve a business purpose (R. 143), and the Court of Appeals agreed that the applicable tests include that concept (R. 3678). We submit that the Court of Appeals has sanctioned an erroneous test and has mistakenly applied the civil rule in a criminal case. In a field where even the civil liability is so uncertain, it would appear that a taxpayer with any basis for claiming a partnership should be free to persist in his claims until overruled by the courts, without subjecting himself to criminal prosecution. When "dealing with criminal sanctions in the complicated, technical field of the revenue law", United States v. Carroll, 345 U.S. 457, 460, there is no basis upon which a jury could properly find that a defendant had more knowledge in 1945 and 1946 than is possessed in 1953 by a multitude of taxpayers.

While the trial court covered the question of intent in a general charge (R. 134-5), the denial of petitioner's requested instructions Nos. 69, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 88, 89, and 90 (R. 73-79) left the jury free to determine the partnership issue by applying the civil rule.

A review of the case and of the policy of the Government in this field would be in the interest of taxpayers generally.

5. Practice Under Rules 16 and 17, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Matters of general importance are presented dealing with the practice under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, including the question whether the Court of Appeals has placed an unduly restrictive interpretation on them. The Court of Appeals has sanctioned the denial of petitioner's motion for a pre-trial inspection of his own records and has thus withheld from the petitioner the benefits of the "more liberal policy for the production, inspection, and use of the materials at the trial" which this Court has declared to be the purpose of Rules 16 and 17, Bowman Dairy Company v. United States, 341 U.S. 214, 218-220. Added significance is given to the denial of petitioner's motion by the circumstances which made the motion necessary and by the fact that an important issue in the case was whether petitioner's books and records were inadequate.

Despite the fact that Rule 16 authorizes a motion "at any time after the filing of the indictment", the Court of Appeals held that the motion was not timely. No weight was given to petitioner's unsuccessful attempts to secure the release from Federal lien of sufficient assets to finance his defense, (R. 22, 24), nor to the time consumed in unavailing efforts to arrange for inspection of the records without a court order (R. 21-34, 166), during which the Government made unwarranted and impossible demands as the price of its consent (R. 29-30, 41). The significance of the Government's maneuvering apparently was lost on both courts below. The Government sought a net worth statement (R. 38, 50-54), and a showing of petitioner's "interest" in the enterprises (R. 27, 30, 33, 166, 185). It recognized petitioner's need for the records by bargaining with him for evidence which would bolster the Government's case, making its conditions one at a time, and having driven petitioner to a last-resort motion for a court order, the Government took the position that petitioner did not really need the records and secured a denial of the motion on the ground that the trial date was only two weeks away. The trial lasted three months, petitioner made repeated efforts to have access (R. 928-9), and the records sought were actually in the court house (R. 2451, 3483-6). Under all the circumstances, it would appear that the time element should have been given no consideration, even if the Rule itself did not foreclose it.

The Court of Appeals also referred to the prior opportunities which the defense had been given to examine the records. But they were in connection with the civil liability and occurred before the time when petitioner's tax counsel was engaged (R. 22, 32). It would be reasonable to anticipate that an examination of the records under his direction would develop additional defense material. The probability of benefit to be derived from the tax attorney's supervision of an examination of the records is especially marked here in the light of the Government's reliance on the net-worth method. This but emphasizes the lack of any rational basis for the opinion of the Court of Appeals that petitioner could not benefit from further examination of the records (R. 3755-6). It also raises the question of the extent to which the Court has discretion under the Rule to override the defendant's judgment in such a situation.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

Since a prerequisite to the use by the Government of the net-worth method of proof is the lack of adequate business records of the defendant,[5] Sec. 41 I.R.C., (R. 3762), it seems plain that the suppression of a mass of original documents, of sufficient bulk to fill a packing box of approximately fifty cubic feet, plus several other smaller cartons (R. 48), was prejudicial to petitioner. Since the impressive quantity of records was in itself a matter of consequence, the rule was improperly interpreted by the Court of Appeals to require that the need for specific papers be shown (R. 3758). By denying the benefit of the rule here the District Court permitted the Government to withhold records and then submitted to the jury the issue of the inadequacy of the partial records in evidence. This travesty of justice was sanctioned by the Court of Appeals and its action violates the spirit of the rule as interpreted in the Bowman case, supra.

Petitioner also sought a subpoena for production of the records, which was quashed. The grounds for quashing subpoenas as set forth in Rule 17 are that compliance would be (a) unreasonable or (b) oppressive. There was no suggestion that the Government would have been hampered in any way and the Court of Appeals stated no grounds which are recognized by Rule 17.

Although evidencing some uncertainty as to the proper interpretation of the Bowman case, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has followed the "view which leads to the fullest presentation of facts." Frank Fryer v. United States, No. 11564, July 17, 1953. The Fryer case held that since the rule provides for modification of subpoenas to exclude unreasonable and oppressive demands, the Trial Court should not quash a subpoena in the absence of sound reasons for precluding pre-trial inspection. Tested by that interpretation, the court below has misconceived

[5] This is the interpretation of the Government and the court below. As pointed out supra pp. 21-23 their interpretation is probably incorrect.

BLURRED COPY

the purpose of the rule and has adopted, instead, an interpretation which is harsh and unduly restrictive.

The ruling of the court below cannot be reconciled with the decision in Gordon v. United States, 344 U.S. 414, where, in passing on the request of a defendant in a criminal case for the production of evidence tending to impeach a Government witness, this Court held, even in the absence of specific legislation, that (p. 420) "For production purposes, it need only appear that the evidence is relevant, competent, and outside of any exclusionary rule * * * ".

There is a divergence of opinion among the courts with respect to the teaching of the Bowman case and the superficial distinction made by the court below (R. 3757-8) seems to be out of harmony with the well-considered opinion in the Fryer case.

6. Presumption of Prejudice Where Outside Contact with the Jury Has Occurred.

An important question is presented involving serious aspects of federal criminal justice. The Court of Appeals approved the summary denial of petitioner's motion for a new trial and his request that the District Court hold a hearing on a reported instance of improper contact with the jury. The Court of Appeals held that petitioner had failed to show any prejudice (R. 3776-7). The record contained only petitioner's affidavit calling to the attention of the District Court the stories which had appeared in two newspapers (R. 111-120). In substance these articles reported that the foreman of the jury had received a suggestion that money might be paid him to influence the verdict, that the trial judge had caused an investigation to be made and had concluded that the incident was harmless. Petitioner's affidavit was filed promptly upon learning of the incident after the jury had returned its verdict. Petitioner's motion for a hearing to determine precisely what had occurred was denied (R. 93-94).

The record contains no official statement concerning the incident. The District Judge did not even comment on the petitioner's motion (R. 93-94). The Court of Appeals relied solely on the newspaper stories to answer petitioner's assignments of error and to determine whether petitioner had been prejudiced (R. 36-37). The Court of Appeals held that petitioner had the burden of showing prejudice before he could get a hearing. We submit that the court should have at least remanded the case for the purpose of holding a hearing for the record, and that the District Court should have been required to pass on the motion for new trial in the light of the evidence developed at the hearing. Only by such orderly procedure could a satisfactory record be made. We submit further that petitioner has been convicted by a jury which was evidently subjected to outside influence of a character calculated to affect its deliberations, and that the assertions of prejudice to the petitioner set forth in the affidavit (R. 112) were well taken.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLO

Whether investigation was actually made by the Federal Bureau of Investigation; whether its purpose was to ascertain the affect on the jury; whether one or more jurors were subjected to interrogation by the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation; whether the jurors were asked polite questions or were subjected to a grilling; whether any of the jurors was apprehensive of being suspected and criticized should he vote for a verdict favorable to the petitioner; the identity of the third party who supposedly communicated with the juror; the full conversation between them; what took place at the supposed conference between the juror and the trial judge; what took place between the trial judge, the juror, and the prosecuting attorney; what took place between the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the prosecuting attorneys; what the juror supposed to have been contacted communicated to his fellow jurors—none of this information is contained in the record, and petitioner was denied an opportunity to ascertain it.

Whether the newspaper stories were complete or accurate was unknown to the Court of Appeals and its casual disposition of the matter is in sharp contrast to the serious view of such incidents customarily taken by the Courts.

On this barren record, the question is whether a District Judge is authorized to make an off-the-record examination of such an occurrence and leave no basis for an appellate court to form a judgment of the propriety of his action. In Ryan v. United States, 191 Fed. 2d. 799 (C.A. D.C.) the record showed that several jurors and other witnesses were examined and cross-examined. The Court of Appeals approved this procedure and said, p. 781, "the trial court adopted the appropriate procedure of probing the matter by an extensive hearing." Here there is no such record and the District Court declined to hold a reported hearing.

As stated, the denial of petitioner's motion for hearing was approved by the Court of Appeals on the ground that petitioner had failed to show any prejudice. When the District Court learned of the incident, he recognized that he had a duty to cause an examination to be made; he did not wait for anybody to show prejudice. Outside contacts with a jury raise a presumption of prejudice, Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 150, and the cases hold that the presumption can be overcome only by affirmatively showing that there was no prejudice. Stone v. United States, 113 Fed. 2d. 70, 77-78 (CA 6); Little v. United States, 73 Fed. 2d. 861 (CA 10); Wheaton v. United States, 133 Fed. 2d. 522 (CA 8).

If the newspaper articles are reliable (and that is the evidence upon which the Court of Appeals held there was no prejudice) the district judge already knew that a juror had been contacted, and the court had concluded for itself that the contact was harmless. Alternate jurors were available, but the contacted juror was not withdrawn. The defense had been excluded from the investigation and was entitled to have the aid of the court in adducing the facts for the record. Under the circumstances the Court of Appeals' reliance on the lack of affidavits from jurors was an insufficient basis for approving the action of the District Court, and transferred to the defense a burden which it is not required to bear.

The action of the Court of Appeals ignores the presumption of prejudice which arises upon a mere showing of outside influence on the jury, and leaves to a single district judge the authority to exclude the defense from any part in the investigation and personally make a final decision which reflects only his own judgment, with no opportunity for either the defense or a reviewing court independently to appraise the situation. This Court should determine whether such a procedure is calculated to safeguard the integrity of the jury system and to preserve the constitutional right to a fair and impartial trial.

For the foregoing reasons, it is respectfully submitted that this petition for writ of certiorari should be granted.

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

On Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

---

REPLY BRIEF FOR THE PETITIONER

To the Honorable, the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

The purpose of this brief is to inform the Court of some recent developments, to comment on the Brief in Opposition and to supply some additional authorities.

ARGUMENT

1. Additional conflicts have arisen with respect to the necessity for establishing the net worth at the beginning of the indictment period (Petition, pp. 17-21).

BLURRED COPY

LOSE IN CENTER

Although not considering a net worth case at the time, the Third Circuit has added its endorsement to the views on that subject expressed by the Fifth and Seventh Circuits in Bryan v. United States, 175 F. 2d 223, and United States v. Fenwick, 177 F. 2d 488.

In United States v. George L. Smith, 206 F. 2d 905, the court agreed that no conviction could be countenanced where the prosecution failed to establish the net worth at the beginning of the period and added (p. 911):

> We think it part of the Government's prima facie case to establish, at least, that what it charges against defendant is income for the year involved. It has not established its prima facie case by showing that defendant had some money and then asking the jury to infer that that money is "income" for the year involved.

In addition to a conflict between circuits, there is also a difference of opinion among the individual judges of the court below. In Calderon v. United States, decided October 9, 1953, not yet reported, 53-2 CCH 9579, where the bench consisted of Judges Denman, Healy and Bone, the Bryan and Fenwick cases were cited with approval. Referring to net-worth statements, the court said:

> Absent such a starting item as, say, cash on hand the remainder of the statement proves nothing.

The Tax Court also has announced its approval of the views of the Fifth and Seventh Circuits and has declined to sustain fraud penalties in a net worth case where the Government's computations failed to take into account cash savings from earlier years. King Tsak Kwong v. Commissioner, Docket 27019, October 7, 1953, CCH Decision 19,924(M). The Tax Court pointed out that:

> Expenditures and increase in bank balances do not necessarily prove the existence of current income as long as the hypothesis exists that both might have been from sources other than current income.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

These recent decisions give added emphasis to the need for the guidance of this Court in order that there may be a uniform understanding and a consistent practice in the application of the judicial process in net-worth cases, which now play so important a part in tax litigation.

Respondent seeks to distinguish the Bryan and Fenwick cases on the ground that each involved a defective investigation and that the Government was forced to admit that there might well be assets which it had not discovered (B.Op. 24). There is no basis for the suggested distinction.

Here the undisputed evidence showed that there was cash on hand December 31, 1943;[1] the only question was the amount. The Government could not determine it and there was no basis upon which the jury could do better. Accordingly, no reasonable mind could conclude that the amount was insufficient to throw the Government's net-worth computation substantially out of line (B.Op. 22). Respondent's suggestion that the Government's exhaustive investigation, though fruitless, together with petitioner's unwillingness to give assistance, could somehow serve to take the place of the missing evidence, is incompatible with the well-settled principles that the Government has the burden of producing the evidence and that a defendant's failure to testify is without significance. The jury was so charged (R. 132, 152). The net-worth computation conceded the existence of cash and the Government's inability to determine the amount (R. 3613). Thus, this case differs in no substantial respect from the Bryan and Fenwick cases.

2. With respect to the method of accounting to be employed, the circumstances under which the taxpayer's method may be departed from, and where the authority lies to determine that a departure is necessary (Pet. 21-23), respondent is driven to the contention (fn. 7, B.Op. 25) that Sec. 41, Internal Revenue Code, has no application to criminal cases. The court below held otherwise (R. 3762).

[1] It was on hand, even if held in storage only overnight (B.Op. 22, fn. 5).

BLURRED COPY

OSE IN CENTER

Until the respondent's brief was filed, it had been generally accepted that the Government is forbidden to compute taxable income on any basis other than the method of accounting selected by the taxpayer, unless Section 41 is invoked to authorize a departure. The jury was so charged (R. 136-137). This new construction of Section 41 supports petitioner's contention that the intervention of this Court is required in order that it may be authoritatively determined whether taxpayers are subject to criminal prosecution for failure to report amounts of income disclosed by methods of computation which they did not themselves employ and whose results they could not forsee.

This Court has held that the selection of a method by the taxpayer in his return constitutes an election which binds both him and the Commissioner. Pacific National Company v. Welch, 304 U.S. 191. The Court further emphasized that the selected method must be adhered to if it is capable of producing correct results. The Court said:

> While petitioner's return may have been an inept application of the deferred payment method, there is nothing in it or the statement of claim for refund that gives any support to the idea that, if rightly applied, that method would not clearly reflect income. (Italics supplied)

The Treasury Regulations have adopted a definition of "method of accounting" which, while not wholly consistent with United States v. American Can Company, 280 U.S. 412 (Pet. 22), nevertheless demonstrates that the courts below erred in approving a departure from the taxpayer's method upon evidence which dealt with the details of bookkeeping rather than the basic method. Treasury Regulations 111, Section 29.41-2, page 254, states:

> A taxpayer who changes the method of accounting employed in keeping his books shall, before computing his income upon such new method for purposes of taxation, secure the consent of the Commissioner. For the purposes of this section, a change in the method of > accounting employed in keeping books means any change in the accounting treatment of items of income or deductions, such as a change from cash receipts and disbursements method to the accrual method, or vice versa; a change involving the basis of valuation employed in the computation of inventories (see sections 29.22(c)-1 to 29.22(c)-8, inclusive); a change from the cash or accrual method to the long-term contract method, or vice versa; a change in the long-term contract method from the percentage of completion basis to the completed contract basis, or vice versa (see section 29.42-4); or a change involving the adoption of, or a change in the use of, any other specialized basis of computing net income such as the crop basis (see sections 29.22(a)-7 and 29.23(a)-11).

The Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has held that under Sec. 41, Internal Revenue Code, the only question for the courts is whether the Commissioner has abused his discretion. In Schramm—Receiver of First National Bank, Detroit v. United States, 118 F. 2d 541, the court said:

> This is an administrative problem left by the statute to be determined "in the opinion of the Commissioner", Lucas v. Kansas City Structural Steel Company, 281 U.S. 264. That official has a broad administrative discretion in determining the question and it is beyond the power of the courts to overturn his decision unless the evidence clearly shows that he has abused his discretion.

This view of the proper application of Sec. 41, Internal Revenue Code, is in sharp contrast with the procedure in the case at bar, where the jury, instead of the Commissioner, was permitted to determine the propriety of departing from the taxpayer's method of accounting by deciding the false issue whether the books were adequate (R. 137). In Remmer v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket 23486 (Pet. p. 23, fn. 4) it appears that the Commissioner found no reason to depart from the petitioner's method of accounting. But his subordinates have in effect overruled him by inducing the jury to reach a contrary conclusion, in disregard of the statutory mandate that the Commissioner's discretion is decisive.

Respondent's reply to petitioner's complaint that it was a travesty of justice to withhold a large quantity of records and then submit to the jury the question whether the records in evidence were adequate (Pet. 33), is that the objection is "patently insubstantial" (B.Op. 26). This casual treatment of an outrageous procedure is not calculated to create public confidence in the administration of justice.

The need for education of the personnel of the Internal Revenue Service (formerly the Bureau of Internal Revenue) in the proper application of the net-worth method of accounting is now officially recognized. The report dated September 25, 1953, of a Hearing Before the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation on Reorganization of the Internal Revenue Service, contains the following statements by the Commissioner (pp. 17-18):

> Mr. ANDREWS. * * * Now, then, let me tell you, and I am glad you mentioned the net-worth method. In the first place, gentlemen, this method is based upon an accounting technique which is one of the most difficult of all techniques, although to a person experienced in the handling of it, it is really not anything more than a simple procedure. Our difficulty has been—and when I say "our," I mean the service—that the net-worth theory was adopted without, in my opinion, a proper instruction to those who have to apply it, of how to use it.
>
> Representative DINGELL. They said you just count figures and never mind using your brains.
>
> Mr. ANDREWS. We propose to send out a manual to include in our training, which is an up-to-date discourse on how to use the net-worth theory. It is a good technique if it is properly used.

* * * * * * *

(pp. 22-23):

> Mr. ANDREWS. Congressman, let me say this to you: I am not at all happy about the situation as regards the assertion of fraud charges and fraud penalties. There is, as you know, a distinction between criminal fraud and civil fraud. I am told, and if I am wrong in this distinction Mr. Tuttle can straighten me out, that you assert fraud charges, criminal fraud charges when the preponderance of evidence is enough to give you an indictment before the grand jury. If you assert civil fraud, you do that when there is doubt that you can carry it that far.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

Now, I am worried about that last part because I am afraid, very frankly, that there may have been an awful lot of citizens in this country who have been slapped with a civil fraud penalty without complete study.

3. Respondent's reply to petitioner's objection to the inclusion of the markers as cash in Exhibit 183 (Pet. 23-25) is an attempt to show that some undetermined portion was not accounts receivable (B.Op. 28). However, the court below understood that the markers were accounts receivable, and nevertheless held they were properly included as cash items (R. 3769). Since respondent does not attempt to support the use of the hybrid method sanctioned by the court below, it would appear that respondent recognizes the validity of petitioner's assignment of error No. 6, (Pet. 17).

4. With respect to the need for additional detailed instructions to the jury in criminal prosecutions where the offense charged is based upon erroneous interpretation of technical statutory provisions (Petition 26-31), it is pertinent to note that even in civil cases the courts with consistent uniformity have declined to sustain penalties where the liability was unclear or was in doubt at the time of the alleged offenses:

J. B. Jemison v. Commissioner, 45 F. 2d 4 (CA 5);
Rogers Recreation Co. of Conn. v. Commissioner, 103 F. 2d 780 (CA 2);
Bronson v. Commissioner, 183 F. 2d 529 (CA 2);
Wm. E. Mitchell v. Commissioner, 45 BTA 822, 118 F. 2d 308 (CA 5);
Kellett v. Commissioner, 5 T.C. 608;

BLURRED COPY

Jarvis v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket No. 5126, May 28, 1946, 5 T.C.M. 459;
Kesterson Lumber Corp. v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket No. 127, May 9, 1944, 3 T.C.M. 432;
United States v. The Bank of Powers, et al, June 22, 1939, Not officially reported, (DC Ore), 39-2 U.S.T.C. 9665;
Charles C. Rice v. Commissioner, 14 T.C. 503;
Joseph H. Imeson v. Commissioner, 14 T.C. 1151;
Idus A. Inglis v. Commissioner, 14 T.C. 1448;
Dale R. Fulton v. Commissioner, 14 T.C. 1453;
Joe H. Bartling v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket Nos. 18905, 19886, June 6, 1950, 9 T.C.M. 458.

To ask a jury to form a rational conclusion with respect to whether petitioner had any basis for claiming his enterprises were partnerships, with only general instructions as a guide (R. 142, 143-144) was to invite a miscarriage of justice. Moreover, it is beyond the capacity of the average jury to pass intelligently on such questions as whether the net-worth method should be used, whether the computation was meaningless in the absence of a firm starting point, or whether the treatment of the markers as cash was permissible. Here the instructions were so general (R. 136-7; R. 147-8; R. 145) that it is doubtful whether the jury even realized that it was supposed to decide these questions.

Respondent does not attempt to support the application of the 1949 rule of Commissioner v. Culbertson, 337 U.S. 733, in a criminal case involving prior years. The statement (B.Op. 29) that petitioner himself sought the application of the Culbertson rule is directly opposed to the Government's brief in the court below, which asserted (pp. 71-72) that the instructions requested by petitioner were properly rejected because they "fail to include the test laid down in that case for determining such fact". The jury did not have the benefit of the concession now made (B.Op. 30) that a failure of the agreement between associates to actually create a partnership status may well be with no tinge of criminal intent and the court below was persuaded to affirm the conviction on the authority of the Culbertson case. Respondent regards the joint conduct of an enterprise under an agreement which is insufficient to create a partnership status as a "nominal partnership" and confuses tax avoidance with tax evasion (B.Op. 30-31).

The Tax Court has recently held that Commissioner v. Culbertson, 337 U.S. 733, effected such a change in the tax law dealing with partnerships that the court would not recognize an earlier decision as res judicata. Joe Lynch v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket No. 24859, 20 T.C. — No. 146, September 23, 1953, CCH Decision 19,901. An excerpt from the Commissioner's brief, quoted in the dissenting opinion, contended that "These cases altered the law governing the validity of family partnerships for tax purposes". The Lynch decision emphasizes the uncertain tax status of partnership enterprises, and the validity of petitioner's complaint that he was tried and convicted on the basis of a rule which was not in effect at the time of the alleged offenses. The Government was recognizing the partnerships in a civil proceeding at the same time it sought criminal penalties here (Pet. 27). Thus, the Commissioner's subordinates secured petitioner's conviction for making fraudulent claims, although the Commissioner recognized them as valid. We submit that petitioner is the victim of dubious administrative conduct and that the public interest requires the intervention of this Court.

5. Respondent supports the rulings of the trial court on the motions under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure on the ground that petitioner's accountant had had ample opportunity to inspect the records and that the last-minute request was unreasonable (B.Op. 32). Thus, respondent assumes that the Government's maneuvering did not contribute to the delay and ignores the fact that petitioner was repeatedly denied access to the records although they were readily available throughout the three months' trial (Pet. 32).

BLURRED COPY

OSE IN CENTER

Respondent insists that the trial court has a large measure of discretion (B.Op. 31). In Fryer v. United States, (CA DC), July 7, 1953, now pending on the Government's petition for certiorari, Docket No. 311, the Government asserts (Fryer Pet. 10-11) that the need for limited disclosures is to withhold evidence which may be a surprise and thus prevent perjury, subornation, and an opportunity to manufacture evidence. If that is the purpose of giving the trial court large discretion, it is not apparent why the rule should receive a niggardly construction where, as here, petitioner was seeking records of enterprises which the Government asserted were wholly owned by him.

Respondent's further assertion that petitioner has not been able to show that the rulings were prejudicial (B.Op. 33) disregards the issue of inadequacy of records and the probable affect on the jury of a disclosure that petitioner's books were supplemented by a mass of original documents (Pet. 33).

The principal pertinency of the Fryer case here is that the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia gave to Bowman Dairy Company v. United States, 341 U.S. 214, a construction which was in marked contrast to the construction adopted by the court below (R. 3757). The court below was guided by the bare decision in the Bowman case, while the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia gave heed to the reasoning of the Bowman case. The court below stressed the purpose of the rule to expedite trials, while the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia was more impressed with the purpose to achieve a fair balance between the Government and the accused so as to bring about fairness in the administration of criminal proceedings. The Government's petition in the Fryer case apparently agrees that the latter is the dominant purpose (Fryer Pet. 10).

6. With respect to the question of prejudice arising from outside contact with the jury (Pet. 34-37), respondent now contends (B.Op. 34) that there was no proof "that there had in fact been the necessary outside contact with a juror."

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLOS

This argument does not support the holding of the Court of Appeals to the effect that, assuming the actual contact, there was no showing of prejudice. Unless this Court intervenes, the precedent is established that outside contact is not presumptively prejudicial.

In the court below the fact of actual contact was accepted without question. The Government's brief in the court below stated, page 52:

> Thus, without even making an initial investigation of the facts, appellant, on the basis of pure speculation, was in effect asking the trial judge, who had first-hand knowledge of the events in question, to reconsider his conclusion that they had been "harmless".

It is pertinent to note that a similar question is now pending before this Court in A. Elwood North v. The State of Florida, No. 435. Here, as in that case, after the verdict petitioner learned for the first time that the jury had been subjected to outside influence. In both cases, the outside influence was of a character calculated to affect the deliberations of the jury. However, unlike the North case, no testimony was taken here on petitioner's motion for a new trial and the court below approved denial of the petitioner's motion without any record from which it could determine that no prejudice had occurred. In the North case, there was at least a proper judicial inquiry with a reviewable record. Here there was none.

We submit that the pendency of the North case is a further cogent reason for the granting of this petition.

7. The constitutional guaranty of due process of law loses much of its substance if the Government prosecutors misinterpret the law and thereby mislead the court and jury in a case dealing with criminal sanctions in the complicated, technical field of the revenue law. United States v. Carroll, 345 U.S. 457, 460. We submit that it is hopeless to expect the jury, without proper guidance, to comprehend the statutory provisions which are alleged to have been violated.

BLURRED COPY

LOSE IN CENTER

Both Rule 52(b), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and Rule 27 of this Court, provide that plain errors may be noticed, even though not assigned. Where, as here, the errors affect substantial rights, and present questions of dubious administrative conduct, it is not in the public interest for the court to ignore errors on the ground they were not assigned below, where they are obvious and seriously affect the fairness, integrity or public reputation of judicial proceedings. Johnson v. United States, 318 U.S. 189; Simmons v. United States, 206 F. 2d 427 (CA DC).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing additional reasons, it is respectfully submitted that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

No. 304

ELMER F. REMMER, Petitioner,

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

---

BRIEF FOR PETITIONER

OPINIONS BELOW

The District Court wrote no Opinion. The Opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3748-3777) is reported in 205 F. 2d 277.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on May 28, 1953 (R. 3778). An order denying a petition for rehearing, rehearing en banc, and staying mandate was entered on June 30, 1953 (R. 3779). On July 17, 1953, an order was entered by Mr. Justice Clark, extending the time for filing a Petition for Writ of Certiorari to and including August 29, 1953 (R. 3781). The Petition was filed on August 28, 1953. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under Title 28, USC 1254. See also Rules 37(b)2 and 45(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Do mere errors in the taxpayer's books authorize the Commissioner to substitute another method of accounting?

2. Was the sufficiency of petitioner's accounting system a question for the jury?

3. Where all of the books and records are not in evidence, the court has denied petitioner's motion for discovery, and has quashed a subpoena requiring the Government to produce a mass of petitioner's original records, can a finding be made that petitioner did not keep adequate books which clearly reflect income, so as to permit a computation on the net-worth theory?

4. Where it is clear that a computation by the net-worth method has omitted an asset shown to have been in existence at the beginning of the indictment period, can any assumption be made that the difference between the net worth at the beginning of the year and the net worth at the end of the year represents taxable income received during the year?

5. Without that assumption, does a net-worth computation establish a prima facie case of unreported income?

6. In computing income by the net-worth method, must the traditional basic distinction between the cash and accrual methods of accounting be observed or is the net-worth method independent of conventional accounting concepts?

7. May accounts receivable be included in a computation of net-worth on the cash basis?

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLO

8. Does the defendant have the burden of establishing the amount of a cash item which has been omitted from the Government's net-worth computation?

9. Are the tests for determining whether partnerships will be recognized for the purpose of computing civil liability, equally applicable to the determination of liability for criminal penalties?

10. Are the tests used in civil cases so clear and certain that a defendant in a criminal case can properly be charged with knowledge in 1945 and 1946 of the development of the law in this field up to the year 1949?

11. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure, providing for a motion for discovery and inspection "at any time after the filing of the indictment", authorize the denial of the motion on the ground that it is not timely?

12. If timeliness is an element, does the Rule permit the time to be charged against the defendant where the Government has contributed to the delay?

13. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure authorize the court to substitute its judgment for the defendant's and to deny inspection of records on the ground that the court disagrees with the defendant's appraisal of the expected benefits?

14. Does Rule 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure require a showing of the specific need for individual papers?

15. In a case where there is no suggestion that compliance with the subpoena would have hampered the Government in any way, does Rule 17 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure permit the quashing of a subpoena for production of documentary evidence on the ground that the motion was not timely, that the production would not be beneficial to the defendant, and that the defendant had failed to show the need for specific papers?

16. Where outside contact with the jury is alleged to have occurred during the trial, is the defendant entitled to a hearing to determine the facts, and to a new trial if warranted by the facts, or may the District Judge, who is reported to have already made an investigation, unknown to petitioner, deny the motion without comment and make no official record of the occurrence?

STATUTES, RULES AND REGULATIONS INVOLVED

The pertinent statutes, rules and regulations are set forth in the Appendix, infra, pp. 49-56.

STATEMENT

Petitioner was convicted in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, upon an indictment under Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 USC 145 (b)), charging that petitioner willfully and knowingly attempted to defeat and evade income taxes for the years 1944 and 1945. The jury disagreed with respect to additional counts which involved the year 1946.

During the years 1944 and 1945, petitioner was in the gambling, cafe and food business (R. 1032, 1134, 1290). Petitioner and his wife filed separate returns. Each return showed the combined income and, on the community property basis, calculated a tax on one-half (R. 3519-3529). The returns of both petitioner and his wife disclosed income from the following enterprises (R. 3525, 3527-8):

San Diego Social Club and 21 Club
The 311 Club
The Menlo Club
110 Eddy Club
186 Day-Nite Club
186 Day-Nite Cigar Store

Corporate returns were filed for the 186 Club (Ex. 87-87A, R. 3541, 3551). (Ex. 88-88A, R. 3562, 3563). Partnership returns[1] were filed for the following enterprises:

21 Club (1944 return, R. 1077)
21 Club and San Diego Social Club (1945 return, R. 1076)
311 Club (1944 and 1945 returns, R. 1077)
110 Eddy (1944 return, Ex. 81, R. 3531)
110 Eddy (1945 return, Ex. 82, R. 3533)
186 Day-Nite Cigar Store (1944 return, Ex. 84, R. 3535)
186 Day-Nite Cigar Store (1945 return, Ex. 85, R. 3538)
[2] Menlo Club (1945 return, Ex. 89, R. 3576)

Each return showed that petitioner had an interest.

A partnership return for the year 1944 was also filed by the B-R Smoke Shoppe (Ex. 78, R. 3530). It showed that petitioner had a one-half interest and that his share of the income was $600. The witness, Lando, who was shown on the return as a partner of the B-R Smoke Shoppe, testified that 1945 was a loss year (R. 1330). See also R. 1965, 1968.

On the premise that some of the partnership books were incomplete, the income of all of the partnerships was recomputed by the prosecution on the theory that increases in net worth represented taxable income. This assumed that the partnerships were the individual enterprises of the petitioner, which was the principal issue in the case. If the partnerships were recognized and petitioner's individual books were adequate, the use of the net-worth method in a prosecution of petitioner as an individual would have raised other questions. A revenue agent testified that the 21 Club had a fairly complete set of records, consisting of a general ledger, journal, and cash receipts and disbursements (R. 1250). Witness Semenza testified as to the condition of the books (R. 3275, 3281, 3283-5, 3287, 3289, 3290, 3299, 3413, 3415, 3417, 3418) and concluded that they were adequate (R. 3432).

Although the prosecution's own case included uncontradicted evidence that varying amounts of cash were held in safes and deposit boxes throughout the years involved (R. 1268, 1484, 1535, 1536), the prosecution exhibit used in computing petitioner's net worth at the beginning of 1944, 1945 and 1946 showed no figures for cash outside the banks (Ex. 183, R. 3613). Witness Semenza testified that without that cash figure it was impossible to determine correct net worth (R. 3292-3). Two government witnesses reluctantly agreed (R. 2557-8, 2878-80). Government counsel instructed the accountant with respect to treatment of various items (R. 2870-78-81-85).

The prosecution computed the net worth of each partnership separately. For present purposes the Court is concerned only with the following four partnership enterprises:[3]

110 Eddy Street (Ex. 163, R. 3589)
Day-Nite Cigar Store (Ex. 164, R. 3593)
Menlo Club (Ex. 165, R. 3597)
B-R Smoke Shoppe (Ex. 169, R. 3601)

These computations were based on the petitioner's books and records and were merely a restatement of the results of the operations in a different accounting form. Some changes involved the capitalization of improvements instead of treating them as expenses (R. 1268, Ex. 165, 174), and the treatment of taxes as additions to costs instead of as expense items, Ex. 175. The prosecution did not rely on the discovery of any specific item of new income or any new source of income beyond those reported in the books or tax returns.

[3] The 186 Club was treated by the prosecution as a corporation and therefore no net worth figure representing its income was included in Ex. 183. The 186 Club occupied the back room of Day-Nite Cigar Store (R. 1425). It was bought in 1943 by Nealis and Kopstick (R. 1425), who later withdrew and were paid off (R. 1427). The prosecution recognized the partnership status of the 21 Club and San Diego Social Club (R. 2894). In Tax Court proceedings all enterprises are recognized as partnerships. Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No. 23486.

After calculating the net worth figures of the partnerships separately the figures were transferred to a composite exhibit showing the net worth computation for the petitioner and his wife (Ex. 183, R. 3612). This exhibit reflected the theory of the prosecution that all of the income of the enterprises should be allocated to petitioner. This was done upon instructions of the prosecuting attorney (R. 2870).

The amounts of partnership net worth, all of which was charged to petitioner in Ex. 183, are as follows:

	1944	1945
B-R Smoke Shoppe	$18,231.47	$23,344.66
Day-Nite Cigar Store	39,494.37	30,390.47
110 Eddy Club	39,998.52	44,321.40
Menlo Club		183,647.94
Total	$97,724.36	$281,704.47

In this manner the prosecution arrived at the conclusion that petitioner had understated his income as follows (Ex. 183, R. 3613):

	1944	1945
Total Income per Exhibit 183	$50,747.91	$71,065.40
Income Reported	19,000.00	59,318.36
Difference	31,474.91	11,747.04

The relationships between petitioner and his partners were evidenced by oral and written agreements. Prosecution witness, Kyne, had an interest in six different enterprises (R. 1493, 1496) including the four which are of present importance here. A written agreement between Kyne and petitioner concerning the Menlo Club was introduced as Government Exhibit 113, R. 3582. A similar written agreement was made with witness Maundrell (Ex. 130, R. 3585) and other partners. There was also a written agreement concerning the Transit Smoke Shoppe, a later enterprise (R. 1189, 1523). Kyne testified that the oral agreements were similar in nature.

The written agreements deal with two different kinds of interest: An immediate "working interest" in the profits (R. 338) and an "actual interest" in the assets to be acquired by credits of undrawn profits (R. 1509). Because petitioner financed the enterprises, the arrangement contemplated that the shares of the profits of the other partners would be credited to their capital accounts until such time as the accumulated credits equalled their shares of the original investment and that petitioner's capital would be withdrawn in the same proportion as the other partners' earned credits. Witness Semenza, an accountant, testified that this is the usual practice in partnerships of a similar nature (R. 3388, 3423, 3433). With respect to the Menlo Club, for example, the equities of the various partners were credited with their working interests and charged with their withdrawals (R. 1807-8). Maundrell withdrew from the enterprise in 1948 and received all but $1700.00 of his equity in cash (R. 1807-10). Other partners drew on their accounts from time to time (R. 1833-5). The tax returns showed the distributive share of each partner and defendant's Ex. M-1 contained summaries of the partners' accounts (R. 3632, 3637, 3642). No ledger accounts were set up for the B-R Smoke Shoppe; the profits were divided between the partners at the end of each year. The other enterprises maintained regular books, with complete and detailed records of receipts and disbursements on a daily basis. The ledger posting was not up-to-date, but could readily be made current from the original records (R. 3275).

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

Petitioner spent little time around any of the enterprises (R. 1494). The other partners were active in the business (R. 1323, 1494). Cavani and Turner ran the 110 Eddy Club; Lando ran the B-R Smoke Shoppe; Maundrell was office manager for the Menlo Club, card room, bar, and restaurant (and also supervised the Day-Nite Cigar Store in Kyne's absence). Nelso, Ditto, Fricker, and Turner, who were also partners in the Menlo Club, had supervision of the various shifts in the 24-hour operation conducted there (R. 1330, 1385).

Petitioner did not participate in keeping the books (R. 1494-5). Public accountants were employed for that purpose. Lando was well known in the sporting and racing fraternity and his contribution to the partnership was his knowledge of the game and his ability to make prices (R. 1322-3). Kyne's working interest in the 110 Eddy Club was for services (R. 1382). He was the real manager of all of the enterprises (R. 1494).

With respect to the partnership issue, the instructions to the jury were as follows:

Instruction No. 24, R. 142:

> Individuals carrying on business in partnership shall be liable for income tax only in their individual capacity. Partnerships as such are not subject to income tax, but are required to make returns of income.
>
> A partner in a partnership shall include in his individual net income his share of the net income or loss of the partnership. If he draws either more or less than his share, his income tax is nevertheless based on the share to which he is entitled under the partnership agreement.

Instruction No. 28, R. 143, 144:

> Certain businesses were described in the income tax returns in evidence as partnerships. The law does not prescribe any specific form of agreement as a requisite for partnership status. A partnership is an organization of two or more parties who have intended in good faith, and acting with a business purpose to join together in the present conduct of an enterprise. The arrangement between them may be either written or oral, and can be either an express or an implied agreement. It is not necessary that they contribute equal amounts of capital, or devote equal amounts of time to the business of the partnership, or have an equal share in the drawings, or have an equal right to draw money out of the business. The important question is whether the parties, including the defendant, actually had the intent in good faith to join together in operating the business as partners.

Petitioner's request for instructions dealing specifically with the "working interest" was denied (R. 83-4).

Proceedings Under Rules 16 and 17 of the Rules of Criminal Procdure.

The criminal indictment was filed on April 9, 1951 (R. 8). The case was set for trial on November 28, 1951 (R. 36). A motion for a bill of particulars was filed April 27, 1951, and denied June 15, 1951 (R. 10).

On November 13, 1951, petitioner filed a motion for a continuance (R. 16-17), and on November 14, 1951, a motion seeking a court order to inspect and take copies of certain books and records pursuant to the provisions of Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. The records sought were described as "The books of account, journals, ledgers, cash books, expense books, vouchers and other records maintained by, or pertaining to the income and expense of" several named enterprises and any others from which the Government contends petitioner received income as an owner during the years 1944, 1945 and 1946. Supporting affidavits were filed with the motions (R. 20-34).

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

They recited that the Government had placed liens against petitioner's funds; that a certified public accountant who had assisted the petitioner prior to the indictment had withdrawn because of petitioner's inability to compensate him for his services (R. 49); that petitioner's tax counsel had become associated with the case in March, 1951; that in September, 1951, a certified public accountant had finally been engaged; that access to the records had been denied by the Government after the indictment, and that the records covered by the motion were material to the preparation of the defense.

The Government filed an affidavit in opposition (R. 35-41). This affidavit recited that certain records had been procured by the Government from third parties. (At the trial the third parties were identified as certain other partners in the enterprises (R. 2122-2126)). The affidavit in opposition to the motion also recited that prior to the indictment certain of the records had been turned over to an accountant for his use in behalf of the petitioner; that the accountant had turned them over to one of the petitioner's attorneys who continued to hold them and that the accountant had been unable to return them to the Government in accordance with his agreement. These latter records were subsequently deposited with the Clerk of the Court, pursuant to an order of the Trial Judge, and made available to both parties during the trial (R. 928-929, 1151). Petitioner's motion covered a considerable quantity of original records such as adding machine tapes, bank statements, cancelled checks, dealers' daily reports, etc. (R. 48). These were never made available to petitioner during the trial (R. 2717, 2771, 3250), although they were actually in the court house (R. 2451, 3483-6).

Both of petitioner's motions were denied (R. 42, 3492). The Court of Appeals held that prior opportunities which had been afforded petitioner's representatives to examine the material were sufficient (R. 3755), that the motion to inspect and take copies was not timely (R. 3756), and that no specific showing of prejudice had been made (R. 3758).

BLURRED COPY

OSE IN CENTER

Pursuant to Rule 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, petitioner filed a motion on November 23, 1951, together with supporting affidavits filed November 26, 1951, and procured a subpoena (R. 46-7) for production and inspection of books, papers, documents and objects (R. 42-54). The prosecution filed a motion to quash the subpoena, based upon the earlier affidavit (R. 55-58). The petitioner's motion was denied and the motion of the prosecution was granted (R. 58). The Court of Appeals sanctioned the denial of petitioner's motion because of the circumstances discussed in connection with the motions under Rule 16 (R. 3757). The Court of Appeals did not hold that compliance with the subpoena would have hampered the Government in any way.

Improper Communication With Jury

The verdict of the jury was returned on February 22, 1952 (R. 88). On February 24, 1952, certain stories appeared in California newspapers to the effect that during the trial the District Judge had enlisted the aid of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate a remark made to one of the jurors at his home to the effect that money might be paid to the juror if he supported the defense (R. 114, 117). The defense had no prior knowledge of the incident (R. 112). A motion for new trial was filed on February 29, 1952 (R. 106) which included as Ground 17 (R. 109) the contention that the defendant had been substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by the incident. In addition, petitioner moved that there be a trial of the issue and that evidence be produced to adduce what had actually transpired. In support of Ground 17, an affidavit by petitioner's counsel was filed (R. 111) to which copies of the newspaper stories were attached. The affidavit alleged that the petitioner had been prejudiced by the incident and that the interests of justice required a trial of the issue (R. 112). The facts alleged in the affidavit were not challenged by opposing affidavits or by any remarks of the Trial Judge or the prosecuting attorneys. No hearing was held and no findings were made. The motion for new trial and the motion for a hearing for the purpose of developing the facts were denied without any comment (R. 93-94).

Treatment of Accounts Receivable as Cash

The evidence with respect to petitioner's taxable income on the net worth theory was summarized in prosecution Ex. 183 (R. 3612). Item 2 of that exhibit dealt with the B-R Smoke Shoppe and brought into the computation the results shown by Ex. 169 (R. 3601). The latter showed bank roll, cash on hand, at the end of 1945 to be $20,000. Exhibit 169 indicates that it was based on the testimony of Pritchett, a prosecution witness, and on Ex. 111-A. Pritchett testified (R. 1949) that the "cash" consisted of $15,000 of "markers" and only $5,000 in actual cash. The term "markers" was identified as meaning IOU's or Accounts Receivable which had not been paid (R. 1962, 1968). Pritchett's testimony dealt with the "markers" of customers and represented bets which had not been paid and which affected the business profits (R. 1965-1969). "Markers" representing the indebtedness of partners were considered as cash on settlements between the partners (R. 1734). Defendant's Exhibit M-1 omits the markers and shows cash on hand as $5,000 (R. 3628-9).

The only bank roll figure shown in Ex. 111-A was the amount as of January 1, 1943 (R. 2773). Exhibit 169 assumed, without any evidence to support it, that the bank roll remained the same at the end of 1943 and at the end of 1944 (R. 2773). Government witness Weaver testified that the result of his treatment of the markers was to increase the net worth of the business by $15,000 (R. 2781). He thought the markers represented cash advances, despite Pritchett's testimony (R. 2780). The Court of Appeals understood that the markers represented unpaid bets but held that they were properly treated as cash because of its belief that they were collectible (R. 3769).

BLURRED COPY

Weaver further testified that in preparing the net worth computation for the Menlo Club he had used "mostly" the cash receipts and disbursements method and that it was impossible to secure an accurate picture "by sticking to any one particular method specifically" (R. 2621). At another point Weaver testified that "there has actually arisen a sort of hybrid basis." (R. 2727).

SPECIFICATIONS OF ERROR

The Court of Appeals erred:

1. In holding that the tests for determining the recognition of a partnership for Federal income tax purposes as set forth in Commissioner v. Culbertson, 377 U.S. 733, are applicable in a criminal case, and that a failure of a defendant who has attempted to form partnerships to report all of the partnership income in his individual return is evidence of his willful intent to evade income taxes.

2. In not holding that the method of accounting employed by petitioner is capable of clearly reflecting the income; or in not holding that the applicable method of accounting and the defendant's true tax liability must be determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

3. In holding that the petitioner failed to keep adequate records which would clearly reflect income and that the net-worth method of proof was therefore permissible.

4. In holding that, despite the omission from a net-worth computation of a cash item which was known to exist at the beginning of the indictment period, the case could be submitted to the jury on the assumption that the difference between the opening net worth and the closing net worth represented taxable income received during the year.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

5. In holding that the defendant had the burden of establishing the amount of the omitted cash item.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

1. The tax returns involved were made on the basis of the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting. The Government elected to prove its case solely by a net-worth computation. The only authority for departing from the method adopted by the taxpayer is found in Section 41, Internal Revenue Code. That section authorizes the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to select a different method (1) where no method has been regularly employed or (2) where the method employed does not clearly reflect the income. The term "method of accounting" refers to the general bookkeeping system as distinguished from the detailed entries of individual items in the books. Accordingly, errors or other inaccuracies in the books are not sufficient to invoke the authority under Section 41. Resort to a different method requires a preliminary determination by the Commissioner that one of the two conditions specified in Section 41 prevails. There was no such determination by the Commissioner in this case.

2. Instead, the Government contended that a departure from the cash receipts and disbursements method was permissible because the taxpayer's books and records were inadequate in the sense that they were incomplete and inaccurate. The jury, instead of the Commissioner, was asked to determine the question of adequacy. We think that this construction of the statute is inadmissible and that the use of the net-worth method was not authorized.

However, even assuming that the Government's construction of the statute was correct, there was no sufficient showing of inadequacy here. All but one of the enterprises maintained regular books and there was no showing that the inadequacies could not be corrected from the original records. But all of the books and records were not in evidence and they were withheld from the petitioner despite his attempt to reach them through a motion for discovery and a subpoena for production. Entirely aside from the impropriety of submitting such a question to the jury, we submit that it could not properly make a determination of inadequate books under such circumstances. Moreover, it appears that in another proceeding the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has made a determination of petitioner's tax liability without departing from his method of accounting. We submit that this forecloses a departure from the taxpayer's method under Section 41.

3. Respondent's contention that the net-worth method is permissible as expert testimony, whether or not the preliminary determinations prescribed by Section 41, Internal Revenue Code, are made, necessarily assumes a construction of Section 145(b), Internal Revenue Code, which is quite inadmissible. That section must be read together with related sections and the offense for which it prescribes a penalty is the intentional failure to report the amount of tax imposed upon the true income, as shown by an official determination having the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. To construe Section 145(b) as authorizing criminal penalties upon the evidence of experts and in the absence of an official determination would raise serious questions concerning its validity.

4. But assuming, for the sake of argument, that the net-worth method was permissible, the computation offered in evidence by the Government was fatally defective in two respects. First, the starting point was not established. While the undisputed evidence showed that petitioner held cash at all times in safes and deposit boxes, the amount was unknown. Accordingly, the Government's computation gave him credit for none. With this gap in the proof, the assumption that new assets were acquired with new funds, which is essential to give meaning to the net-worth computation, could not be made. The Government had the burden of proof and could not shift to petitioner the obligation to produce affirmative evidence as to the amount of the starting cash.

5. Second, the Government's net-worth computation was erroneous because it included an amount of accounts receivable for the year 1945 which was in excess of the entire understatement of income charged to petitioner. The accounts receivable item consisted of promises to pay by customers who had lost bets. The Court of Appeals sanctioned the inclusion of the accounts receivable, apparently on the theory that the net-worth computation is a hybrid method and therefore it was not necessary to adhere to the cash receipts and disbursements method. Respondent does not attempt to support this theory, but argues that some unknown portion of the accounts receivable represented withdrawals by individual partners and was therefore properly included in the net-worth computation. The net-worth computation is, at best, an approximation, and the small understatement of income shown here leaves no room for inferences favorable to the prosecution after its failure to meet its burden of proof.

6. The paramount issue in this case was whether certain enterprises were partnerships as claimed by petitioner. The enterprises were jointly conducted with other individuals, who had real and substantial interests in the profits; the oral and written partnership agreements provided that the other partners would leave their profits in the business until such time as their credits equalled petitioner's capital contribution, which was to be reduced annually. The other partners contributed services.

BLURRED COPY

There was no evidence that the partnerships were a sham, but the Court of Appeals held that they could be disregarded under the rule of Commissioner v. Culbertson, 377 U.S. 733. That case was not decided until long after the taxable years here involved, and the recognition of partnerships is still a much litigated question. Accordingly, if the Culberston rule is to be applied, we submit that it is so uncertain that no layman can be assumed to know that his partnership will not be recognized. In such circumstances, criminal penalties may not be asserted.

Moreover, we submit that the question in a criminal case is not the question which the Culbertson case answers. The question here is not whether the partnerships should be recognized but whether they were unreal and a sham, so that petitioner knowingly and deliberately misrepresented their status when he claimed they were partnerships. The partners observed the agreements, built up their credits on the books, and withdrew some cash. In the absence of evidence that the partnerships were shams, no prima facie case was established.

7. Petitioner's motion under Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, to inspect and take copies of certain of his own records was denied, and a subpoena issued under Rule 17, seeking the production of the same records, was quashed. The Court of Appeals sanctioned a harsh interpretation of the rules on the reasoning that sufficient prior opportunities to examine the material had been afforded petitioner, that his motions were not timely, and that no specific showing of prejudice had been made.

The principal purpose of the rules was to bring about fairness in the administration of criminal procedures and since it appeared that the evidence sought was relevant and competent, and since no showing was made that the Government would have been hampered in any way, the motions should have been granted.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND C

8. After the return of the verdict, certain newspaper stories were brought to the attention of petitioner's counsel, which stated that during the trial a third party had made a remark to one of the jurors at his home, to the effect that money might be paid to the juror if he supported the defense; that the district judge caused an investigation to be made by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and had concluded that the incident was harmless. The defense had not been notified of the investigation and had no knowledge of the incident until the appearances of the stories in the press. Petitioner thereupon filed a motion for a new trial, together with a request that a full hearing be held in order to make a record of what had actually transpired.

The trial court denied the motion without comment and no hearing was held. Accordingly, the Court of Appeals relied solely on the newspaper stories to answer petitioner's assignments of error on this point and to determine whether petitioner had been prejudiced. That court held that petitioner was required to show prejudice before he could have a hearing. This is contrary to the general rule that outside contacts with a jury raise a presumption of prejudice and we submit that such an important matter may not safely and fairly be left to the sole discretion of the trial judge, with no record upon which the defense or a reviewing court can form its own judgment of whether the incident was prejudicial.

ARGUMENT

I

It Was Not Permissible to Use the Net-Worth Method of Computation and, in Any Event, It Did Not Establish a Prima Facie Case.

Sec. 41 Requires Inadequacy of Method

The tax returns here involved were filed on the basis of the cash method of accounting. The prosecution did not rely on the discovery of any specific item of new income or any new source of income beyond those reported in the books or tax returns. The Government concedes (B. Op. 2) that the proof was based upon a computation of the annual increase in net worth.

The only authority for the use of the net-worth method of computation in criminal cases is found in Sec. 41, Internal Revenue Code. That section permits taxpayers to select "any method of accounting" which properly reflects their income. The Commissioner's authority to select a different "method" is limited to situations where (1) no method of accounting has been regularly employed, or (2) the method employed does not clearly reflect the income. This does not mean that the Commissioner is free to disregard the "method" merely because the books contain errors. Thomas A. Talley v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket Nos. 33140, 33141, June 30, 1953, 20 T.C. , No. 101.

The meaning of the term "method of accounting" is not in doubt. As defined in the Treasury Regulations (Regulations 111, Sec. 29.41-2, p. 254) it means the basic system as distinguished from the detailed entries used in employing the system. The regulations include the following in the term:

Cash receipts and disbursements method
Accrual method
Basis of valuation employed in the computation of inventories
Long-term contract method

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND C

Percentage of completion basis
Completed contract basis
Crop basis.

The regulations are thus fairly consistent with this Court's construction of the term "basis of keeping accounts", which is found in the Revenue Act of 1916. In United States v. American Can Company, 280 U.S. 412, the quoted language was held to refer "to the general bookkeeping system followed by the taxpayer and not to the accuracy or propriety of mere individual items or entries upon the books." The taxpayer's selection of a method in his return constitutes an election which binds both him and the Commissioner and the selected method must be adhered to if it is capable of producing correct results. Pacific National Company v. Welch, 304 U.S. 191.

The Commissioner's authority under Section 41, Internal Revenue Code, gives him broad administrative discretion which is not reviewable by the courts in the absence of abuse. Schramm, Receiver of First National Bank, Detroit, v. United States, (CA 6) 118 F. 2d 541. Hence it would appear that Section 41 is never available without the Commissioner's authority.

In this case, there is no evidence that the Commissioner has made the preliminary determination required by Sec. 41 to the effect that the method selected by the petitioner is inadequate. Instead, the prosecution introduced evidence that the books were inadequate in the sense that they were incomplete or inaccurate. As shown by the American Can and Pacific National cases, supra, this is not a sufficient premise for the employment of the net-worth method.

Inadequacy of Books Not Shown

Moreover, aside from the erroneous premise, there was not a sufficient showing that the petitioner's books and records were inadequate. With one exception, all of the enterprises kept regular books and there was no showing that the inadequacies could not be supplied from the original records. A large quantity of petitioner's original records was in the possession of the Government, the records were not introduced in evidence, and petitioner's attempts to reach them through a motion for discovery and a subpoena for production were unavailing. See Infra, pp. 41-45. Thus, with only a portion of petitioner's books and records in evidence, the jury was asked to determine whether his books and records were adequate. The instructions were not specific (R. 136-7, 145, 147-8) and the jury could not properly exercise the Commissioner's authority and determine the question of inadequacy. Petitioner was grievously prejudiced by the entire proceeding, even assuming that the Government correctly construed the statute as permitting the use of the net-worth method where the books are merely inadequate.

BLURRED COPY

CLOSE IN CENTER

Respondent's Contention

In the Brief in Opposition, respondent contends in a footnote (fn. 7, B. Op. 25) that Section 41 has no application to criminal cases. This is a novel contention and is contrary to the decision of the court below (R. 3762). If the respondent means that the net-worth method of computation is not a "method of accounting" within the meaning of Section 41, then it is clear that the jury was improperly instructed otherwise (R. 136-7) and that the jury, the trial court and the Court of Appeals were misled into the belief that it was a method of accounting and into giving more weight to the computation than was justified. If the respondent means that the net-worth method of computation is admissible as expert testimony, and as the sole proof of the amount of tax due, without satisfying Sec. 41, then respondent must believe that Section 145(b) makes it a crime to file a return showing income in a smaller amount than some expert—any expert—testifies is due and owing. If upheld, such a contention would leave Section 145(b)

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

without any standard and make the crime it defines so uncertain that the validity of the statute would be brought into question.

However, we do not subscribe to the view that Congress has made it a crime to differ with the experts, and we do not agree that a prima facie case may be established by expert testimony alone. Section 145(b) must be read together with Sections 41, 51, 272 and 3612, Internal Revenue Code, and what it punishes is an attempted evasion of the tax on the true income, as shown by an official determination having the approval of the Commissioner.

Section 145(b), Internal Revenue Code, under which this prosecution arose, prescribes punishment for a willful attempt in any manner to evade and defeat "any tax imposed by this Chapter". Each count of the indictment (R. 3-8) charged an attempt to defeat and evade a large part of the income tax due and owing, stated in dollars. There is no statute which prescribes the dollar amount of petitioner's tax liability. Thus, the question is, How is "any tax imposed by this Chapter" to be translated into dollars? The complicated statutory provisions for ascertaining tax liability, which are supplemented by equally complicated administrative regulations, have given rise to endless disputes and litigation. The true tax liability is such a controversial question that administration of the law would have been impossible unless Congress had prescribed a definite method for determining the amount of "any tax imposed by this Chapter".

The question which Section 145(b) raises is resolved by the related sections. Section 41, Internal Revenue Code, provides that the net income "shall be computed" in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books, but that under certain circumstances the Commissioner may require that the computation be made in accordance with a different method. Section 51, Internal Revenue Code, provides that every individual subject to tax shall make a return, presumably in accordance with his books. Section 3612, Internal Revenue Code, provides that if any person makes a false and fraudulent return, then the Collector shall make a substitute return. Section 3612(c) provides that any substitute return made by the Collector and approved by the Commissioner "shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes." Section 3612, Internal Revenue Code, is made applicable to income taxes by Section 61, Internal Revenue Code.

Accordingly, it would seem to be clear that in a prosecution under Section 145(b) the amount of "tax imposed" which the defendant is charged with evading and defeating should be established by a substitute return made under the authority of Section 3612. The statute does not leave the amount of tax disclosed by the substitute return to the individual determination of the Collector; his determination is subject to the approval of the Commissioner. Thus, an attempt to defeat and evade a portion of the tax shown by a determination in the form of a return bearing the approval of the Commissioner is the offense for which Section 145(b) prescribes punishment.

No civil claim for a deficiency in income tax is authorized without the approval of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue (Sec. 272, Int. Rev. Code) and it is inconceivable that Congress would authorize a criminal prosecution without a similar supporting determination by the Commissioner. Possibly a deficiency determination under Section 272, satisfies the requirements of Section 3612. However, the statute clearly does not prescribe punishment for failing to return and pay the amount of tax computed to be due by a subordinate of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, under the domination of the chief Government prosecutor (R. 2869-2885), which was the situation in this case.

In lieu of the prescribed official determination, a net-worth computation prepared during the course of the trial by a technical advisor of the Bureau of Internal Revenue

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

(R. 2840) was relied on here (Ex. 183, R. 2852-3, 2856, 3612-13), and the same witness testified to the tax liability (R. 2860-2865). The jury was instructed to consider this as expert testimony (R. 147-8). The Government elected to treat the net-worth computation as a "method" and we submit that it was not permissible to use it without the sanction of the Commissioner, as required by the Internal Revenue Code.

The need for a strict adherence to the procedure prescribed for proving a defendant's tax liability is dramatically shown in this case by the fact that the Commissioner disagrees with his subordinate and with the theory on which the unofficial computation (Ex. 183) was based. The net-worth computation attributed all of the income from the various enterprises to the petitioner on the theory that they were his sole proprietorships and not partnerships as reported in the various tax returns (R. 2867, 2869). The Commissioner has repudiated this theory in an official deficiency letter which recognizes that petitioner is entitled to report only his individual share of the partnership income. An appeal from the Commissioner's determination in the deficiency letter is pending before the Tax Court. Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No. 23486. In the determination of the civil liability, the Commissioner did not depart from the petitioner's method of accounting. Thus, it is apparent that the finding of unacceptability of the taxpayer's method, which is a pre-requisite under Section 41, is not only completely lacking, but that such a finding is foreclosed by the deficiency letter, if the Schramm case, supra, is correct. Accordingly, the net-worth computation was unauthorized and the Government did not make out a prima facie case.

Moreover, the use of expert testimony to show the results of a net-worth computation as the sole proof to sustain a charge that a taxpayer using the cash basis of accounting has understated his income tax for a particular year involves a basic fallacy. It is obvious that different methods of accounting will produce different amounts of income, or at least will distribute the income differently throughout the taxable years. Accordingly, we submit that it is fallacious to assume that evidence of the income computed on a different basis than that actually employed by the taxpayer shows the income which he knew he was under a duty to report. The amount shown on any substitute basis is meaningless by itself and does not support an indictment under Section 145(b). This is particularly true of the net-worth method. A net-worth computation is evidence of the taxpayer's spending in particular years, but it does not purport to give any positive indication of whether the funds represent income, or when the income was derived. Those vital ingredients of a prima facie case are left entirely to assumption, and of course, the taxpayer could not have foreseen the result of the computation.

BLURRED COPY

The net-worth method may serve a limited purpose where there is other evidence indicating that the taxpayer had specific sources of income which he has failed to disclose. Such a use of the net-worth method as "reinforcement" was approved by the Court in United States v. Johnson, 319 U.S. 503. We submit, however, that the net-worth method was misapplied in this case. That view is consistent with a recent official statement of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Reference is respectfully made to the Reply Brief for Petitioner, pp. 6-7.

Starting Point

Furthermore, even if the situation warranted the use of the net-worth method, the computation (Ex. 183) was fatally defective because the net worth at the beginning of the indictment period was not definitely established.

The net-worth computation reflects known assets and cash outlays which have been made to procure or improve the assets on hand at the end of the year (R. 2555). All such cash outlays are treated as newly acquired assets. No attempt is made to identify the source of the funds used to make the outlays, nor the year in which the funds became available to the taxpayer. The year in which the outlay was made is assumed to be the year in which the funds became available. In this manner, a showing is made that at the beginning of each year the defendant's assets were worth a specific sum and that at the end of the year his assets were worth a greater sum. The difference is then adjusted for any funds received as gifts, loans, inheritances, etc., for taxes paid and for living expenses. The adjustment for gifts, loans, inheritances, etc. is a deduction, which is made only if the Government can find any such receipts. If the Government fails to find any gifts, loans, or inheritances, it assumes that there were none. The burden is then cast on the defendant to show that there were such items which the Government failed to discover. Taxes and living expenses are assumed to have been financed from receipts of the current year. After making the aforesaid adjustments, the resulting figure is assumed to be taxable income. The jury was so charged (R. 137-8). The year in which the outlays were made is thus assumed to identify the year in which the income was received. In Exhibit 183, all of these assumptions were made by the party having the burden of proof.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

The crudeness of the method and the assumptions which are required to be made in order to give any meaning to the results, have caused some judicial qualms about the propriety of submitting such evidence to juries. The senior circuit judge of the Fifth Circuit has recently pointed out that the proof of a criminal case by reliance on the net-worth method is fraught with danger of violation of the defendant's constitutional rights. In Demetree v. United States, decided November 24, 1953, not yet reported (See 53-2 U.S.T.C. 9646) the court said:

> This is another of the growing list of criminal cases in which the government, having no or little direct evidence of defendant's guilt to offer and endeavoring to prove it by circumstantial evidence, attempts to do so by what may be called the net worth and expenditures method of proof. In this attempt, unless the greatest care is taken by the district judge to prevent it, there is danger of the case being tried on a theory which, keeping to the ear the promise that a defendant is presumed innocent until his guilt is established beyond a reasonable doubt, breaks it to the hope by allowing a series of theoretical estimates and computations as to defendant's income to take the place of proof of it.

BLURRED COPY

CLOSE IN CENTER

Sometimes conclusions from those computations and estimates are allowed to invade the province of the jury and furnish the basis for a conviction not upon evidence of facts but upon speculation and theorizing by the government's witnesses as to what the facts really are.

Sometimes, without adhering to the essentials of the method, that the net worth at the beginning as well as the end of the period be shown, the proof comes in and the case is submitted with a complete gap in the proof as to the beginning of the period.

This kind of latitudinous allowance of the admission and use of conclusions as evidence and the submission of the case to the jury without a scrupulous adherence to the theory has resulted in a tendency to accept, if not in the complete acceptance of, the idea that in a case tried by this method, ordinary rules of proof may be relaxed if not disregarded. Further and more prejudicial to a defendant, there has grown up a kind of ancillary theory that the government by introducing proof of deposits, expenditures, etc., having put up what it calls a prima facie case, the defendant finds himself jockeyed out of the position the law affords him, of insisting that the government establish his guilt by legal and credible evidence beyond a reasonable doubt. This is accomplished by requiring him to prove himself innocent by assuming the burden of overcoming the prejudicial effect of the mass of exhibits, estimates, conjectures, and conclusions which the government has been allowed to get into the record, upon the apparent theory that it is up to the defendant to explain all of it away as part of his burden to prove his innocence.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

This court and other courts have, in many cases,[2] pointed out the dangers attending trials conducted in this way. Some of them have at times seemed to be more concerned with easing the difficulties attending the proof of guilt by this method than with preserving unimpaired the constitutional rights of a defendant, the fundamental safeguards and guarantees of his liberty. Most of the courts, however, confronted with the situation which this kind of case presents, have withstood all attacks upon, and have held fast to, constitutional principles, including the fundamental premise upon which criminal trials proceed, that the defendant is presumed innocent until his guilt is established by legal and admissible evidence beyond a reasonable doubt.

Cf. U.S. v. Johnson, 319 U.S. 503 (43-1 USTC Par. 9470).

The courts have been particularly zealous to insist that the starting point in a net-worth computation must be based upon a solid foundation. United States v. Chapman, 168 F. 2d 977, 1001 (CA 7); United States v. George L. Smith, 206 F. 2d 905 (CA 3); Bryan v. United States, 175 F. 2d 223 (CA 5); United States v. Fenwick, 177 F. 2d 488 (CA 7).

In the Bryan and Fenwick cases, supra, it was held that where the prosecution attempts to establish an understatement of income by the net-worth method, the case should not be submitted to the jury if the starting point net worth is not definitely established because the evidence is not sufficient to make out a prima facie case. These cases were recently cited with approval by the court below, where the bench consisted of Judges Denman, Healy and Bone. Calderon v. United States, 207 F. 2d 377. In civil fraud cases the Tax Court follows a similar practice. King Tsak Kwong v. Commissioner, Docket 27019, decided October 7, 1953, CCH Decision No. 19,924(M); James Q. Whittemore v. Commissioner, Docket No. 13421, 7 T.C.M. 845, 849.

The importance of a precise starting point in a computation by the net-worth method is that, without it, the hypothesis remains that some or all of what appear to be new assets were actually acquired in exchange for old assets or with cash received in earlier years. Thus, the assumption that the difference between the amount of assets at the beginning and end of a particular year constitutes taxable income realized in that year, cannot be made. Without that assumption, the net-worth computation is meaningless.

The starting point was not fixed in this case because the undisputed evidence introduced by the prosecution showed that the petitioner held cash in safes and deposit boxes at all times (T. 1268, 1484, 1535, 1536, 2956), but there was no evidence as to the amount. In the net-worth computation (Ex. 183, R. 3612) Line 25 is marked "cash in safe deposit boxes", but no figures are shown which effect the computation. Instead of figures, the column listing the assets for each year shows an interrogation mark. Thus, the net-worth computation conceded the existence of cash at the beginning of the indictment period and also the Government's inability to determine the amount. From such evidence it seems clear that no reasonable mind could conclude that the new assets shown by the net-worth statement were actually paid for with newly acquired funds, and that such funds could be assumed to constitute taxable income of the indictment years. Accordingly, the Government failed to make out a prima facie case.

Petitioner objected to the introduction of Exhibit 183 (R. 515-538, 2856-2857) and moved for judgment of acquittal on the ground that the use of the net-worth method was not available to the prosecution because of lack of evidence as to the starting point (R. 3465, 3477). The motion was denied (R. 3469). The instructions to the jury on the point were inadequate (R. 136-138), and the petitioner's request for other instructions was denied (R. 79-83).

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CL

The Court of Appeals declined to follow the decisions in the Bryan and Fenwick cases (R. 3766). It expressed the view (R. 3765) that the Government would be frustrated in its attempt to enforce the tax evasion provisions of the Internal Revenue Code if net-worth cases were withdrawn from juries because of mere statements that defendants had additional undisclosed assets. This view merits the comment made in the Demetree case that some courts have appeared to be more concerned with easing the difficulties attending the proof of guilt by the net-worth method, than with preserving the constitutional rights of a defendant. Moreover, the situation here is not comparable to the extreme case which the court below had in mind. The existence of the cash did not depend on the acceptance of defendant's claims. It was shown by a prosecution witness (R. 1483-4); there was no evidence to the contrary and the Government conceded in Line 25 of Exhibit 183 that an unknown amount of cash was in the petitioner's possession at the beginning of the indictment period. The comment of the court below (R. 3765) that petitioner "did not attempt in any way at the trial to prove that substantial funds were in fact kept in the box" indicates an erroneous conception of the burden of proof. We submit that petitioner did not have the burden of establishing the amount of the omitted cash item.

The suggestion of the court below (R. 3765) that an unpaid $1800 judgment outstanding on the critical date tended to show that petitioner did not have any substantial amount of cash, overlooks the fact that petitioner had much more than this amount in the bank (Ex. 183, R. 3589; Ex. 169, R. 3601).

Markers

The net-worth computation (Ex. 183) was further fatally

BLURRED COPY

CLOSE IN CENTER

defective in that it erroneously included both cash and accrual items. It is well settled that the cash and accrual systems of accounting are distinct, and that each system should be employed to the exclusion of the other. It is not permissible to use them both at the same time. Sec. 29.41-2, Treas. Regs. 111, provides: "A method of accounting will not, however, be regarded as clearly reflecting income unless all items of gross income and all deductions are treated with reasonable consistency."

Nevertheless, the Court of Appeals has sanctioned a departure from this principle (R. 3769), apparently on the theory that the net-worth system is a hybrid method of computation. A prosecution witness testified that he had used "mostly" the cash receipt and disbursements method, and that it was impossible to secure an accurate picture "by sticking to any one particular method specifically" (R. 2621). He thought "there has actually arisen a sort of hybrid basis" (R. 2777). Keeping in mind that the prosecution was attempting to show fraud on the part of a taxpayer whose accounts were maintained on the cash receipts and disbursements system, it is somewhat startling to have a judicial indication that such a taxpayer may be punished for not reporting the amount of tax shown to be due by a method of computation which treats promises to pay as cash.

In this case, the promises to pay consisted of so-called "markers" which represented the amount of credit extended to customers. The markers were unpaid bets. They were not identified as such in the Government's exhibits. They were included in an item entered on Exhibit 169 (R. 3601) for the year 1945 as "cash on hand—bankroll—Ex. 111-A, Pritchitt's test.—$20,000". The markers are included in Exhibit 183 (R. 3612) under Item 2 which reflects the net-worth results computed in Exhibit 169.

Turning to Pritchett's testimony (R. 1949, 1962, 1968), it appears that the cash was only $5,000 and that the other $15,000 represented markers. The witness Kyne explained that the markers indicated unpaid bets, sometimes taken over the telephone and not represented by any note or other document (R. 1361). Markers were also used to indicate withdrawals by the partners (R. 1299, 1374-5). Markers of this kind were disposed of on settlement at the end of each year. They were considered as cash already distributed to the partner responsible for the marker. Pritchett's testimony dealt with customers' markers which, if not paid, would have affected profits (R. 1968). When such markers were paid, the cash on hand was increased (R. 1360). This was the understanding of the court below (R. 3769).

COPY BOUND CL

We submit that the markers should have been excluded from Exhibit 183 in the computation for the year 1945. For that year, the prosecution contended that petitioner understated income in the amount of $11,747.04 (R. 3613). Accordingly, if Exhibit 183 had adhered to the cash receipts and disbursements method, and reflected only cash receipts, and omitted the promises to pay in the amount of $15,000, the evidence would have shown no understatement of income whatever.

The Brief in Opposition does not attempt to support the use of the hybrid method sanctioned by the court below. If there was any confusion in the testimony concerning the nature of the $15,000 markers, as suggested by respondent (B. Op. 28), it was an error to admit Exhibit 183 in evidence. The net-worth computation, at best, is an approximation, and where it indicates only a small understatement there is no room for permitting the jury to indulge in the inferences suggested by respondent. Moreover, the jury had no reason to make such inferences in view of the instructions (R. 137-8).

II

The Form of the Enterprises Was Not a Sham and Partnership Issue Should Not Have Been Submitted to the Jury.

As shown by the statement of facts, petitioner's returns disclosed the receipt of income from various enterprises, and those enterprises filed partnership returns, disclosing that petitioner was liable for his share of the income. The Government contended that four of the partnerships should not be recognized for tax purposes and that petitioner was therefore liable to criminal penalties because he had not reported all of the income individually. This was the paramount issue.

The prosecution recognized two of the six enterprises as partnerships (21 Club and San Diego Social Club) (R. 893-4) and the jury failed to convict on the counts dealing with the year 1946, for which partnership returns were also filed. The written partnership agreements were drawn in 1946 but related back. (R. 3582-5) Presumably, this is what distinguished 1946 in the eyes of the jury. The 186 Club was eliminated from the partnership issue because the Government recognized it as a corporation. Notwithstanding the uncertain legal status of the enterprises, petitioner has been found guilty of tax evasion on the presumption that he willfully and knowingly failed to report all of the income of the enterprises on his individual returns. The records of the Tax Court show that an official deficiency letter was issued on May 6, 1949, in which the 186 Club and all other enterprises were recognized as partnerships. Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No. 23486.

The Court of Appeals held (R. 3768) that the tests of liability for partnership income laid down in Commissioner v. Culbertson, 377 U.S. 733, 742, were applicable and that the question was one of fact for the jury. The Culbertson case was a civil case and this Court held that the question was one of fact for the Tax Court, the experts.

Moreover, the Culbertson case was decided in 1949. Accordingly, it was not available to petitioner in 1945 and 1946, when he is alleged to have committed the offenses upon which he was convicted. In 1949 the law was so changed that earlier decisions are not recognized as res judicata. Joe Lynch v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket No. 24859, 20 T.C. —— No. 146, September 23, 1953, CCH Decision 19,901. But even if the tests applicable in civil cases are likewise to be applied in criminal cases, the tests are not sufficiently well understood that knowledge of the correct conclusion could safely be attributed to every layman.

COPY BOUND CL

The earlier cases in this field, Commissioner v. Tower, 327 U.S. 280, and Lusthaus v. Commissioner, 327 U.S. 293, were decided on February 21, 1946, about the time when the latest alleged offense of the petitioner occurred. These cases were rather widely misinterpreted by taxpayers and by the Courts (See Trapp v. Jones, (W.D. Okla.) 87 Fed. Supp. 415; Spies, et al. v. United States, (N.D. Iowa) 84 Fed. Supp. 769). Even the Justices of this Court were not in agreement in the Culbertson case as to what tests should be applied, nor as to the proper conclusion to be drawn in that particular case. The decision did not completely clarify the situation and the courts have been flooded with litigation ever since. The proceedings following this Court's remand of the Culbertson case are illuminating. Both courts attempted to apply the Culbertson decision, but they reached different conclusions. The Tax Court decision rendered on the remand, 9 T.C.M. 647, was reversed by the Court of Appeals, 194 F. 2d 581 (CA 5). It is not an overstatement to say that the tests for determining the civil liability are still uncertain and it is a new departure in the law to hold a taxpayer liable for criminal penalties when he mistakenly claims that his income should be computed on the partnership basis.

The Senate Finance Committee report on H.R. 4473, Proposed Revenue Act of 1951, discloses the then current confusion with respect to the recognition of partnerships for tax purposes. In 1952, the Bureau of Internal Revenue published a ruling outlining the Bureau's position with respect to recognition of partnerships for years prior to 1951, Mim. 6767, Cumulative Bulletin 1952-1, p. 111. A current ruling states that "the term 'partnerships' for tax purposes is broader than the term under common law, the Uniform Partnership Act, or individual State laws." Rev. Rul. 144, Internal Revenue Bulletin No. 16, Aug. 3, 1953, p. 29. The Government has attempted to require some partnerships to file corporate returns on the theory that they are associations. (The Olmsted Hotel v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket 28375, 11 T.C.M. 694).

Today the tax liability for partnership income is one of the most prolific sources of litigation. A recent analysis of cases on the Tax Court docket for the period November 8, 1951 to January 19, 1953, shows over one thousand disputes in the partnership field (1953 Commerce Clearing House, Par. 8637). In such cases the question usually is whether the taxpayer is correct in his conclusion that he is liable for only a portion of the partnership income. This is a criminal case, but if it presents only the same question as the civil cases, any of the taxpayers in the thousand Tax Court cases would likewise be liable to criminal prosecution. If it be the law that the civil tests are applicable in criminal cases, any taxpayer who claims to be a partner may be indicted if the Bureau disagrees. If the Government really believes that the same tests apply, the dearth of reported criminal cases is difficult to explain.

However, we submit that the question in a criminal case is not the same as in a civil case. The offense of tax evasion requires, first, a knowledge that certain omitted income should be included in the tax return. The question here is whether petitioner knew that he had not created a partnership (or a syndicate, pool, joint venture, etc.), and knowingly misrepresented that he had. Where, as here, a taxpayer joins with others in the conduct of certain enterprises, his liability to include all of the income in his individual return is so uncertain that there is no basis on which a jury could properly convict him of knowingly and willfully failing to report the entire partnership income with intent to defraud the revenue.

In a recent civil case where the Commissioner asserted fraud penalties because of his refusal to recognize the taxpayer's claimed partnership, the Tax Court agreed that the partnership should not be recognized for tax purposes, but it declined to approve the fraud penalties even though it held, on the authority of the Culbertson decision (p. 903), that "the parties did not in good faith intend to become partners for the operation of the business." (C. C. Cooke v. Commissioner, 10 T.C.M. 881). The Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit reversed the Tax Court and held that for some of the years involved the partnership should be recognized, 203 F. 2d 258. It did not disturb the Tax Court decision with respect to the fraud penalties and apparently the Commissioner did not file any appeal on that issue. Certiorari was denied in the Cooke case, Docket No. 77, October Term, 1953.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLO

In the case at bar, the jury was instructed (R. 144) that "The important question is whether the parties, including the defendant, actually had the intent in good faith to join together in operating the business as partners." In the Cooke case, supra, the Tax Court held that such a finding will not support even a civil fraud penalty. The jury was also instructed that the partnership must serve a business purpose (R. 143), and the Court of Appeals agreed that the applicable tests include that concept (R. 3678). We submit that the Court of Appeals has sanctioned an erroneous test and has mistakenly applied the civil rule in a criminal case.

While the trial court covered the question of intent in a general charge (R. 134-5), the denial of petitioner's requested instructions Nos. 69, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 88, 89, and 90 (R. 73-79) left the jury free to determine the partnership issue by applying the civil rule.

There was no basis upon which the jury could properly have found that petitioner never intended to form partnerships. The trial court insisted that the question whether the partnerships were real should be left to the jury, despite petitioner's contention that there was no reasonable basis upon which the jury could infer otherwise (R. 3480).

The enterprises were conducted on a profit-sharing basis,

BLURRED COPY

LOSE IN CENTER

the individual partners' equities were carried on the books, (R. 3287) the other partners performed services, and petitioner supplied the cash. A distinction was made between the interests of the partners in the profits and their interests in the assets, (R. 338, 1509) but that is customary and does not militate against the existence of valid partnerships, nor indicate that the partnerships were a sham. The credits for the other partners reduced petitioner's interest in the partnership capital, and the prosecuting attorney conceded that Maundrell, one of the partners, was "entitled" to his $15,000-$17,000 credits after petitioner recovered his capital (R. 538). If Maundrell was entitled to take out of the business the credits which accumulated during the indictment years, it is plain that his share of the annual earnings was real and substantial and the fact that it remained in the business is of no consequence.

The Government's peculiar theory that the other partners should be recognized at some later time (R. 538) evidently prevailed with the jury, although, unlike the Government, the jury was willing to recognize the partnerships for the year 1946, after the partnership agreements had been formalized by written instruments. However, these circumstances go to the question of the validity of the partnerships; they do not bear on the question of the petitioner's intent. Here there was an agreement between petitioner and others to conduct enterprises jointly. We submit that the details are not so important as the fact that the agreements were carried out and that the others acquired interests in the profits of the business which were recorded in the books and resulted in reducing petitioner's capital interest. The contention that petitioner attempted to defraud the Government by claiming that his proportionate share of the income was reduced by the arrangement is erroneous as a matter of law. We submit that it is not attempted evasion for a taxpayer to claim that his plan has been successful. If it were otherwise, no taxpayer could contend for and act upon a plausible construction of the technical statutory provisions of the Internal Revenue Code and escape criminal penalties if his construction proved to be erroneous.

COPY BOUND CL

There is nothing in the record to support the necessary conclusion that the partnership agreements were empty gestures and that petitioner did not intend and attempt to form partnerships. Moreover, the partnerships were recognized by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for all of the indictment years, Remmer v. Commissioner, Tax Court Docket 23486, and the fact that this indictment occurred is evidence of administrative confusion. The jury was also confused by the legal technicalities and the instructions of the trial court, with the result that it brought in a verdict which has no support in the record.

Respondent apparently believes that a taxpayer who actually conducts an enterprise jointly with other individuals in the form of a partnership will be subject to criminal penalties if his purpose was to evade taxes. (B. Op. 30-31). This reasoning confuses avoidance with evasion. We understand that evasion involves a misrepresentation of what was actually done, no matter what the purpose of the act, nor whether the attempt was successful. Where the form is not a sham, we submit that no evasion can result from merely doing business in a particular form and reporting the tax liability applicable to that form. It is well settled that taxpayers are free to choose the form in which they will conduct their enterprises and that their civil liabilities will not be affected even though they deliberately select the form which results in tax reduction. Congress makes tax liabilities depend on the manner in which business transactions are carried out, and taxpayers are free to avail themselves of the opportunity to reduce their taxes by adopting the particular form of transaction or business organization which will qualify for the tax savings.

The legal right of a taxpayer to reduce his tax liability, by any means which the law permits, is firmly established:

BLURRED COPY

United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496
Gregory v. Helvering, 293 U.S. 465, 469
Commissioner v. Tower, 327 U.S. 280

In the Tower case, supra, it was held that the principle > * * * would clearly apply, for example, in a situation where a member of a partnership, in order to keep from paying future taxes on partnership profits and in order to get into a lower income tax bracket sells his interest to a stranger, relinquishing all control of the business. But the situation is different where the taxpayer draws a paper purporting to sell his partnership interest even to a stranger, though actually he continues to control the business to the extent he had before the "sale" and channels the income to his wife. * * *

In other words, the rule is that a purpose to reduce taxes does not effect the question of tax liability, unless it is established that the partnership form was only a sham. The rule was thus stated in Chisholm v. Commissioner, 79 Fed. 2d 14 (CA 2), certiorari denied 296 U.S. 641:

> * * * The question always is whether the transaction under scrutiny is in fact what it appears to be in form; a marriage may be a joke; a contract may be intended only to deceive others; an agreement may have a collateral defeasance. In such cases the transaction as a whole is different from its appearance. True, it is always the intent that controls; and we need not for this occasion press the difference between intent and purpose. We may assume that purpose may be the touchstone, but the purpose which counts is one which defeats or contradicts the apparent transaction, not the purpose to escape taxation which the apparent, but not the whole, transaction would realize. * * *

Here all of the partners in the enterprises had substantial rights and interests in the profits and the partnership form was not a sham.

We submit that the civil tests for the recognition of partnerships are not applicable in criminal cases; that if such tests are applicable there is a wide difference of opinion as to their meaning; that a taxpayer's claim of even a doubtful partnership status cannot properly be made the basis of a criminal charge; and that there was no evidence here from which the jury could properly conclude that the purported partnerships were unreal.

III

Petitioner's Motions Were Consistent With the Purpose of Rules 16 and 17, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

Proceeding under Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, petitioner filed a motion after the finding of the indictment, to inspect and take copies of certain books, papers, documents and tangible objects, which were described (R. 19-20). Supporting affidavits filed with the motion (R. 20-34) recited the circumstances which made the motion necessary and explained the delay. An affidavit in opposition was filed by the prosecution, urging that the motion be denied on the ground that ample opportunity to prepare his case had already been afforded the defendant (R. 35-41). The motion was denied by the trial court. The Court of Appeals sanctioned this action on the reasoning that sufficient prior opportunities to examine the material had been given (R. 3755), that the motion was not timely (R. 3756), and that no specific showing of prejudice had been made (R. 3758).

Rule 16 provides for such motions "at any time after the filing of the indictment or information" and it does not appear that the time element was a factor to be considered. At any rate, the Government had contributed to the delay and the time element was not a sufficient reason for denying the motion even if the rule itself does not foreclose it. Petitioner made unsuccessful attempts to secure the release from Federal lien of sufficient assets to finance his defense

CLOSE IN CENTER

(R. 20-25), and much time was consumed in unavailing efforts to arrange for inspection of the records without a court order (R. 25-34, 166). The Government made unwarranted and impossible demands as the price of its consent (R. 29-30, 41). The Government sought a net-worth statement (R. 38, 50-54), and a showing of petitioner's "interest" in the enterprises (R. 27, 30, 33, 166, 185). The Government recognized petitioner's need for the records by bargaining with him for evidence which would bolster the Government's case. It made its conditions one at a time, and finally drove petitioner to a last-resort motion for a court order. The Government then took the position that petitioner did not really need the records and secured a denial of the motion on the ground that the trial date was only two weeks away. The trial lasted three months, petitioner made repeated efforts to have access to the records (R. 928-9), and the records sought were actually in the courthouse (R. 2451, 2771).

Petitioner showed that the prior opportunities to examine the records had occurred before the time when petitioner's tax counsel was engaged (R. 22, 32). It was not unreasonable to anticipate that an examination of the records under his direction would develop additional defense material, particularly in the light of the Government's announced reliance on the net-worth method. We submit that there was a reasonable showing that an examination of the records would be beneficial to petitioner and it does not appear that the rule authorizes the court to substitute its own judgment on that matter.

Bearing in mind that the Government contended that the books and records were inadequate as a basis for the net-worth computation, it seems plain that the suppression of a mass of original documents, of sufficient bulk to fill a packing box of approximately fifty cubic feet, plus several other smaller cartons (R. 48), was prejudicial to petitioner. The impressive quantity of records was in itself a matter of consequence, and we submit that the rule was improperly interpreted by the Court of Appeals to require that the need for specific papers be shown (R. 37-58). The result of denying the benefit of the rule here was to permit the Goverment to withhold records and then submit to the jury the question of whether the partial records in evidence were adequate. It is submitted that this procedure violated the spirit of the rule as interpreted in Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, 341 U.S. 214, 218-220.

COPY BOUND CL

Petitioner also sought a subpoena for production of the records, which was quashed. Rule 17 provides that the grounds for quashing subpoenas are that compliance would be (a) unreasonable or (b) oppressive. There was no suggestion here that production of the records would have hampered the Government in any way and the grounds for quashing the subpoena do not satisfy the requirements of Rule 17.

In Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, supra, the court said:

(pp. 218-220):

> It was intended by the rules to give some measure of discovery. Rule 16 was adopted for that purpose. It gave discovery as to documents and other materials otherwise beyond the reach of the defendant which, as in the instant case, might be numerous and difficult to identify. The rule was to apply not only to documents and other materials belonging to the defendant, but also to those belonging to others which had been obtained by seizure or process. This was a departure from what had theretofore been allowed in criminal cases.
>
> Rule 16 deals with documents and other materials that are in the possession of the Government and provides how they may be made available to the defendant for his information. In the interest of orderly procedure in the handling of books, papers, documents and objects in the custody of the Government accumulated in the course of an investigation and subpoenaed for use before the grand jury and on the trial, it was provided by Rule 16 that the court

BLURRED COPY

could order such materials made available to the defendant for inspection and copying or photographing. In that way, the control and possession of the Government is not disturbed. Rule 16 provides the only way the defendant can reach such materials so as to inform himself.

But if such materials or any part of them are not put in evidence by the Government, the defendant may subpoena them under Rule 17 (c) and use them himself. It would be strange indeed if the defendant discovered some evidence by the use of Rule 16 which the Government was not going to introduce and yet could not require its production by Rule 17 (c). There may be documents and other materials in the possession of the Government not subject to Rule 16. No good reason appears to us why they may not be reached by subpoena under Rule 17 (c) as long as they are evidentiary. That is not to say that the materials thus subpoenaed must actually be used in evidence. It is only required that a good-faith effort be made to obtain evidence. The court may control the use of Rule 17 (c) to that end by its power to rule on motions to quash or modify.

(pp. 220-221):

* * * Rule 17 (c) was not intended to provide an additional means of discovery. Its chief innovation was to expedite the trial by providing a time and place before trial for the inspection of the subpoenaed materials. United States v. Maryland & Virginia Milk Producers Assn., 9 F.R.D. 509. However, the plain words of the Rule are not to be ignored. They must be given their ordinary meaning to carry out the purpose of establishing a more liberal policy for the production, inspection and use of materials at the trial. There was no intention to exclude from the reach of process of the defendant any material that had been used before the grand jury or could be used at the trial. In short, any document or other materials, admissible as evidence, obtained by the Government by solicitation or voluntarily from third persons is subject to subpoena. * * *

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

The Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia interpreted the Bowman case by following the "view which leads to the fullest presentation of facts". Frank Fryer v. United States, 207 F. 2d 134, certiorari denied Nov. 16, 1953, Docket No. 311. The denial of certiorari in the Fryer case confirms the view that the dominant purpose of the rules was to achieve a fair balance between the Government and the defendant so as to bring about fairness in the administration of criminal proceedings.

Even in the absence of specific legislation, this court held, in Gordon v. United States, 344 U.S. 414, 420, that "for production purposes, it need only appear that the evidence is relevant, competent, and outside of any exclusionary rule * * *".

When tested by such a construction, it appears that the court below has misconceived the purpose of the rules and has adopted, instead, an interpretation which is harsh and unduly restrictive.

IV

Outside Contacts With a Jury Raise a Presumption of Prejudice and Petitioner's Motion for a Hearing Should Have Been Granted.

On February 22, 1952, the date that the verdict was returned, petitioner's counsel gave oral notice of a motion for new trial, and defendant's time to file a written motion was extended to February 29, 1952 (R. 105). On February 29, 1952, the motion for new trial was filed (R. 106-110).

Ground 17 (R. 109-110) set forth that petitioner was substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of the acts and conduct of the jury, the court, the prosecuting attorneys, and the agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as described in an accompanying affidavit. Ground 17 included a motion that there be a trial of the issue and that evidence be taken from all participants in the jury incident. The accompanying affidavit (R. 111-114) recited the gist of two newspaper articles, submitted copies of the articles which had appeared in two California newspapers on February 24, 1952 (R. 114-120), stated the probable prejudice, and renewed the request for a hearing. The newspaper articles were to the effect that the foreman of the jury had received a suggestion that money might be paid him to influence the verdict, that the trial judge had caused an investigation to be made without notifying the defense, and had concluded that the incident was harmless.

The motion for new trial was heard by the trial judge on February 29, 1952 (R. 92) and defendant's counsel stated that since the court had already ruled on every ground set forth, with the exception of Ground 17, that no argument would be presented unless the court indicated that argument would in any wise change the decision. Counsel pointed out that Ground 17 involved matters which had recently come to their attention and renewed the request "for an opportunity to obtain evidence in that connection by hearing" (R. 93). The motion was denied on all grounds (R. 94). The court made no comment and gave no reason.

Relying solely on the newspaper stories, the Court of Appeals held that petitioner had failed to show any prejudice, and that he had the burden of so showing before any hearing would be required. The court suggested that petitioner should have supplied affidavits by jurors, showing that they had received communications which would tend to prejudice them. Accordingly, the court below sanctioned the denial of petitioner's motion by the trial court (R. 3776-3777). Thus, the court departed from the well-settled principle that outside contacts with a jury raise a presumption of prejudice, Mattox v. United States, 146 U.S. 140, 150, and that the presumption can be overcome only by affirmatively showing that there was no prejudice in fact. Stone v. United States, 113 F. 2d 70, 77-78 (CA 6); Little v. United States, 73 F. 2d 861 (CA 10); Wheaton v. United States, 133 F. 2d 522 (CA 8).

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

It is well settled that affidavits of jurors are not competent evidence as to whether or not they were prejudiced. Such affidavits are competent only to indicate the existence of extraneous interferences with the jurors' deliberations. Wheaton v. United States, supra, p. 526. Since the newspaper stories upon which the court below relied plainly showed that the trial court as well as the prosecuting attorneys were fully aware of the facts, it is clear that the suggested affidavits would have been empty formalities and would have been competent evidence only with respect to the actual occurrence of the incident, concerning which there was no question.

We submit that orderly procedure required a hearing to determine the facts so that there would be a definite record of the details of the incident. In Ryan v. United States, 191 F. 2d 779 (CA DC), the record showed that several jurors and other witnesses were examined and cross-examined. The court approved this procedure and said, p. 781, "the trial court adopted the appropriate procedure of probing the matter by an extensive hearing".

In its present condition the record does not disclose whether the purpose of the FBI investigation was to inquire into the conduct of defense agents or to ascertain the effect on the jury. There was no opportunity for defense counsel to ascertain whether the jurors had been subjected to a grilling, whether they believed that the investigation remained inconclusive until the end of the trial, and whether any of them were apprehensive lest their verdict for acquittal might result in suspicion and criticism. In fact, none of the pertinent details are shown.

We submit that having been excluded from the investigation, the defense was entitled to have the aid of the court in adducing the facts and making a reviewable record. On this barren record, this Court can not determine the question of prejudice but we submit that the resolution of that question may not properly be left solely to the district judge, with no opportunity for an independent appraisal on appeal. We submit further that petitioner has been convicted by a jury which was subjected to outside influences of a character calculated to affect its deliberations and that the assertions of probable prejudice to the petitioner set forth in the affidavit (R. 112) were well taken. On this point, justice requires that this case be remanded for the purpose of holding a hearing and that the district court be required to pass on the motion in the light of evidence developed at such hearing.

CONCLUSION

In view of the manifest errors, the judgment of the Court of Appeals should be reversed and the case should be remanded to the District Court with direction to enter a judgment of acquittal.

Rule 16. DISCOVERY AND INSPECTION.

Upon motion of a defendant at any time after the filing of the indictment or information, the court may order the attorney for the government to permit the defendant to inspect and copy or photograph designated books, papers, documents or tangible objects, obtained from or belonging to the defendant or obtained from others by seizure or by process, upon a showing that the items sought may be material to the preparation of his defense and that the request is reasonable. U. S. Treasury Department, Bureau of Internal Revenue, Regulations 111:

Sec. 29.41-1. COMPUTATION OF NET INCOME.

Net income must be computed with respect to a fixed period. Usually that period is 12 months and is known as the taxable year. Items of income and of expenditure which as gross income and deductions are elements in the computation of net income need not be in the form of cash. It is sufficient that such items, if otherwise properly included in the computation, can be valued in terms of money. The time as of which any item of gross income or any deduction is to be accounted for must be determined in the light of the fundamental rule that the computation shall be made in such a manner as clearly reflects the taxpayer's income. If the method of accounting regularly employed by him in keeping his books clearly reflects his income, it is to be followed with respect to the time as of which items of gross income and deductions are to be accounted for. (See sections 29.42-1 to 29.42-3, inclusive.) If the taxpayer does not regularly employ a method of accounting which clearly reflects his income, the computation shall be made in such manner as in the opinion of the Commissioner clearly reflects it.

Sec. 29.41-2. Bases of Computation and Changes in Accounting Methods.

Approved standard methods of accounting will ordinarily be regarded as clearly reflecting income. A method of accounting will not, however, be regarded as clearly reflecting income unless all items of gross income and all deductions are treated with reasonable consistency. See section 48 for definitions of "paid or accrued" and "paid or incurred." All items of gross income shall be included in the gross income for the taxable year in which they are received by the taxpayer, and deductions taken accordingly, unless in order clearly to reflect income such amounts are to be properly accounted for as of a different period. But see sections 42 and 43. See also section 48. For instance, in any case in which it is necessary to use an inventory, no method of accounting in regard to purchases and sales will correctly reflect income except an accrual method. A taxpayer is deemed to have received items of gross income which have been credited to or set apart for him without restriction. (See sections 29.42-2 and 29.42-3.) On the other hand, appreciation in value of property is not even an accrual of income to a taxpayer prior to the realization of such appreciation through sale or conversion of the property. (But see section 29.22(c)-5.)

The true income, computed under the Internal Revenue Code, and, if the taxpayer keeps books of account, in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping such books (provided the method so used is properly applicable in determining the net income of the taxpayer for purposes of taxation), shall in all cases be entered in the return. If for any reason the basis of reporting income subject to tax is changed, the taxpayer shall attach to his return a separate statement setting forth for the taxable year and for the preceding year the classes of items differently treated under the two systems, specifying in particulare all amounts duplicated or entirely omitted as the result of such change.

A taxpayer who changes the method of accounting employed in keeping his books shall, before computing his income upon such new method for purposes of taxation, secure the consent of the Commissioner. For the purposes of this section, a change in the method of accounting employed in keeping books means any change in the accounting treatment of items of income or deductions, such as a change from cash receipts and disbursements method to the accrual method, or vice versa; a change involving the basis of valuation employed in the computation of inventories (see sections 29.22(c)-1 to 29.22(c)-8, inclusive); a change from the cash or accrual method to the long-term contract method, or vice versa; a change in the long-term contract method from the percentage of completion basis to the completed contract basis, or vice versa (see section 29.42-4); or a change involving the adoption of, or a change in the use of, any other specialized basis of computing net income such as the crop basis (see sections 29.22(a)-7 and 29.23(a)-11). Application for permission to change the method of accounting employed and the basis upon which the return is made shall be filed within 90 days after the beginning of the taxable year to be covered by the return. The application shall be accompanied by a statement specifying the classes of items differently treated under the two methods and specifying all amounts which would be duplicated or entirely omitted as a result of the proposed change. Permission to change the method of accounting will not be granted unless the taxpayer and the Commissioner agree to the terms and conditions under which the change will be effected. See section 22(d) and regulations thereunder with respect to changing to optional method of inventorying goods.

Section 44 contains special provisions for reporting the profit derived from the sale of property on the installment plan.

Sec. 29.42-2. INCOME NOT REDUCED TO POSSESSION.

Income which is credited to the account of or set apart for a taxpayer and which may be drawn upon by him at any time is subject to tax for the year during which so credited or set apart, although not then actually reduced to possession. To constitute receipt in such a case the income must be credited or set apart to the taxpayer without any substantial limitation or restriction as to the time or manner of payment or condition upon which payment is to be made, and must be made available to him so that it may be drawn at any time, and its receipt brought within his own control and disposition. A book entry, if made, should indicate an absolute transfer from one account to another. If a corporation contingently credits its employees until some future date, the mere crediting on the books of the corporation does not constitute receipt.

Sec. 29.3797.4. PARTNERSHIPS.

The Internal Revenue Code provides its own concept of a partnership. Under the term "partnership" it includes not only a partnership as known at common law, but, as well, a syndicate, group, pool, joint venture, or other unincorporated organization which carries on any business, financial operation, or venture, and which is not, within the meaning of the Code, a trust, estate, or a corporation. • • •

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit

PETITIONER'S MEMORANDUM SUPPLEMENTING ORAL ARGUMENT

To the Honorable, the Chief Justice and the Associated Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States:

At the argument of this case on February 2, 1954, the Court granted Petitioner's request that consideration be given to a short memorandum supplementing the argument. This memorandum is filed in response to that permission.

1. The parties agree that the fraud issue is wholly dependent on the non-recognition of the partnerships. That issue is not simply a question of whether the jury believed the evidence. It involves a consideration of whether the issue should have been presented to the jury at all and in addition whether the instructions (including the business purpose test) permitted or invited the jury to go behind the evidence.

BLURRED COPY

LOSE IN CENTER

The statutory definition recognizes practically any joint venture as a partnership. The approval of a concept of tax evasion which would include the mere claim that a partnership has been created would open the door to punishment for bona fide claims in the many debatable areas of tax law.

The affirmance of this case will clothe jurors with the authority to go behind the evidence and make verdicts depend upon the nebulous tests applied by administrative tribunals under the authority of United States v. Cumberland Public Service Co., 338 U. S. 451, fn. 3.

In the absence of evidence which contradicted the partnership form, there was no issue for the jury. (Chisholm v. Commisisoner, 79 F. 2d 14 (CA 2)).

2. The Government agrees that its net-worth computations are meaningless unless the starting point is solidly fixed. It concedes that it was unable to prove the amount of starting point cash and that it therefore gave Petitioner credit for none. Its attempt to establish sufficient evidence to go to the jury is based on two erroneous premises: (1) that it need simply show that one particular sum of $17,000 placed in the safe deposit box in December, 1943 could have been spent by the end of that month; and (2) that the starting point cash necessary to overcome the 1944 deficiency would have to be at least $31,000.

First, we note that the evidence with respect to the $17,000 (R. 1483-4) was not an effort by the prosecution's witness to show the total amount of cash on hand. At another point (R. 1536), he had testified that the amount varied from time to time. His testimony in R. 1484, is merely a statement that a particular check in the amount of $17,000 was cashed and the proceeds placed in the safe deposit box on December 3, 1943. This check did not represent the proceeds of the operations of the enterprises; it represented a payment for liquor which Petitioner had purchased for another business friend. Accordingly, this evidence does not purport to indicate the amount of cash which went into the safe deposit box from the ordinary operations of the various enterprises.

Moreover, the Government's conclusion that the $17,000 deposited on December 3, 1943 was used up by December 31, 1943 in the purchase of cashier's checks is not supported by the facts and the jury would not have been warranted in reaching such a conclusion. The cashier's checks upon which the Government relies were purchased to pay losses of the B-R Smoke Shoppe on bets received from other cities. (R. 1417-21). They involved only part of the daily operations, and resort to the safe deposit cash would have been necessary only if the total operations showed a loss. Ex. 116 (R. 1417, 1422, not printed) shows that during December, 1943, twenty-three checks, totaling $20,866.67 in value, were purchased on twelve different days. The B-R diary for 1943, (Ex. 111-A, R. 1350, 1354, not printed) shows a net profit for December of $186 on all bets placed. The largest net loss on any day was $350 and at no time during the month did the cumulative operations show a loss. Accordingly, it is clear that the wins were sufficient to pay for all cashier's checks and there is no evidentiary basis upon which the jury could have properly inferred that the checks were purchased with the $17,000 placed in the box on December 3, 1943.

Secondly, the Government argues that $31,000 in cash at the starting point would be necessary to overcome its deficiency computation for 1944, and, thus, that there is a deficiency even if Petitioner is given credit for $17,000 cash on hand at the starting point. That argument, however, overlooks the fact that a substantial part of the deficiency is based on obviously technical accounting adjustments as to which fraud could not properly be inferred. For example, the Government was permitted in Ex. 183 (R. 3612) to add to Petitioner's 1944 closing net worth the sum of $8,397.53 paid as liquor excise tax in 1944, even though the law gives him the option (as the jury was instructed, R. 145) to treat this as a current deduction rather than an addition to the cost of the liquor.

Allowance for this adjustment and recognition of the partnerships would substantially eliminate the 1944 deficiency even if there were no starting-point cash.

3. The jury could not properly have adopted the Government's treatment of the $15,000 in "markers" of the B-R Smoke Shoppe as the equivalent of cash. It could not ignore the nature of this particular type of "markers". The evidence clearly shows that they represented unpaid bets of patrons. (R. 1360-61, 1949, 1962). It is true that in the card-room operations (Menlo Club and 186 Club), the business at times loaned money to patrons who played in the establishments; and it was specifically to the Menlo Club (not the B-R) markers that Special Agent Weaver's testimony, quoted in the Government's Brief (pp. 88-90), relates. (R. 2722-4).

The B-R markers, however, represented unpaid bets on horse races (R. 1360-61) and were not in any sense loans of money previously taken in. Neither is there any evidence to support the speculation that the B-R markers may have represented cash advanced for bets at the race track, or on lay-off bets. Nor was there any instruction to the jury permitting such an inference to be drawn.

The jury did not have the benefit of the present concession that these markers should not have been treated as income if they represented unpaid bets. (R. 2776).

The bald way in which this $15,000 in "markers" was labeled as "cash" in Ex. 169 (R. 3601) and then reflected in Ex. 183 (R. 3612) could easily have misled the jury. The elimination of that sum from the 1945 computation not only wipes out any deficiency for that year, but it also raises the question of whether the jury would have convicted at all if the total amount involved in the case had been reduced by so large a sum.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLO

4. At the argument, inquiry was made by Mr. Justice Reed as to the showing made in United States v. Johnson, 319 U.S. 503, with respect to the starting point cash. An examination of the record in that case discloses that the defendant himself furnished the figures which the Government accepted and used in its calculations.[1] Here the defendant gave no evidence, and it is quite unlikely that he had a personal recollection of his cash position eight years before the trial.

It is noteworthy that the expenditures method employed by the prosecution in the Johnson case was corroborative of other evidence which showed that Johnson had a source of income which was not disclosed by his tax returns. While the case involved partnerships, Johnson disclaimed all connection with them. The prosecution proved that he received at least some of the income from the partnerships, and the expenditures method was employed to confirm that additional source of income. There is no evidence in this case of unreported sources of income, nor is it contended that the partnership returns failed to report the correct income of each enterprise.

5. Following denial of Petitioner's Motion for Inspection under Rule 16, and the quashing of the subpoena for production of his records by the prosecution under Rule 17, Petitioner made further effort to obtain his records. His Motion, during the trial, for production and inspection of these same records was summarily denied. (R. 928-9). This is in sharp contrast to the granting at the same time of a motion by the prosecution for an order directing Petitioner to deposit in court, for the prosecutor's examination and use, that portion of Petitioner's records previously returned to him.

[1] See U.S. v. Johnson, No. 4, 1942 Term, V. 2 of Record, p. 10, and Addendum following p. 110 of Brief for United States on Reargument. Johnson had told the Revenue Agent he had $10,000 on his person, and $58,000 in his safe at the starting point, and the government gave him credit in full for both sums.

BLURRED COPY

LOSE IN CENTER

6. We submit that no reasonable jury could conclude that the circumstantial evidence in this case removed the hypothesis of innocence. The concession that cash in some unknown amount existed on December 31, 1943 rendered it impossible for a rational conclusion to be reached that the increase in Petitioner's assets during 1944 was financed by unreported income of 1944. The question mark in the Government's net-worth exhibit does not take the place of evidence. Accordingly, it is not important here to settle the question whether the trial court's personal opinion of the hypothesis of innocence is sufficient to withhold the case from the jury.

7. The Court invited comment of counsel on whether a consideration of the other issues is necessary for the purpose of a hearing on the effect of the extraneous jury contact. If such a hearing should result in the denial of a new trial, final disposition of the case would require a resubmission to this Court of the other issues in the case.

If, on the other hand, a new trial should be granted because of the jury contact, that trial would certainly raise again the questions of general importance which this Court now has the opportunity to settle.

No. 304

ELMER F. REMMER, PETITIONER

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3748–3777) is reported at 205 F. 2d 277.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on May 28, 1953 (R. 3778), and a petition for rehearing was denied June 30, 1953 (R. 3779). On July 17, 1953, by order of Mr. Justice Clark, the time for filing the petition for a writ of certiorari was extended to August 29, 1953. The petition was filed August 28, 1953. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U. S. C. 1254 (1). See also Rules 37 (b) (2) and 45 (a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

LOSE IN CENTER

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

Petitioner was indicted for wilfully attempting to evade income taxes for the years 1944, 1945 and 1946. The proof of the Government that he had received income which he had not reported in his returns was based upon a computation of the annual increase in his net worth. He was convicted on four counts involving the years 1944 and 1945. The principal questions presented by the petition are:

1. Whether the evidence was sufficient to support the starting point of the Government's net worth computation.

2. Whether the evidence of the inadequacy of petitioner's books and records was sufficient to justify proof of his true net income by a net worth computation.

3. Whether, as to the third and fourth counts, the finding of guilt can be sustained, in view of the fact that the Government's net worth computation for the year 1945 includes $15,000 in "markers."

4. Whether the trial court correctly instructed the jury that, in determining whether certain of petitioner's business enterprises were partner-

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

COPY BOUND CLOS

ships, the important question was whether the ostensible partners actually intended in good faith to operate the businesses as partners.

5. Whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying petitioner's motions to inspect certain of his records held by the Government, in view of his prior opportunities to examine these records and the belated filing of the motions.

6. Whether petitioner made a sufficient prima facie showing of an improper outside contact by a juror to entitle him to a hearing on the alleged occurrence.

STATUTE AND RULES INVOLVED

Internal Revenue Code:

SEC. 41. General rule.

The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the Commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 48 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep

(c) For Production of Documentary Evidence and of Objects

A subpoena may also command the person to whom it is directed to produce the books, papers, documents or other objects designated therein. The court on motion made promptly may quash or modify the subpoena if compliance would be unreasonable or oppressive. The court may direct that books, papers, documents or objects designated in the subpoena be produced before the court at a time prior to the trial or prior to the time when they are to be offered in evidence and may upon their production permit the books, papers, documents or objects or portions thereof to be inspected by the parties and their attorneys.

STATEMENT

On April 9, 1951, an indictment in six counts was filed against petitioner in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, charging violations of Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code. The first and second counts alleged that petitioner wilfully attempted to defeat and evade income taxes due and owing by himself and his wife for the year 1944 in the amount of $27,379.08. The third and fourth counts charged evasion of his own and his wife's income taxes for the year 1945 in the amount of $11,090.34. The fifth and sixth counts charged similar offenses for the year 1946. (R. 3–8.) After a jury trial lasting approximately three months, petitioner was convicted on the first four counts, the jury failing to agree as to the counts involving the year 1946. (R. 88, 3667.) On February 29, 1952, he was sentenced to imprisonment for five years and fined $5,000 on each of the first four counts. The terms of imprisonment were made to run concurrently, but the fines were cumulative. (R. 89–91.) The conviction was affirmed unanimously by the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. (R. 3748–3777.)

During the period involved in this case, petitioner had interests in a number of gambling houses. He also was interested in several bars, cafes, and liquor stores, most of which were located in the same neighborhood as, or even in the same building with, one of the gambling houses. These businesses were:

1. Cal-Neva, Inc.—This was an incorporated lodge located on the shore of Lake Tahoe, the dining room being on the California side of the state line and the gambling room on the Nevada side. As early as 1926 petitioner became associated with Graham and McKay in the operation of this business. They contributed the original capital; he was the active manager. In 1946 he bought their interests for $466,666.66. (R. 1595, 1903–1911, 3243.)

2. B-R Smoke Shoppe.—This was a bookmaking establishment in San Francisco. In December 1941 petitioner bought it as a going concern. He supplied the purchase price ($2,500) and the initial bankroll ($7,500). No merchandise was sold, the cigar boxes in the front being dummies. Bets were accepted from all parts of the country. The business was ostensibly a partnership, with petitioner owning a half interest and Kyne and Lando owning the other half. (R. 1287–1291, 1345–1357, 1579.)

3. 110 Eddy Street.—This was a bar located in San Francisco. In 1942 the proprietor owed petitioner more than $4,000 and petitioner took the establishment over and spent a considerable sum in improvements in order to protect his money. The business was ostensibly a partnership in which petitioner, Kyne, Cavani and Turner held equal shares. (R. 1382–1386, 1398–1399, 2076.)

4. 186 Club.—This was an incorporated clubroom located at 186 Eddy Street in San Francisco. It was devoted to draw poker and operated twenty-four hours a day with three eight hour shifts. In the front of the building was a cigar, liquor and magazine store called the Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store. In March 1943 the whole establishment was purchased as a going concern, with about $6,000 furnished by petitioner and $16,000 furnished by Nealis and Kopstick, who were in turn bought out at the end of the year. The officers of the corporate club were Busterna, Casselini, Kyne and Lando. There were no officers' or directors' meetings. The liquor store was an ostensible partnership in which petitioner, Kyne and Lando held equal shares. (R. 643–647, 1302–1317, 1424–1429, 1451, 1973, 1981, 3556, 3569, 3575.)

5. San Diego Social Club.—This was a gambling casino located in El Cerrito, California. Across the front of the building was a restaurant and bar known as the 21 Club. (R. 791.) Petitioner bought the business in April or May 1943, concealing his ownership because there was opposition to his operation of a gambling venture at that location. (R. 742–743, 1109, 1128.) He held a half interest in the combined business of the two clubs; Pechart and Kessel held the other half. (R. 1110.) He took no active part in the operation, but seems to have dictated the choice of key employees. (R. 1153–1160.) When Pechart and Kessel opened another club across the street they gave him a "friendship bonus" because of his opposition. (R. 1117–1118, 1143.)

6. Menlo Club.—This was a gambling house in San Francisco. Like the 186 Club, it remained open twenty-four hours a day with three eight hour shifts. It was operated in conjunction with a bar and a restaurant known as Tiny's Bar and Tiny's Restaurant.[1] In April 1945 petitioner contracted to buy all three businesses for $175,000 and took a ten year lease on the premises at a total rent of $219,000. Thereafter it was operated by an ostensible partnership in which petitioner held 40% and Kyne, 15%. The other partners were Dito, Nelson, Maundrell, Fricker, and Turner. (R. 768–775, 1400–1410, 3576–3579.)

7. Transit Smoke Shop.—This was a combined gambling house, cigar and liquor store located in San Francisco. It was acquired in November 1946 for about $32,000, the money being supplied by petitioner. It was an ostensible partnership in which Partee held 50%, and petitioner and Kyne each held 25%. Partee put up no funds of his own. Kyne borrowed about $16,000 from the Menlo Club account to pay for his share and put this money into a safety deposit box which was used as a general depositary for the funds of all the San Francisco enterprises. (R. 1183–1193, 1474–1478, 1495–1496, 1523, 1566.)

8. 50–52 Mason Street.—The B–R Smoke Shoppe was located at 50 Mason Street in San Francisco. During 1944, 1945 and 1946 close to $10,000 was spent in remodeling the front of this building into a private office for petitioner and general offices for all the San Francisco enterprises. The improvements were paid for with funds drawn from the Menlo Club account. (R. 1662–1668, 1680–1681, 1694–1699, 2513–2518, 2660–2673.) The building at 52 Mason Street was rented as a warehouse for whiskey. (R. 1481.) Kyne acted as general manager of all the San Francisco enterprises. He visited them each day, picked up the receipts and gambling records, and brought them to 50 Mason Street. (R. 1396, 1411–1413, 1430–1432, 1436–1437, 1452, 1477, 1557–1558.)

The Motions under Rules 16 and 17.—As early as the first half of 1946 Internal Revenue agents began an investigation of the income tax returns of the B–R Smoke Shoppe. (R. 2115, 2123, 2152, 2163.) In the latter part of 1946 a special agent, whose duty it was to investigate possible criminal tax evasion, was assigned to the case, and by July 1947 the agents were examining the returns of petitioner and of all the above-named enterprises. (R. 1249, 2423, 2454–2458.) The agents had numerous interviews during 1946 and 1947 with Kyne and with the two bookkeepers, Slater and Maundrell. Kyne, Slater, and Maundrell gave considerable oral information and turned over, freely and voluntarily, a large quantity of records. The agents took these to their own offices for study, promising that they would be returned when the investigation was complete and that Kyne and Maundrell could have access to them in the meanwhile. On several occasions

Kyne and Maundrell obtained some of the records and then brought them back to the agents. (R. 1528–1530, 1640–1641, 1813–1815, 2123–2126, 2154–2155, 2165–2166, 2199–2200, 2449–2451, 2695–2698, 2783.)

The agents repeatedly pointed out to Kyne that the records of the enterprises were inadequate in many respects, but Kyne could not enlighten them. They sought permission to examine the contents of the safety deposit boxes, but this was refused by Kyne. Finally, at the agents' request, Kyne arranged an interview with petitioner on April 8, 1948, in the office of petitioner's then attorney, Thatcher. Thatcher asked whether the agents had any specific charges and whether they intended to recommend criminal prosecution, and when they would not commit themselves, he instructed petitioner not to answer any questions and terminated the interview. Thereafter, Thatcher, of his own accord, turned over further records of petitioner to the agents. The agents were never able to communicate with petitioner himself during the course of the investigation. (R. 2496, 2558–2572, 3045.) The special agent did not complete his investigation and submit his report recommending criminal prosecution until November 10, 1949. (R. 2577.)

Meanwhile, however, the Bureau of Internal Revenue had begun a civil proceeding for recovery of income taxes, and had issued 90-day letters alleging an understatement of net income for

BLURRED COPY

1944, 1945, and 1946 in the approximate amount of $487,000 and specifying the businesses from which this arose. (R. 30–32.) A jeopardy assessment was levied against petitioner's assets in March 1949. (R. 3059.) On June 2, 1949, Lawrence Semenza, a certified public accountant, filed a power of attorney with the Treasury Department authorizing him to represent petitioner. (R. 37, 909–910.) On July 11, 1949, Semenza, at his request, was taken into a room where the agents were keeping the records which had been turned over to them; he was told he could take away anything he wanted; he selected those which he thought were pertinent to petitioner's civil liability for underpayment of taxes; and he signed a receipt and agreed to return the records to the agents. (R. 39, 901, 908–910, 919–920, 922.)

On February 14, 1950, petitioner was officially notified by the Bureau of Internal Revenue that criminal proceedings were being contemplated. (R. 3210.) In March he employed two of the attorneys who represented him at the trial, Messrs. Golden and Gillen, together with a second certified public accountant, Friedman. (R. 37.) There was a conference on May 25, 1950, at which petitioner's representatives were informed that if they prepared a net worth statement they would be allowed to compare it with the one already prepared by the Bureau. (R. 38–39.) Friedman was allowed to see all the records remaining in the hands of the agents; he spent about a week examining them and was allowed to take some of them. (R. 39, 184–185, 3212–3213.) Furthermore, petitioner's attorneys instructed Semenza to turn over to Friedman all records pertaining to the San Francisco enterprises. (R. 910.) In November 1950 Friedman withdrew from the case and left all the records in the hands of petitioner's attorneys (R. 910, 3224.) Shortly before the case was presented to the grand jury in April 1951, Semenza was asked by the agents to return the records in accordance with this agreement. (R. 911.) Petitioner's attorneys refused to give them up on the ground that they were petitioner's property. (R. 173–176.) The indictment was returned on April 9, 1951, and trial was set for November 7, 1951. (R. 8, 447.)

The trial date was postponed to November 28, 1951, because the judge was engaged in other matters. (R. 180.) Meanwhile, the records which had been given by Friedman to petitioner's attorneys were returned to Semenza. (R. 912.) On October 22, 1951, defense counsel asked the prosecutor, Mr. Campbell, that they be allowed to examine the other records which still remained in the agents' hands. (R. 26–28.) The prosecutor agreed to do this, provided a showing was made of petitioner's interest in the records, and provided the written consent of the parties who had turned them over to the Government was obtained. (R. 40–41.) On November 14, 1951, petitioner filed a motion under Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, to inspect and take copies of the records in the Government's possession. It was explained that a tremendous amount of accounting work would be required to prepare for trial and that petitioner had been without an accountant until he obtained the services of Semenza in September 1951.[2] A continuance of the trial was requested until April. (R. 16–34.) After a hearing (R. 157–198), the court denied the motion to inspect on the ground that petitioner had had ample opportunity, through Friedman, to inspect all records in the Government's possession (R. 194–198).

On November 27, 1951, the day before the trial, petitioner presented a motion under Rule 17, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, for production and inspection of the records in the Government's possession, together with a subpoena to produce the records. (R. 42–54.) After a hearing (R. 241–288), the subpoena was quashed and the motion was denied on the ground that, under the circumstances, it was unreasonable to delay making it until the day before the trial (R. 286–287). The court assured defense counsel that they would be allowed ample time during the trial

[2] Semenza had been accountant for Cal-Neva, Inc., since 1931. (R. 1600, 3243.) He had some connection with the present case as early as April 1948. (R. 926, 931.) The records were turned over to him on July 11, 1949. (R. 901.)

to examine each document offered by the Government. (R. 287–288.)

A subpoena was issued to Semenza to produce the records in his possession, but he appeared at the trial and stated that they had again been taken by petitioner's attorneys. The court ordered them turned over to the clerk, and they were made available to both sides for the duration of the trial. (R. 912–929.) As to the records in the Government's possession, specific documents were promptly produced during the trial when requested by the defense. (R. 2008, 2020, 3182, 3470–3473.)

The Evidence.—The evidence to support the verdict may very briefly be summarized as follows:

There was evidence to warrant the conclusion that the so-called partnerships were actually sole proprietorships of petitioner. He supplied the funds to acquire and operate them. (R. 1290, 1348; 1313, 1456; 1383–1384, 1394; 1650–1651, 3582–3583.) The partnership agreements, typified by that with Kyne in the Menlo Club, expressly provided that the ostensible partner should not acquire an actual interest in the business until petitioner had been paid back in full from the profits. (R. 1514–1515, 1521, 3582–3583.) The profits were not actually distributed to anyone other than petitioner during the years involved, although the alleged partners were given credit for distributable shares and their taxes on such shares were paid by the enterprises. (R. 1313, 1315, 1340, 1386, 1391, 1495, 1516, 1707, 1856, 1860–1861, 2073, 2102–2103, 2292–2293.) Lando had nothing to say about the policy of the B–R Smoke Shoppe and was not called on to make up losses in a bad year. (R. 1293, 1329–1330, 1342.) Cavani and Turner were employees at 110 Eddy Street. (R. 2107, 3588.) Kyne admitted that he paid taxes on profits from 110 Eddy Street and the Day-Night Cigar Store which he did not receive. (R. 1386–1390, 1539.) All the San Francisco enterprises had a common headquarters at 50 Mason Street (R. 1481, 1535, 1680) and were financed from a common fund which consisted of profits from the various enterprises as well as money petitioner had acquired from other sources (R. 1412, 1484, 1496, 1539, 1544–1545).

There was evidence that the records of some of the enterprises, particularly the gambling houses, were entirely inadequate. Special Agent Weaver, who had been in charge of the investigation, qualified as an expert and testified that the records were not adequately kept. (R. 2453–2461, 2564, 2715.) The Menlo Club books did not show liabilities or disbursements; there were no records for 1945; the bank accounts could not be reconciled with the poker sheets; a trial balance could not be drawn from the books and records alone. (R. 2492–2494, 2519, 2766, 2795–2797, 2815–2816.) The books of the B–R Smoke Shoppe contained only one entry a day whether it was a win or a loss, and the figure represented a net after all expenses and salaries had been paid. (R. 1349, 1358.) A somewhat similar situation was found in the 186 Club. (R. 2382, 2403–2404.) The books of the San Diego Social Club and the 21 Club had been turned over to petitioner prior to trial and were not available. (R. 1102–1103.) The examining revenue agent never saw any books for the San Diego Social Club. (R. 1275.) The daily records of the gambling houses were systematically destroyed. (R. 1966, 2380, 2628.)

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

In view of this inadequacy of the records the Government determined petitioner's correct income for the period in question by computing the yearly increases in his net worth. The starting point date for this computation was December 31, 1943. Special Agent Weaver described the widespread and exhaustive investigation undertaken to determine petitioner's assets as of that date. (R. 2458–2465, 2534–2547, 2558–2559, 2566–2567, 2801–2802.) The Government credited petitioner with the full net worth of the B–R Smoke Shoppe, the Day-Night Cigar Store, and the bar at 110 Eddy Street, on the ground that these were sole proprietorships instead of partnerships. Aside from these three items, and two other immaterial omissions, the Government's schedule of assets and liabilities was the same as that submitted by petitioner. (Compare Ex. 183, R. 3612–3613, with Ex. M–1, R. 3626–3628.) The agents were unable to determine the amount of cash in safety deposit Box 48 in the Day and Night Branch of the Bank of America, which box was used as a depository for the funds of all the petitioner's enterprises.[3] As noted above, the agents could not talk to petitioner; they were refused access to the box by Kyne; and they were told by Kyne that he had no recollection of the amounts in the box at any particular time and that the only record left was no longer available. (R. 1559, 2559–2560, 2566–2567, 2572.) Consequently, the Government's computation shows a question mark for this item. However, the evidence showed that the only income tax returns filed by petitioner prior to 1944 were for the years 1934, 1942, and 1943 (R. 567–568); that in 1937 he was unable to pay an income tax and penalty of $178.10 due for 1934 (R. 2849–2852); that during his employment by Cal-Neva, Inc., beginning in 1930, he received no salary and only one dividend which he lost by gambling (R. 1912, 2850); that an $1,800 judgment obtained

BLURRED COPY

[3] A second safety deposit box held on December 31, 1943, was used for overnight storage of the B–R Smoke Shoppe bank roll, of which a record was available, and sometimes as much as $700 in addition. (R. 1369, 1373–1374, 1939–1942; cf. 1357–1360, 1537.) A third box was not acquired until later. (R. 1369–1370, 1536.) The safe at 110 Eddy Street was used only to keep the previous day's receipts overnight. (R. 1536, 2076, 2096–2097.) The safe in the main office at 50–52 Mason Street was not acquired until 1944. (R. 1709–1711, 2515, 3607–3608.)

against him in 1938 was still outstanding in 1945 (R. 1282–1285); that he was still in debt to his brother at the end of 1943, although the brother had written off one amount as a bad debt at the end of 1942 (R. 2992, 3395); that he was expanding his interests rapidly during 1941, 1942, and 1943 by investing cash in the B–R Smoke Shoppe, 110 Eddy Street, the 186 Club, and the San Diego Social Club (supra, pp. 7–8); and that most of the money used to purchase the 186 Club was, in effect, borrowed from Nealis and Kopstick (R. 1425–1428). The only evidence of the amount of cash in Box 48 at the end of 1943[4] was Kyne's testimony that the amount there varied from day to day, sometimes being considerable and sometimes less (R. 1536), and that about $17,700 was placed in the box on December 3, 1943 (R. 1483–1484). However, the money in the box was used as needed in the various enterprises, particularly to purchase cashiers' checks to pay lay-off bets of the B–R Smoke Shoppe, and during that month of December cashiers' checks in excess of $20,000 were purchased. (R. 1416–1423, 1484; Ex. 116.)

In the Government's computation, the amount of federal income taxes paid was added to the increase in net worth in order to determine peti-

[4] Petitioner offered no evidence on the point, but contented himself with arguing that the Government's net worth proof was unreliable because it had failed to establish accurately the amount of cash in the box. (R. 2942–2984.)

tioner's true net income. Nothing was charged against petitioner for non-deductible living expenses, although the evidence clearly indicated that these were considerable. (Cf. R. 2923–2939.) For 1944 the computation showed a net income of $50,747.91, of which $31,747.91 was unreported. For 1945, the net income was $71,065.40, of which $11,747.04 was unreported. (Ex. 183, R. 3612–3613.)

The Motion for New Trial.—The jury's verdict was returned on February 22, 1952, and on February 29 a motion for a new trial was filed, together with an affidavit of defense counsel. (R. 106–120.) The affidavit alleged that on February 23 counsel had learned, through newspaper articles, of a probable attempt to influence a juror during the trial. No affidavits of anyone having first-hand knowledge of the incident were presented, but the newspaper articles attached to the affidavit of counsel reported that during the trial one of the jurors, an insurance and real estate man, was visited by one of his former clients who worked in a Reno gambling casino; that during their conversation the former client made a remark to the effect that the juror could get a lot of money out of the trial through the defense; that the juror told the judge that he thought the former client was kidding but, in view of the judge's admonitions not to discuss the case, had decided to report the incident; that the judge informed the prosecution, but not the defense, and had the Reno office of the FBI check on the story; that the FBI report confirmed the judge's belief that the remark was not meant seriously; that the judge had stated that the incident turned out to be harmless but, if there had been anything to it and the defense had been informed, it would have stifled the investigation. (R. 111–120.)

The motion asked that there be a trial to investigate the matter fully and to determine to what extent it had any effect on the jury and was prejudicial to the defendant, and that subpoenas be issued for the attendance at such trial, as witnesses, of the jurors, trial judge, members of the United States Attorney's office and other prosecuting counsel, the agents of the FBI, the person who communicated with the juror and others who participated in the incident. (R. 109–110.) When the motion for a new trial came on for argument, defense counsel in effect stated that he did not care to argue it (R. 93–94) and the motion was denied (R. 94, 120).

ARGUMENT

1. Petitioner contends (Pet. 17–21) that the Government's net worth computation failed to account for the amount of cash he had on hand at the starting point, December 31, 1943; that the computation is, therefore, meaningless as a measure of his net income for 1944 and 1945; and that, accordingly, the case should not have been permitted to go to the jury. The argument is without merit.

The ultimate question here is whether a reasonable mind could conclude that there was, beyond a reasonable doubt, no such amount of cash in safety deposit Box 48[5] on December 31, 1943, as would throw the Government's net worth computation substantially out of line. If so, the case was a proper one for the jury. Here, the Government made an exhaustive investigation from New York to Honolulu and over a period extending back to 1930. It was determined that petitioner was "broke" in 1937 and still had debts at the end of 1943. Furthermore, during 1941, 1942, and 1943 he had been rapidly sinking cash into the foundations of his gambling empire, and had borrowed $16,000 from Nealis and Kopstick in the process. See also supra, pp. 18–19. Neither petitioner nor Kyne would give the agents any explanation of the amount in the box, and this, of course, is an element a reasonable mind could and would consider. Bell v. United States, 185 F. 2d 302, 309 (C. A. 4th), certiorari denied, 340 U. S. 930. Indeed, the only affirmative evidence of its contents is Kyne's testimony that about $17,000 was placed there December 3, 1943; but [5] Petitioner mistakenly implies (Pet. 19–20) that the contents of the two safes are also material here. (See fn. 3, supra, p. 18.)

even if this amount were added to petitioner's net worth at the end of 1943, the Government's computation would still show unreported income in excess of $14,000 for 1944.

It would seem without dispute that a reasonable mind could fairly have concluded beyond a reasonable doubt that the amount in the box at the end of 1943 was immaterial, so far as the Government's net worth computation was concerned. The case was, therefore, properly submitted to the jury. Curley v. United States, 160 F. 2d 229, 232–233 (C. A. D. C.), certiorari denied, 331 U. S. 837; Gendelman v. United States, 191 F. 2d 993, 995 (C. A. 9th), certiorari denied, 342 U. S. 909; Stoppelli v. United States, 183 F. 2d 391 (C. A. 9th), certiorari denied, 340 U. S. 864. As the Court of Appeals said in its opinion (R. 3765):

> If a defendant could prevent a case of this type from being submitted to the jury merely by stating he had further assets not taken into consideration by the Government, yet refusing to disclose them, enforcement of the tax evasion provisions of the Internal Revenue Code would be completely frustrated. Skillful concealment cannot be made an invincible barrier to proof. United States v. Johnson [319 U. S. 503], at 518.

Here, where the probative force of the Government's evidence has the support of both courts below and of the jury, there is no occasion for further review by this Court. Cf. United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 518.

Nor is there any direct conflict on this point with either Bryan v. United States, 175 F. 2d 223 (C. A. 5),[6] or United States v. Fenwick, 177 F. 2d 488 (C. A. 7). In each of these cases there was a defective investigation and the Government was forced to admit that there might well be assets which it had not discovered. See 175 F. 2d at 226; 177 F. 2d at 491. But here the agents' investigation was as complete as it could be, and, though barred from direct information as to one asset by petitioner himself, they were able to develop enough evidence to negative the probability of any considerable accumulation of cash.

2. Petitioner contends (Pet. 21–23) that it was error to permit the Government to determine his net income for the years in question by computing the annual increases in the net worth of all his enterprises. He argues that Section 41 of the Internal Revenue Code (supra, pp. 3–4) permits the Government to determine net taxable income by computing the annual increase in net worth only in the case where the "method of accounting" employed by the taxpayer does not clearly reflect his income; that the evidence in this case established clearly inadequate books only in respect of the B-R Smoke Shoppe; that the errors in the books of the other enterprises "amounted to no more than normal accounting errors"; and that, therefore, a net worth computation was not permissible as to these other enterprises. There is no merit in this contention.

[6] Affirmed without consideration of this point when Bryan himself petitioned for a writ of certiorari from the refusal of the Court of Appeals to order the District Court to enter a judgment of acquittal instead of an order for a new trial, Bryan v. United States, 338 U. S. 552.

In the first place, assuming arguendo that Section 41 has any application to criminal cases,[7] neither the trial court nor the Court of Appeals was asked to make any such distinction between the B-R Smoke Shoppe and the other enterprises. To the contrary, the Government's net worth computation was objected to, and a directed verdict was requested, on the ground that, since the Government still retained some of petitioner's books and records, it should not be heard to say that the books of any of the enterprises were inadequate. (R. 2910–2916, 3465–3492; see also [7] The Government does not concede this. Criminal evasion of income taxes may be established by circumstantial evidence, and the circumstantial evidence provided by a solidly based net worth computation may be sufficient, in itself, to establish guilt, even though the taxpayer's method of accounting appears, on the face of his books, to reflect clearly his income. The civil case cited by petitioner, United States v. American Can Co., 280 U. S. 412, has nothing to do with net worth computations, which are, as the petitioner points out (Pet. 23), only approximations of net income. That case discusses "general methods of bookkeeping" (280 U. S., at 419), i. e., cash and accrual "methods of accounting".

R. 515–538, 2856, 2861.) And this was the theory of the requested instructions. (R. 79–87.) Secondly, the record is replete with evidence that the books of the gambling enterprises were utterly inadequate to reflect income. The books of the B-R Smoke Shoppe had only one entry a day representing profit or loss after all expenses; much the same situation prevailed at the 186 Club; the San Diego Social Club apparently had no records (R. 1275); daily records were systematically destroyed (R. 1966, 2380, 2628); the Menlo Club had no records for 1945, and for 1946 the daily receipts could not be reconciled with the bank accounts (R. 2794–2797).

The objection which petitioner did raise in the trial court, and which appears as a subsidiary argument in the petition (Pet. 23), that the proof of inadequacy was insufficient because all of the books and records were not in evidence, is patently insubstantial. The Government made a clear prima facie showing of the inadequacy of the records which petitioner was unable to rebut. In rejecting the motion for acquittal (R. 3469–3475), the trial court said (R. 3473):

> If you had pointed out during the course of the trial any specific book or record, I would have been inclined to consider with some thought the request, but there has been no request for any specific book or record and I believe the records of these different enterprises were kept with the knowledge of the defendant or his agents and if there was any record anywhere that would have been of service to the defendant in this case, they would have been able to point it out and ask the Court to have it produced and that wasn't done at any time in the course of this trial or in any proceeding prior to this trial.

3. In the 1945 net worth computation for the B–R Smoke Shoppe (R. 3601) the Government included a bank roll of $20,000. The witness Fritchitt had testified that $15,000 of this sum was "markers". (R. 1949, 1962, 1968.) Petitioner contends (Pet. 23–26) that the "markers" were accounts receivable; that they should have been excluded from the computation, since the B–R Smoke Shoppe was on a cash, not an accrual, basis; and that, since the Government's computation showed unreported income of only $11,747.04 for 1945, the conviction on the third and fourth counts has no substantial basis. It should be noted that this argument can affect only the fine, since the general prison sentence of five years would still be supported by either of the first two counts. Hirabayashi v. United States, 320 U. S. 81, 85, 105; Pinkerton v. United States, 328 U. S. 640, 641–642.

These "markers" were of two kinds. Some were deposited in the bank roll by petitioner and his associates when they withdrew cash from it. (R. 1298–1300, 1374–1375.) Others were IOU's from bettors who had lost. (R. 1360–1362, 1962.) Petitioner's argument is directed against "markers" of the latter type, since the former were obviously loans. (Pet. 25.) There is no direct evidence as to the proportion of either type contained in the $15,000 collection at the end of 1945, for Fritchitt made no distinction. (R. 1949, 1961, 1962, 1965, 1968.) But the jury could have inferred that the amount of bettors' "markers" was smaller, since there appear to have been a comparatively small amount of this type outstanding at the end of 1943 (R. 1360–1362), and since the business was closed for a large part of 1945 (R. 1297–1299, 1939). Furthermore, there was evidence in the record that bettors' "markers" were treated as cash assets (R. 1298–1300, 1375), and the Government's expert, Weaver, testified at length that they were in the nature of cash advances to bettors[8] (R. 2619–2626, 2722–2724, 2772–2782). Finally, it should be noted that, although the Government included no living expenses in its net worth computation (R. 3612–3613), it was actually proved that petitioner spent approximately $4,300 during 1945 for such items as clothing, jewelry and hotel bills (R. 586, 615, 619, 824, 843, 986, 1202–1204, 1212). In view of the necessary conclusion that he must have spent some substantial additional sum for ordinary living expenses, the jury would be warranted in finding a substantial understatement of income for 1945 even though the "markers" were excluded from consideration.

4. Petitioner contends (Pet. 16, 26–31) that the courts below erred in applying the rule of Commissioner v. Culbertson, 337 U. S. 733. That case holds that the test for recognition of a partnership for income tax purposes is the good faith intent of the partners. We find difficulty in understanding the basis of petitioner's present complaint, since this is exactly the test which he himself proposed to the trial court. Defendant's Requested Instruction No. 111 (R. 83–84), after describing in some detail the alleged agreements between petitioner and his associates, concludes with the following paragraph:

> Accordingly, unless you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant and his associates did not intend to operate said businesses as profit-sharing partners, you must treat the income of said businesses as partnership income and compute the defendant's tax only on his percentage share of the profits for each year. [Emphasis supplied.]

The trial court, while refusing to go into the specific details, gave what was, in effect, the same instruction. (R. 142, 143–144.) Petitioner objected to the refusal to give his requested instruction (R. 3495–3496), and in the Court of Appeals he simply argued that the charge as given was too general and that the trial court should have told the jury that the particular agreements in this case could have been partnerships, if so intended.

Moreover, the vice of the present contention rests in its confusion of two distinct issues, the bona fide intent to form a partnership and the wilfull intent to evade payment of income taxes. It may well be that associates frankly and openly enter into an agreement in which their intent, though insufficient to create partnership status, has no tinge of criminal evasion. Here, the jury was instructed on both these issues: the nature of partnerships, and criminal intent. (R. 133, 134–135, 140–141.) In other words, the jury necessarily found that petitioner had never intended to form a valid partnership and that he had wilfully intended to evade the payment of his income taxes by reporting only a portion of the partnership income. According to the petitioner,[9] the formation of a nominal partnership would prevent a jury from ever convicting a taxpayer, even though the purpose of the partnership form was

[9] "Where, as here, a taxpayer joins with others in the conduct of certain enterprises, his liability to include all of the income in his individual return is so uncertain that there is no basis on which a jury could properly convict him of knowingly and willfully failing to report the entire partnership income with intent to defraud the revenue." (Emphasis supplied.) (Pet. 29–30.)

for the very purpose of evading taxes. It seems quite obvious that tax evaders cannot be afforded such a ready device to avoid criminal penalties.

5. Petitioner contends (Pet. 3, 17, 31–34) that the trial court erred in denying his motions under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. An attempt is made to raise questions involving the scope of these rules in the light of this Court's decision in Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, 341 U. S. 214. In reality, however, petitioner's argument simply is that the rulings constitute an abuse of discretion. The language of the rules specifically reposes a large measure of discretion in the trial court. The facts have been set forth at some length in the Statement (supra, pp. 10–15), and we think they furnish ample justification for the denial of the motions.

At least as early as April 8, 1948, when his attorney refused to let him be interviewed by the agents, petitioner knew that criminal proceedings were a possibility. On July 11, 1949, his accountant, Semenza, was allowed by the agents to take all the records he wished. A second accountant, Friedman, was hired in March, 1950, for the specific purpose of looking into the criminal aspects of the case; he obtained the records Semenza had; he was allowed to examine all other records still in the Government's hands; and he remained in the case until November, 1950. Petitioner was indicted on April 9, 1951, and trial was set for November 7. In June, defense counsel were told to apply to the court if they could not get information they wanted from the Government. (R. 194.) Not until October 22 did they ask to see the records held by the Government. Although the conditions attached to the reply could easily have been complied with, on November 14 [10] petitioner filed a motion to inspect, coupled with a request for a four-month continuance to enable him to examine and collate the records. On November 27, the day before the trial, he presented a motion to produce the records.[11] The trial court denied both motions on the ground that Friedman had had ample opportunity to inspect the records and, under the circumstances, a request at this late date was unreasonable. (R. 194–198, 286–288.) As the Bowman Dairy case points out, the object of Rules 16 and 17 is to expedite trials. 341 U. S. at 220. Clearly, the trial judge was exercising his discretion in a reasonable manner.

[10] The trial had meanwhile been postponed to November 28 because of the congestion of the court's calendar. (R. 180, 264.)

[11] The Court of Appeals pointed out that petitioner had had ample prior opportunity to examine the records. The petition states (Pet. 32) that this was in connection with his civil liability, obviously referring to Semenza's examination in 1949. But Friedman's examination was in 1950, after petitioner had been officially told that criminal proceedings were contemplated, and Friedman was specifically retained to look into the criminal aspect.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

There is no conflict with decisions cited by petitioner. The Bowman Dairy case involved the scope of the rules, i. e., the types of documents to which they apply. The same is true of Fryer v. United States (C. A. D. C.), decided July 7, 1953.[12] Gordon v. United States, 344 U. S. 414, involved a motion to produce a specific document made during the trial. Whenever petitioner made such a request for specific documents during this trial, there was immediate compliance (supra, p. 15), and, as the trial court pointed out at the end of the trial, petitioner certainly would have known if any essential record was still in the Government's possession. (R. 3470–3474.) At no time in the Court of Appeals, or in the present petition, has petitioner been able to show that the rulings on these motions were prejudicial.

6. Petitioner contends (Pet. 3–4, 17, 34–37) that it was error to deny his motion for a new trial or for a hearing to determine whether there had been a prejudicial outside contact with a juror during the trial. There is no basis for this contention.

In the first place, although petitioner states (Pet. 34) that his "affidavit was filed promptly upon learning of the incident after the jury had returned its verdict," the verdict was actually returned on February 22; the affidavit states that [12] A petition for a writ of certiorari has been filed by the United States. United States v. Fryer, No. 311, this Term.

BLURRED COPY

the facts were discovered on February 23; yet the affidavit and the motion were not filed until February 29. Petitioner complains (Pet. 34) that the only thing in the record on the juror incident is his own affidavit "calling to the attention of the District Court the stories which had appeared in two newspapers." (Emphasis added.) But petitioner fails to explain why, with six days at his disposal, he furnished no affidavits from persons who might have had knowledge of the alleged incident, or why he was content to rest his motion on two newspaper clippings, or, indeed, why he failed to avail himself of the opportunity in the District Court to argue the matter orally. (R. 93–94.) These facts alone warranted the District Court, in its discretion, to deny the motion on the grounds that petitioner had not shown the requisite prejudice.

Moreover, as the Court of Appeals held, the allegations of the affidavit and the motion were insufficient to show that there had in fact been the necessary outside contact with a juror. Thus, assuming that outside contact with a juror is presumptively prejudicial, there must be at least a prima facie showing that there was such a contact in order to warrant a hearing. As the court below stated (R. 3777):

> Appellant relied solely upon the affidavit of defense counsel stating what counsel had learned through the newspapers. If any jurors had received communications from > the trial court or the Federal Bureau of Investigation of a nature which would tend to prejudice them against appellant, or had been subjected to other extraneous influences, such fact could have been appropriately presented by submitting affidavits of the jurors themselves.

Where petitioner, with six days to obtain affidavits to make such a showing, based his request on two newspaper clippings and chose not to argue the question in open court, it seems quite clear that the District Court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion.

CONCLUSION

The points raised by the petition are largely factual. They have been determined adversely to petitioner by the jury, the trial court, and the unanimous Court of Appeals. No question of general importance is presented and no further review by this Court is required. The petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.

Respectfully submitted.

In the Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1953

No. 304

ELMER F. REMMER, PETITIONER

v.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3748–3777) is reported at 205 F. 2d 277.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals was entered on May 28, 1953 (R. 3778), and a petition for rehearing was denied June 30, 1953 (R. 3779). On July 17, 1953, by order of Mr. Justice Clark, the time for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari was extended to August 29, 1953. The petition was filed August 28, 1953, and was granted on November 16, 1953 (R. 3781). The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U. S. C. 1254 (1). See also Rules 37 (b) (2) and 45 (a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

Petitioner was convicted of wilfully attempting to evade income taxes for the years 1944 and 1945. The Government's proof of unreported income was based mainly upon evidence of annual increases in his net worth. The questions presented are:

1. Whether it was proper for the Government to present evidence of unexplained annual increases in petitioner's net worth in order to show that he had not reported all of his taxable income for the years concerned.

2. Whether the evidence was sufficient to warrant submission of the case to the jury and to support the verdict. The following specific factual issues are raised: (a) as to the "starting point" of the Government's net worth computation; (b) as to the inclusion of $15,000 in so-called "markers" in the net worth computation for the year 1945; (c) as to whether certain enterprises were owned by petitioner solely or in partnership with others. A question is also presented as to whether the jury was properly instructed on the latter issue.

3. Whether the trial court abused its discretion in denying petitioner's motions to inspect certain of his records held by the Government, in view of his prior opportunities to examine these records and the belated filing of the motions.

4. Whether the case should be remanded to the district court for the purpose of holding a hearing to inquire into the facts concerning an alleged improper contact between one of the jurors and a third person.[1]

STATUTE AND RULES INVOLVED

Internal Revenue Code:

> SEC. 41. GENERAL RULE.
>
> The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the Commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 48 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of calendar year.

STATEMENT

On April 3, 1951, an indictment in six counts was filed against petitioner in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada, charging violations of Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code. The first and second counts alleged that petitioner wilfully attempted to defeat and evade income taxes due and owing by himself and his wife for the year 1944 in the amount of $27,379.08. The third and fourth counts charged evasion of his own and his wife's income taxes for the year 1945 in the amount of $11,090.34. The fifth and sixth counts charged similar evasion for the year 1946 in the amount of $117,129.62 (R. 3–8.) The trial began November 28, 1951, and lasted approximately three months. Petitioner was convicted on the first four counts, the jury failing to agree as to the counts involving the year 1946. (R. 88, 3667.) On February 29, 1952, he was sentenced to imprisonment for five years and fined $5,000 on each of the first four counts. The terms of imprisonment were made to run concurrently, but the fines were cumulative. (R. 89–91.) The conviction was affirmed unanimously by the Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. (R. 3748–3777.)

A. THEORY OF THE GOVERNMENT'S CASE

The indictment charged that petitioner had attempted to evade income taxes by underreporting his and his wife's net taxable income. The theory of the evidence presented by the Government at the trial was that there were large annual increases in petitioner's net worth in 1944, 1945 and 1946; that the only reasonable explanation of these increases was that they represented current taxable income; and that the amounts of taxable income thus proved were considerably greater than the amounts reported by petitioner in his own and his wife's returns. Petitioner was on a cash basis, and the net worth computation was made on the same basis. (R. 2621–2628, 2719–2728, 2760–2780; Br. 20.) The starting point of the net worth computation was December 31, 1943. According to the computation, petitioner's income for 1944, 1945 and 1946 was, respectively, $50,747.91, $71,065.40, and $254,285.42. In the respective returns for those years petitioner reported income of $19,000, $59,318.36 and $22,489.58.[2] (R. 3612–3613; Ex. 183.)

In the trial court petitioner moved for a judgment of acquittal on the ground that the net worth computation was an insufficient basis from which the jury could find that he had failed to report substantial portions of his taxable income for the years involved. The sufficiency of the computation was challenged on two principal grounds: (1) that the Government failed to prove that all of petitioner's assets as of December 31, 1943, were included in the computation, thus failing to establish a solid starting point (R. 2942–2970, 2982–2984, 3476–3477); and (2) that the Government failed to prove that certain ostensible partnerships were mere shams and were, in reality, sole proprietorships of petitioner[3]

[2] Petitioner and his wife split this income on the community property basis and filed individual returns. (R. 3519–3528.)

[3] In addition to his attack upon the computation as insufficient evidence of unreported income, petitioner also contended that the Gove nment had failed to show that his books

(R. 2970–2976, 3478–3483). The motion for acquittal was denied by the district court. (R. 3492). Both contentions were renewed, unsuccessfully, in the Court of Appeals. (R. 3762–3770.) In this Court petitioner again urges (Br. 26–31) that the evidence was insufficient to establish the starting point of the computation. He also now renews his attack (Br. 37–41) upon the sufficiency of the evidence as to the sole proprietorships, although this point appeared to have been abandoned in the petition for a writ of certiorari. (See Pet. pp. 2–4, 16–17, 26–31.)

B. EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT THE GOVERNMENT'S CASE

The evidence to support the conclusion that petitioner failed to report all his taxable income may be summarized as follows:

1. Businesses in which petitioner had interests.—During the taxable years involved in this case petitioner had business interests in the following enterprises:

NEVADA:

Cal-Neva, Inc., a lodge and gambling room astride the Nevada-California state line at the shore of Lake Tahoe (R. 1595); and records were inadequate, and that the use of the net worth method was, therefore, improper. (R. 2910–2916, 3465–3476.) This contention was renewed in the Court of Appeals (R. 3762–3763), and is one of the points raised in this Court (Br. 20–26).

---

SAN FRANCISCO:

B-R Smoke Shoppe, a horse race bookmaking establishment at 50 Mason Street (R. 1287–1288)—across the front of the building were general offices for all the San Francisco enterprises (R. 1662, 1667);

110 Eddy Street, a bar located at that address (R. 1382, 2076);

186 Club, a gambling room at 186 Eddy Street, devoted to draw poker and operating twenty-four hours a day (R. 643, 1970–1973);

Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store, a cigar, liquor and magazine store located in the front of the building which housed the 186 Club (R. 1451);

Menlo Club, a gambling house not far from the offices at 50 Mason Street, open twenty-four hours a day and operated in conjunction with a bar and restaurant[4] (R. 768–772, 1405, 3582);

Transit Smoke Shop, a combined gambling house, cigar and liquor store (R. 1478);

EL CERRITO:[5]

San Diego Social Club, a gambling casino (R. 1055);

21 Club, a restaurant and bar occupying the front of the building housing the gambling casino (R. 1055);

311 Club, another gambling club located across the street (R. 1117–1118).

As petitioner points out (Br. 34), the paramount issue at the trial was whether four of the San Francisco enterprises—B-R Smoke Shoppe, 110 Eddy Street, Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store and Menlo Club—were his own sole proprietorships, or were bona fide partnerships between petitioner and his associates.

2. Acquisition of the businesses.—The majority of the businesses were acquired prior to 1944, the first of the years involved in this case. However, the amount of cash used to purchase these earlier interests was small in comparison with the sums similarly expended during 1944, 1945 and 1946.

In 1926 Graham, McKay and Hall borrowed money from a bank and bought the Cal-Neva Lodge. Petitioner contributed no money, but he was the active manager and he was given an equal share in the business. The lodge was incorporated in 1929 as Cal-Neva, Inc., all four associates receiving about the same amount of stock. When Hall died around 1940 the corporation bought in his shares. (R. 1903–1906, 1929.)

Petitioner began to acquire his interests in San Francisco late in 1941. In December of that year the B-R Smoke Shoppe was purchased as a going concern, petitioner paying the purchase price of $2,500 and supplying the original bank roll of $7,500 necessary for operation of the horse race book. (R. 1288–1290, 1347–1348.) Around August 1942 petitioner and his associates took over the tavern at 110 Eddy Street in order to protect a $4,000 debt owed to petitioner by the proprietor, Clarence Bent, and petitioner spent a considerable sum on improvements. No one else put up any money except Arthur Pratt, who turned over $3,400 to petitioner after the two had reached an oral agreement that Pratt would receive a one-third interest. This money was used to pay some of the improvement bills. (R. 1383–1384, 1398, 2242–2246.) In March 1943 petitioner and his associates bought the combined 186 Club and Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store as a going concern. The sum of $16,000 needed for the purchase of the gambling club was obtained from Nealis and Kopstick and they were given a one-sixth interest in the business. Petitioner supplied about $6,000 for the purchase of the cigar and liquor store. Details of the transaction were handled by William Kyne, who acted as general manager for all the San Francisco enterprises. (R. 643–647, 1424–1427, 1451.)

Meanwhile, petitioner had begun to acquire interests across the bay in El Cerrito. In April or May 1943 he purchased the property which housed the San Diego Social Club and the 21

BLURRED COPY

Club. He provided the $25,000 required for the purchase, but the property was put in the name of his attorney because of the jealousy of other gamblers in that area. He operated the two businesses jointly with Pechart and Kessel, but there is no evidence that they provided any of the initial investment. (R. 742–746, 1109–1110.) In 1944 Pechart and Kessel set up another gambling house across the street, the 311 Club. There is no evidence that petitioner contributed anything to this enterprise, but the 1944 partnership return shows him as a partner, and Pechart and Kessel testified that they gave him a five or ten percent "friendship bonus" because he did not approve of the new club. (R. 1115–1121, 1143–1147, 1161–1162.)

Acquisitions during the taxable years with which this case is concerned, 1944, 1945 and 1946, involved the outlay of considerable sums by petitioner. Arthur Pratt, not being able to discover how the tavern business at 110 Eddy Street was being conducted, sold his interest to petitioner for $6,800 in March 1944.[6] (R. 2245–2270.) The $16,000 invested by Nealis and Kopstick in the 186 Club was returned to them in installments as promptly as the money came in to the club, payment being completed early in 1944. The money was turned over to them by Kyne who got it from a bank safe deposit box (Box 48) which was used as a general depository for the funds of all the San Francisco enterprises. (R. 1427–1428, 1518.) In 1945 petitioner purchased additional property contiguous to the San Diego Social Club in El Cerrito for approximately $12,000, and again title was transferred to his attorney. (R. 746–749, 754–756.) In April 1945 petitioner contracted with Gene Schriber to purchase the Menlo Club for $175,000 and took a ten year lease on the premises at a total rent of $219,000. Most of the El Cerrito property was used as security for the notes given by petitioner. The lease was put in the name of Billington, a boyhood friend and employee. Schriber received $75,000 of the purchase price during 1945,—a cash payment of $25,000 from petitioner at the time the contract was signed, and checks on the Menlo Club account amounting to $50,000 later in the year.[7] Cash for deposits to cover these checks was given to Maundrell, the club bookkeeper, either by petitioner or

[6] Pratt had borrowed $2,000 from petitioner in the latter part of 1943. He received an additional $4,800 when he sold his interest to petitioner in March 1944. (R. 2250–2252.)

[7] Schriber and Maundrell, both friendly to petitioner, testified that the total paid to Schriber in 1945 was only $50,000 instead of $75,000. Schriber himself had no record of the payments he had received. A page from the Menlo Club ledger, Exhibit 140, supported the testimony. However, there was evidence that Exhibit 140 had been substituted, prior to trial and while the ledger was in petitioner's possession, for the original record of the transaction, Exhibit 125C, which showed payment of $75,000 in 1945. (R. 1719–1740, 1796–1802, 1816–1824, 2466–2476, 2689–2715, particularly 1722–1729, 2689–2705.)

by the club manager. A further payment was made in 1946. (R. 749–756, 768–784, 799–800, 1732–1733, 1817–1822, 2469–2478.) In November 1946 Gordon Partee asked petitioner to buy the Transit Smoke Shop. Petitioner told him to talk to Kyne, and Kyne gave him approximately $32,000 to complete the purchase. Petitioner supplied the money and Kyne obtained it from safe deposit Box 48, mentioned above. The business was ostensibly a partnership between petitioner, Partee and Kyne. Partee put up no money, but Kyne borrowed a little over $16,000 from the Menlo Club account to pay for his share and put this money into Box 48. (R. 1183–1193, 1474–1478, 1495–1496, 1523, 1566, 1586–1587, 1762–1763.)

In July 1946 petitioner entered into an agreement to buy all the stock of Cal-Neva, Inc., from Graham and McKay for $466,666.66. Although there was at that time only $75,000 in the corporation, petitioner made a payment of $100,000 in September. (R. 1905–1910, 1917.) In November 1945 petitioner bought an interest in a New York night club for $12,000. Checks were drawn on the Menlo Club account for this amount and Maundrell, the bookkeeper, was given the cash for deposit. Petitioner told Kyne, who was then stationed in an army camp in North Carolina, to take a look at the place because Kyne had a "piece" of it. This was news to Kyne. The venture shortly failed and $8,000 of the original investment was returned, not to the Menlo Club,

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

but to petitioner. (R. 1379–1382, 1668–1669, 1836–1838.)

3. Operation of the businesses.—The San Francisco enterprises were purchased and launched, as has been seen, almost entirely with money supplied by petitioner. These businesses had a main office and a general manager. The books and records were, for the most part, kept by a single bookkeeper. And a common fund was maintained for the operation of all of them.

Kyne was the general manager of the San Francisco enterprises.[8] He handled the money and the records; he engaged the clerks and the bookkeepers, with the exception of Maundrell; and the managers of the various individual businesses were subordinate to him. (R. 1494, 1552, 1557–1558.) Most of his time was spent in the management of the B-R Smoke Shoppe, the bookmaking establishment. (R. 1290–1291, 1295–1297, 1349, 1356.) Each day, however, he visited the other locations for a few minutes to pick up the receipts and the gambling records. The records he stored in the main offices at 50 Mason Street; the receipts he placed either in the safe in the main offices or in safe deposit Box 48, to which reference has already been made. (R. 1406, 1411, 1430–1432, 1694–1698.) If the money he had collected in one location was needed for the expenses of another, he used it for that purpose. (R. 1412.) He supplied data on the San Francisco enterprises to the person who prepared petitioner's individual income tax returns.[9] (R. 1533–1534.)

[8] The managers of the individual businesses were: 186 Club, Busterna (R. 1971); 110 Eddy Street, Cavani and Turner (R. 1385); Menlo Club, Ditto and Nelson in the gambling room, Maundrell in the office and restaurant (R. 1597, 1693, 1769); Transit Smoke Shop, Partee (R. 1196). Kyne, himself, managed the B–R Smoke Shoppe (R. 1356) and, apparently, the Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store (R. 1452).

Slater was the original bookkeeper. (R. 1384, 1985, 2076, 2096.) Maundrell, who had been in charge of the dining room and hotel accommodations at Cal-Neva, Inc., was brought to San Francisco in 1945 upon purchase of the Menlo Club and put in charge of the books of that establishment. He was described by Kyne as petitioner's bookkeeper. (R. 1392.) After Kyne's departure for the army [10] and the death of Slater, Maundrell became bookkeeper for all the San Francisco businesses with an office at 50 Mason Street.[11] (R. 1392, 1593–1601, 1637–1638.)

The main offices were located at 50–52 Mason Street, the same building which housed the B-R Smoke Shoppe. During 1944, 1945 and 1946 close to $10,000 was spent in remodeling the front of [9] These returns were prepared by Mooney, a deputy collector in the Internal Revenue office in Nevada. Mooney took vacations in San Francisco, at petitioner's expense, and obtained the figures while there. (R. 876–892, 956, 1534.)

[10] Kyne was in the service from February 1945 to June 1946. (R. 1379.)

[11] The B–R Smoke Shoppe records were handled by Kyne, and during Kyne's absence by Pritchett (referred to in the record as Fritchett). (R. 1938, 1946–1947.)

this building into offices for petitioner, Kyne and Maundrell. The improvements were paid for by checks drawn on an account in the names of petitioner and Maundrell, in which Maundrell deposited receipts from the Menlo Club bar and restaurant and other funds given him by petitioner for particular purposes. These particular checks given in payment for the construction of the offices were covered by deposits of cash given to Maundrell for that specific purpose either by petitioner or by the manager of the gambling room at the Menlo Club. No account was set up on the Menlo Club books to reflect these transactions. (R. 1432, 1650–1657, 1662–1683, 1694–1699, 1744–1753, 2513–2518, 2660–2673.) A large safe was placed in the main office during 1944. Only petitioner, Kyne and Maundrell knew the combination, and there was a combination lock box inside to which only petitioner and Kyne had access.[12] (R. 1535–1537, 1696–1699, 1709–1714, 1943–1945, 2515, 3607–3608.) There was also a storeroom in the building which was used as a warehouse to keep whiskey for the San Francisco bars. (R. 1481–1482.)

Safe deposit Box 48, to which several references have already been made, was maintained in the names of petitioner and Kyne. It was used by Kyne as a depository for cash from all the enterprises, and this cash was treated as a common fund and was used by Kyne wherever needed. (R. 1368–1369, 1411–1412, 1431, 1475, 1536, 1544–1545.) Other funds belonging to petitioner, not derived from any of the San Francisco enterprises, were also placed in Box 48 and were used by Kyne in the San Francisco enterprises as the need arose. (R. 1484.) This common treatment of the funds of all the businesses is further exemplified in the acquisition of the Transit Smoke Shop (supra, p. 13); in the use of the Menlo Club account standing in the names of petitioner and Maundrell to pay expenses at other locations and to pay petitioner's personal expenses (supra, p. 16; see R. 1650–1686); in the withdrawal of large sums from the Menlo Club by petitioner (R. 1414–1415, 1455); and in the transfer of equipment from one enterprise to another (R. 2071–2072). Kyne could not remember the amounts kept in Box 48. He said that he had kept a daily record but that he had given it to Slater. No record was available at the trial.[13] (R. 1536, 1559–1560.)

Petitioner himself was in Nevada each year during the period between April and October, [13] In addition to Box 48, two other bank safe deposit boxes are mentioned in the record. Box 39813, acquired on February 24, 1943, in the names of Kyne and Pritchett, was used for overnight storage of the B–R Smoke Shoppe bankroll. (R. 1369, 1373–1374, 1939–1942.) Box 730, acquired in 1944 in the names of Kyne and Henry Clay (an alias for petitioner), was used only for storage of papers. (R. 1369–1370, 1536, 1558–1559.)

since Graham and McKay were absent from the state and had to leave the management of Cal-Neva, Inc., entirely in his hands. (R. 1325–1326, 1906.) The gambling club in El Cerrito, the San Diego Social Club, was managed chiefly by men who were also employed by petitioner at Cal-Neva, Inc. Kessel, who testified that petitioner and Pechart were his partners in the business, said that he and Pechart were the active managers. However, Pechart said that he took no active part and that the management was in the hands of petitioner's men, and Kessel also admitted that these men were managers in the gambling room. The bookkeeper for Pechart and Kessel also testified that petitioner's men were operating managers. (R. 1063–1067, 1112–1114, 1128, 1135–1136, 1139, 1596.) The restaurant and bar in the same building, the 21 Club, was managed by Billington, the boyhood friend of petitioner in whose name the Menlo Club lease was placed and who had also worked at the 110 Eddy Street bar in San Francisco. (R. 787–792.) Cavani, who had originally been selected by petitioner as manager of the 21 Club was switched to 110 Eddy Street by petitioner upon the death of Clarence Bent.[14] (R. 2067–2071, 2083–2084.) The other gambling club in El Cerrito, the 311 Club, was operated by Pechart and Kessel and the evidence does not indicate that petitioner had any active part in the management, although the 1944 income tax return of the club listed him as a partner. The records of all three El Cerrito businesses had, however, been delivered to petitioner by Pechart about two weeks after the indictment in this case, and they were not available at the trial. (R. 1103–1104, 1138, 1142.)

[14] Cavani had worked for petitioner as a bartender at Cal-Neva Inc., for many years. (R. 2067.)

4. Ownership of the businesses.—We have already referred (supra, p. 10), to the fact that at the trial the paramount issue was whether four of the San Francisco enterprises were bona fide partnerships, or sole proprietorships of petitioner. These were the B–R Smoke Shoppe, the bar at 110 Eddy Street, the Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store, and the Menlo Club. We shall summarize the evidence as to the ownership of these four, and reference will also be made to the similar treatment of some of the other enterprises.

The Government was forced to present its case through the testimony of the men who operated the San Francisco businesses, Kyne, Maundrell, Lando, Cavani, Busterna, Casselini and Partee, all of whom testified that they held partnership status in the particular businesses with which they were associated. With the exception of the Transit Smoke Shop, all of the so-called partnerships began, according to these witnesses, with oral agreements. All the oral agreements were between petitioner and one of the so-called partners, and there is no evidence of any three or four way agreements. (R. 1400, 1513–1523, 1635.) Petitioner had, as we have seen above, contributed almost all the original capital as each new venture was launched. His associates testified that petitioner gave them "working interests" in return for the services they were to contribute. Each associate was assigned a certain percentage of the profits of each business in which he had received a share. These profits were not to be withdrawn, however, but were to be left in the business until a sufficient sum had been accumulated to repay petitioner the amount of his original investment. Meanwhile the profits were to be credited to the individual partners on the books, thus building up their "equities" in the business.[15] (R. 1341–1342, 1382, 1497–1523, 1634–1635.)

None of these oral agreements were reduced to writing until November 4, 1946, after internal revenue agents had already begun the investigation which led to the present prosecution.[16] On that date petitioner signed agreements with Kyne and Maundrell as to the Menlo Club, effective retroactively to May 1, 1945, the date the property

[15] Several of the so-called partners, Busterna, Casselini and Cavani, were extremely vague about their "working interests". (R. 1976, 1986, 2011–2016, 2026, 2078–2081, 2109–2110.)

[16] A written agreement was also drawn up between petitioner, Kyne and Partee for the Transit Smoke Shop, which was acquired November 21, 1946. (R. 1189–1190.)

was acquired by petitioner.[17] (R. 2115, 2123, 2152, 2163, 2454–2457, 3582–3583, 3585–3586.) Both Kyne and Maundrell stated that the written agreements were the same as their prior oral agreements. (R. 1503–1504, 1635.) The most pertinent portions of Kyne's agreement, substantially identical with Maundrell's, are as follows (R. 3582–3583; Ex. 113):

> Whereas, it is the desire of First Party to sell, assign and convey to said Second Party a 15% interest in and to said social room business and in and to said restaurant business; and

The following facts appear as to the treatment of the so-called partners' shares in the various businesses:

The supposed partners in the B-R Smoke Shoppe were petitioner, Kyne and Lando, and it was petitioner who supplied all the capital. (R. 1346–1348.) Lando's duties were to fix the odds on horse races. (R. 1291, 1323.) He testified that he received no salary. (R. 1298.) The partnership return for 1944 showed that he was entitled to only $300 as his share of net income, and he testified that he thought 1945 was a loss year. (R. 1329–1330, 3530.) He stated that the partners had an accounting at the end of each year, but that he had never seen the partnership returns, and that he could not recall how much of an "equity" he had acquired by the end of 1946. (R. 1298, 1301, 1318.) Kyne was in charge of the records, the layoff bets, and the money. (R. 1295, 1349, 1356.) He received a salary of $10 a day before he entered the army but not after he returned. (R. 1355.) He stated that he believed 1946 was a losing year. (R. 1562.) It was impossible to tell from the records how much of an "equity" Kyne and Lando had built up, since the records contained no capital accounts and consisted of only one figure a day, win or lose, and most of those for 1945 had been destroyed on petitioner's orders.[18] (R. 1349–1352, 1946, 1964–1966.) Kyne could not recall whether petitioner's original investment had been returned to him out of earnings. (R. 1567.) The size of the business appears from the fact that it issued cashier's [18] The records did contain notations of certain amounts, but Kyne could not recall whether they represented money owing to or by the partnership. (R. 1366.)

BLURRED COPY

checks in the amount of $428,000 to other bookmakers during 1943.[19] (R. 1416–1424, 1954.)

The original partners at 110 Eddy Street, which petitioner took over to protect $4,000 owed him by Bent, were Bent, Pratt, petitioner, and Kyne, the two latter holding a joint one-third interest. (R. 1383, 1389.) After the death of Bent and the purchase of Pratt's interest by petitioner, the equal partners were petitioner, Kyne, Cavani and Turner. (R. 1385.) Kyne testified that he had never received any profits from the business, but said that he had reported his proportionate share of the income each year and had received money from the bookkeeper to pay the taxes due on such share.[20] (R. 1386–1392, 1515–1516; cf. 3531–3535.) He was unable to say what his "equity" in the business was. (R. 2236.) During his period in the army Kyne had made affidavit that he and petitioner owned the equipment and that Cavani and Turner "do not own any interest in the business, except a working interest, that is, they work for us for a salary and a cut of the profits." (R. 3588; Ex. 153.) This distinction between partners he sought to explain away at the trial. (R. 2235–2239, 2271–2293.) Cavani received a weekly salary. The only share of profits he received was

[19] Kyne did state that the majority of these resulted from layoff bets on which the partnership received no profit. (R. 1581.)

[20] In 1943 in fact he reported two-thirds of the income as his own, although it actually belonged to petitioner. (R. 1386–1390.)

$1,500 in 1946. The books showed that he had received money each year to pay income taxes on his proportionate share of the net income and he admitted that the bookkeeper had brought him such checks to sign. He had no idea what his "equity" was at the end of 1946. (R. 2073, 2079–2081, 2090–2095, 2100–2104, 2106–2107.) Petitioner, it appeared, had withdrawn $9,000 at one time and $3,000 at another. (R. 2077–2078, 2110.) When Bent died in 1943 his sister was paid $3,500 which Kyne obtained from Box 48. (R. 1569–1570.) Pratt, the only one who had contributed capital aside from petitioner, was bought out by petitioner early in 1944 for $6,800. (Supra, p. 12.)

The purported partners in the Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store were petitioner, Kyne and Lando. Lando made no investment, was informed by petitioner that he had a one-third interest, took no part in the operation, received no profits, and apparently did not know how much of an "equity" he had acquired. He was credited in the returns with a share of the profits and received money to pay his income taxes on that share, but said that he understood the profits were to be left in the business to build up the inventory. (R. 1312–1315, 1338–1342.) Kyne's wife received $10 a day from the business while he was in the service and he received $12.50 a day after he returned. He received no other share of the profits. Yet for 1943 he reported a net profit of about $8,500 from the business on his individual income tax return. This was the total profit of the business and he paid the tax on all of it. Slater and Maundrell kept the books and took inventory. Kyne also stated that he understood that the profits were being put into increased inventory and that petitioner was to be repaid his investment before profits were to be drawn by himself and Lando. (R. 1451–1473, 1520–1523, 1540–1541.)

The original purported partners in the Menlo Club were petitioner, 40%; Kyne, 15%; Ditto, Nelson, Maundrell and Fricker, 10% apiece; and Turner, 5%.[21] After 1945 Ditto and Fricker dropped out. Petitioner's share was increased to 55% and Nelson's, to 15%. (R. 1703–1705.) Kyne was in the army when the business was acquired in April 1945, and he was not advised of his interest by petitioner until he returned in June 1946. He drew neither salary nor profits, he did not know whether petitioner's original investment had been returned, and he did not know the amount of his own "equity" at the end of 1946. (R. 1400, 1403–1404, 1509–1513.) Maundrell received a salary but no profits during 1945 and 1946. His share was recorded in his capital account on the books and he drew a sufficient amount to pay income taxes on his annual share,[22] but it was not until 1948, shortly before he left the club, that his account reveals withdrawals of accrued profits for other than tax purposes. At the time of his departure he drew out $12,000, leaving him a balance on the books of about $1,750.[23] (R. 1705–1708, 1806–1810.) There was a wide discrepancy between the partners' capital accounts as they appeared in the books and as they appeared in the partnership return. (R. 1856–1857.) The club books did not reveal that Ditto and Fricker received any of their accumulated profits when they left after 1945 or how these profits were disposed of.[24] (R. 1708–1709, 1858–1860, 1883–1886.) In November 1946 Kyne withdrew $65,000 from the Menlo Club account at petitioner's request and turned it over to petitioner in thousand dollar bills. (R. 1414–1415.)

[21] Ditto, Nelson, Fricker and Turner were not available as witnesses at the trial. (R. 2106, 2919–2921.) It may also be noted that Slater, Nealis and Kopstick were dead. (R. 2004, 2175.)

The 186 Club began as an ostensible partnership between petitioner, Kyne, Lando, Busterna, Casselini, Nealis and Kopstick. (R. 1303–1304,

[22] The purported shares of all the partners were similarly recorded in the Menlo Club books, and all of them drew on their accounts to pay taxes. (R. 1808, 1833.) Nelson's account revealed some withdrawals of cash, not for taxes, beginning with March 1947. (R. 1828–1836.)

[23] This was, of course, long after the revenue agents had begun the investigation.

[24] In answer to a question by defense counsel Maundrell stated that he had seen an acknowledgment by Ditto that he had received $14,000 on leaving. It then appeared that Maundrell had never heard of this until defense counsel showed him the acknowledgment the previous evening. (R. 1897, 1901.)

1426.) Later, upon orders of Deputy Collector Mooser, who had investigated the business,[25] a corporate form was assumed and Busterna, Casselini, Kyne and Lando became officers. (R. 1303, 1331–1332, 1553–1555, 2011–2015.) There were no officers' meetings and no shares of stock. (R. 1305, 1981, 2034.) Kyne received neither salary nor profits, although the corporate return apparently stated that he was a salaried officer. (R. 1431.) The same was true of Casselini and Lando, although they were given money to pay income taxes on the salary they were supposed to get. (R. 1305, 1334, 1431, 2030, 2034, 2044–2048.) Neither received anything upon withdrawal from the business in 1945. (R. 1337–1338, 1428–1429, 2031.) Busterna, the president, was not even aware that there was a corporation and had little understanding of the nature of the business. (R. 1976–1982, 2023–2024.) He received $25 a day and $5,000 each Christmas, but he was uncertain what this latter amount represented. (R. 1976, 1982–1983, 2011, 2015–2016.) According to the corporate returns he received a salary of $6,000 in one year and $4,500 in the other. (R. 3556, 3575.) Nealis and Kopstick, the only ones who had originally contributed capital other than petitioner, were repaid by

[25] Mooser impressed upon Kyne that the records of the club, which, like the B-R Smoke Shoppe records, contained but one figure each day representing a gain or loss, were altogether inadequate. (R. 1436, 1568, 2378–2379, 2392–2393.)

early 1944 as promptly as the money came in. (R. 1427–1428, 1518.)

The partners in the Transit Smoke Shop were Partee, Kyne and petitioner. This business was acquired in November 1946 after the investigation of petitioner's returns had begun, and there appears to have been a distribution of profits to partners. However, Kyne put the $1,000 he received into Box 48 and may have used it for one of the other enterprises. (R. 1191–1192, 1477–1478.)

5. Starting point of net worth computation.— As has been noted (supra, p. 30), the second challenge to the sufficiency of the Government's computation of increases in petitioner's net worth was that the Government had failed to establish that all of his assets as of December 31, 1943, had been taken into account.

The Government conducted a widespread and exhaustive investigation to determine petitioner's assets as of that date. (R. 2458–2465, 2534–2547, 2558–2559, 2566–2567, 2801–2802.) As a result, the items in the Government's schedule of assets and liabilities were essentially the same as those submitted by petitioner (compare Ex. 183 with Ex. M–1; R. 3612–3613, 3626–3628), and the dispute as to the accuracy of the Government's starting point net worth narrowed to two issues: (1) whether the San Francisco businesses acquired prior to December 31, 1943, were bona fide partnerships; and (2) whether the amount of cash in Box 48 was insufficient to make any substantial difference in the net worth starting point. As to the first issue, the Government, on the strength of the evidence set out above, credited petitioner with all the assets of the San Francisco businesses acquired prior to December 31, 1943. As to the second, the Government reasoned that the amount of cash in Box 48 at the starting point was too small to make any difference and simply marked this item in the computation with a question mark.[26] The evidence to support this reasoning is as follows:

Prior to 1944 petitioner reported taxable income only for the years 1934, 1942 and 1943. (R. 567–568.) In 1937 he was "broke" and unable to pay a tax and delinquent penalty in the amount of $178.10 still owing for the year 1934. (R. 2849–2852.) During all the period he managed Cal-Neva, Inc., beginning in 1930, he received no salary and only one dividend which he promptly gambled away. (R. 1912, 2850.) An $1,800 judgment obtained against him in 1938 remained un-

[26] Box 39813 (supra, p. 18) was also in use on December 31, 1943, but it was used only for overnight storage of the B–R Smoke Shoppe bank roll, and this had already been included in the computation among the assets of that business. (R. 1369, 1373–1374, 1939–1942, 3601; cf. 1357–1360, 1537.) Box 730 (supra, p. 18) was not acquired until later. (R. 1369–1370, 1536.) The safe at 110 Eddy Street (supra, p. 17) was used only to keep the previous day's receipts overnight. (R. 1536, 2076, 2096–2097.) The safe in the main office at 50–52 Mason Street was not acquired until 1944. (R. 1709–1711, 2515, 3607–3608.)

paid until September 1945. (R. 1282–1285.) He was still in debt to his brother at the end of 1943, although the brother had written off one amount as a bad debt at the end of 1942.[27] (R. 2992, 3395.) And he owed Cal-Neva, Inc., $23,152.77 as of December 31, 1943. (R. 2507.)

In December 1941, however, he began to invest cash in the acquisition of business interests. These cash payments, at first comparatively small, grew larger and larger, as we have seen (supra, pp. 10–14), during the period up to the end of 1946. The B-R Smoke Shoppe was acquired and put into operation in December 1941 for $10,000. In July or August 1942 petitioner took over the tavern at 110 Eddy Street, spent a considerable sum in improvements, and obtained $3,400 from Pratt to meet part of the cost.[28] On the death of Clarence Bent, early in 1943, the claim of his estate was settled by payment of $3,500 taken from Box 48. (R. 1569–1570.) In March 1943 petitioner acquired the 186 Club and the Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store with $6,000 of his own and $16,000 obtained from Nealis and Kopstick.

[27] When Mooney, in preparing petitioner's 1942 income tax return, asked what his income was petitioner said he had made $10,915 on the Kentucky Derby. This was the total amount of net taxable income reported for 1942. (R. 879–880.)

[28] The sum expended by petitioner appears to have been about $24,000. A trustee account in that amount in the name of Kyne is recognized as belonging to petitioner. (R. 3636–3637.) Some of this was drawn from Cal-Neva, Inc., by petitioner. (R. 2508.)

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

In May 1943 he purchased the El Cerrito property in which the 21 Club and the San Diego Social Club were located for $25,000. Nealis and Kopstick were repaid their $16,000 in installments as fast as the money came in; the payments were made from Box 48 and were completed early in 1944. Pratt, who was becoming restive when not informed of progress at 110 Eddy Street, was given $2,000 in the latter part of 1943 and was finally bought out for an additional $4,800 in March 1944.

Box 48 was used as a depository for the funds of the San Francisco enterprises and for other funds belonging to petitioner (supra, p. 17). There is no direct evidence as to the amount it contained on December 31, 1943. Kyne testified that the amount varied, and answered "Yes" when asked by defense counsel if it was sometimes considerable and sometimes less. (R. 1536.) He stated that he had kept a daily record but that he had given it to Slater and had not seen it since. (R. 1559–1560.) He testified that approximately $17,700 was placed in the box on December 3, 1943. However, this was an abnormal transaction, representing the return of a portion of a deposit petitioner had made on the purchase of two carloads of whiskey. (R. 859–860, 875, 1482–1490.) Furthermore, Kyne testified that this money was to be used as needed in the San Francisco businesses, that money from the box was used to purchase cashier's checks to pay lay-off bets of the B-R Smoke Shoppe, and that during that same month of December checks in excess of $20,000 were purchased. (R. 1416–1423, 1484; Ex. 116.)

During the investigation petitioner and his associates refused to give any indication of the amount of cash in Box 48, although the revenue agents repeatedly pointed out to Kyne, Slater and Maundrell that the records of the San Francisco businesses were inadequate and asked for information as to the contents of safe deposit boxes and safes. (R. 2154, 2177, 2199, 2463, 2563–2566.) The agents were never able to obtain access to, or information concerning, the contents of any of the safes or boxes. (R. 2547, 2558, 2566, 2797–2798.) With specific reference to Box 48, Kyne refused the agents access and told them that he could give no information as to the amount of cash it contained at any particular date and that, contrary to his later statement at the trial, there was no record of its contents. (R. 2566–2567.) Kyne arranged an interview between petitioner and the agents on April 8, 1948, after the investigation had been in progress for almost two years, but petitioner, on advice of his attorney, refused to give any information on the ground that the agents would not tell him what charges they intended to bring or in what particulars he had failed to report taxable income.[29] (R. 2558–2572, 3072.) In 1949 the [29] A written statement to this effect, handed to the agents at the conclusion of the abortive interview, had been dictated by petitioner's attorney and typed before the agents arrived. (R. 3068, 3619; Ex. G–1.)

Bureau of the Internal Revenue sent petitioner a notice (commonly known as a 90-day letter) stating that the Commissioner had determined that his income tax returns for the years 1944, 1945 and 1946 were deficient. The notice specified the amount of unreported income for each year, and it specified that this income had been received from the same enterprises which we have enumerated above. (R. 30, 32.) In February 1950 petitioner was officially notified that criminal proceedings were being considered. (R. 3210.) There were numerous conferences between petitioner's attorneys and accountants on the one hand and representatives of the Government on the other, and on May 25, 1950, almost a year prior to the indictment, the Government offered to submit its net worth computation ~~for computation~~ for comparison if petitioner's representatives would prepare a similar computation on his behalf. This offer was never accepted. (R. 36–39.) At the trial petitioner offered no evidence as to the amount of cash in Box 48 at the starting point, or at any other time, and contented himself with arguing that the Government's net worth computation was fatally defective because it had failed to establish this item accurately. (R. 2942–2984.)

6. Results of net worth computation.—In the Government's computation the amount of federal income taxes paid by petitioner was added to the annual increase in net worth in order to determine his taxable net income. Although the evidence clearly indicated that his nondeductible living expenses were considerable, this item was simply marked with a question mark in the computation of his net worth at the end of the period, since he had refused information on the subject. (R. 2560–2562, 2566; cf. 2923–2939.) For 1944 the computation showed a net income of $50,747.91, of which $31,747.91 was unreported. For 1945, the net income was $71,065.40, of which $11,747.04 was unreported. For 1946, the year on which the jury failed to agree, the net income was $254,285.42, of which $231,795.84 was unreported. (R. 88, 3612–3613; Ex. 183.)

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

I

Petitioner was convicted of attempting to evade income taxes by failure to report large portions of his taxable income. The Government presented circumstantial proof of unreported income by showing large increases in petitioner's net worth in excess of his reported taxable income, and by showing that the only reasonable source of this excess was current taxable income.

The use of the net worth method of proof was justified by the fact—established by the jury's verdict—that petitioner's books and records were completely inadequate. There were no available records of petitioner's personal finances. Some of the business records were missing. Others had only one entry a day, showing the amount won or lost. Important items were not entered on the books and no proper trial balance could be drawn. Petitioner filed his returns on the cash basis. But his books failed to reveal all his income. The Government accordingly determined the amount of his taxable income by a net worth computation on the cash basis.

In any event, Section 41 of the Internal Revenue Code does not require that the Government, before introducing net worth proof of income in a criminal case, must first make a showing of the inadequacy of the taxpayer's method of accounting or obtain a prior determination of such inadequacy by the Commissioner. A net worth computation is not an alternative or substitute method of accounting, but a reconstruction of income. It affords circumstantial proof of income; and Section 41 imposes no restriction on the Government's choice of its method of proof in criminal cases.

II

The evidence was sufficient to warrant leaving the case to the jury, and to support the verdict of guilt. The Government established the starting point of its net worth computation by evidence from which a reasonable man could have concluded beyond a reasonable doubt that the increases in net worth reflected unreported taxable income.

BLURRED COPY

(a) The Government showed, by direct and circumstantial evidence, that there could have been no substantial amount of cash in petitioner's safe deposit box at the starting point, principally because petitioner was spending cash as rapidly as he acquired it at that time.

(b) The Government did not use a hybrid method of accounting in its net worth computation, but adhered strictly to the cash method which had been used by petitioner in his returns. The evidence indicates that the "markers" representing unpaid bets due the B-R Smoke Shoppe were the equivalent of advances from cash on hand, and were treated as cash items by petitioner and his associates. Furthermore, there was evidence to support the verdict on the 1945 counts even if the $15,000 in markers were excluded from consideration.

(c) The evidence clearly established that the so-called partnerships were shams, used by petitioner for tax evasion purposes. The question was properly submitted to the jury, under instructions which made it clear that petitioner could not be convicted unless the jury found that he wilfully filed false and fraudulent returns with the intent to evade income tax. Since the evidence supports the conclusion, necessarily established by the verdict, that the partnerships were not real but were actually sole proprietorships of petitioner, and that petitioner acted with fraudulent intent to defeat and evade the tax, there is no basis for disturbing the conviction in this regard.

III

The trial court did not err in denying petitioner's requests for inspection or production of documents under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. Petitioner had ample opportunity before the indictment and trial to examine the records in question and to prepare his defense. Petitioner's motions were not made until shortly before the trial was scheduled to begin, and if granted would have required a further lengthy continuance of the trial. Since petitioner failed to explain his delay in making the motions, the trial court was justified in its action. In any event, there is no showing of possible prejudice. Records specifically requested by the defense during the trial were promptly made available to it. In the circumstances of this case, the trial court clearly acted within its discretion in denying petitioner's motions.

IV

In his motion for a new trial petitioner alleged that in the course of the trial an improper conversation occurred between one of the jurors and an unidentified third person. Petitioner renews in this Court his request, denied by the district court, for a hearing to inquire into the facts concerning the alleged incident to ascertain whether he was prejudiced thereby. The

BLURRED COPY

Government agrees that, where it is shown on a motion for a new trial that a potentially prejudicial outside contact with a juror has occurred, the appropriate procedure is to probe the matter by a hearing on the record. Accordingly, the Government does not oppose remand of the case to the district court for that purpose.

ARGUMENT

I

THE USE OF THE "NET WORTH" METHOD OF PROOF TO ESTABLISH UNREPORTED INCOME WAS PROPER

The indictment charged that petitioner had attempted to evade and defeat his income taxes by failure to report large portions of his net taxable income. As the petition for certiorari pointed out (p. 18), there are several methods by which the Government may proceed to prove the truth of such an allegation in a criminal tax case. The most obvious is by direct evidence that the defendant received specific items of income which he did not report in his returns. The same result may, however, be reached by circumstantial evidence. Thus, unreported income may be shown by unexplained increases in the defendant's net worth, and expenditures in excess of reported income. Such circumstantial evidence, showing that the defendant's increase in assets and non-deductible expenditures during the year are substantially in excess of his reported income, justifies the conclusion that the excess represents current taxable income, if the Government has established that it could not have come from nontaxable income or funds accumulated prior to the taxable period. The Government is not required to prove the exact amount of unreported income in a criminal tax evasion case. United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 517.

As the Court of Appeals stated (R. 3762), the Government's case against petitioner was "based upon the net worth method, the underlying theory of which is that where a person's net worth at the end of a particular year is greater than his net worth at the beginning of that year, and such increment is not attributable to gifts, devises, loans, or other non-income sources, an inference may be drawn that the increase in net worth represents income to the taxpayer." The validity of this method of proof, which is essentially indistinguishable from the so-called "expenditures" method of proof sustained by this Court in United States v. Johnson, supra, has long been recognized in the lower federal courts. Banks v. United States, 204 F. 2d 666 (C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 346 U. S. 857; Schuermann v. United States, 174 F. 2d 397 (C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 338 U. S. 831; Bell v. United States, 185 F. 2d 302 (C. 7), certiorari denied, 335 U. S. 853; Gendelman v. United States, 191 F. 2d 993 (C. A. 9), certiorari denied, 342 U. S. 909; Clawson v. United States, 198 F. 2d 792 (C. A. 9); Barrow v. United States, 171 F. 2d 286 (C. A. 5); Gariepy v. United States, 189 F. 2d 459 (C. A. 6); Kirsch v. United States, 174 F. 2d 595 (C. A. 8); Leeby v. United States, 192 F. 2d 331 (C. A. 8); Pollock v. United States, 202 F. 2d 281 (C. A. 5); United States v. Yeoman-Henderson, Inc., 193 F. 2d 867 (C. A. 7); Brodella v. United States, 184 F. 2d 823 (C. A. 6).

In this case the Government undertook to prove that petitioner had failed to report substantial portions of his taxable income for 1944, 1945, and 1946, by showing annual increases in his net worth, the only reasonable source of which was current taxable income. Petitioner urges here, as he unsuccessfully did in both courts below (supra, p. 7, fn. 3), that such a method of proof should not have been allowed in this case. The argument, repeated in this Court (Br. 20–26), is that Section 41 of the Internal Revenue Code (supra, p. 3) permits the Government to prove unreported taxable income by showing increases in net worth only in a case where the "method of accounting" employed by the taxpayer does not clearly reflect his income; that the evidence in this case established clearly inadequate books only with respect to the B-R Smoke Shoppe, the errors in the books of the other enterprises amounting to no more than normal accounting errors; and that the use of the net worth method of proof was, therefore, improper. Petitioner makes two further arguments to this Court which were not made or considered in the courts below. He argues that, before the net worth method of proof of unreported income can be employed by the Government in a criminal tax case, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue must make a preliminary determination that the method of accounting employed by the defendant is inadequate. And he argues that there can be no prosecution for wilful attempted evasion of income taxes under Section 145 (b) (supra, p. 4) of the Internal Revenue Code, until the Commissioner has first determined officially how much taxes the defendant owes. We submit that none of these arguments has merit.

(a) Assuming for the moment that Section 41 has application to a criminal prosecution for tax evasion—and we shall argue, pp. 48–54, infra, that it has not—, the jury in this case was instructed that the Government's use of the net worth method of proof was authorized only "if the books of the taxpayer are found to be inadequate" (R. 136–137),[30] and, as the Court of Appeals expressly held (R. 3762), the evidence is sufficient to sustain a finding that petitioner's records were inadequate. The testimony here presents overwhelming evidence of the utter inadequacy of petitioner's "cash" method of accounting, since there were no books and records upon which an adequate cash accounting could be made.

In the first place, there were no available records of petitioner's personal finances.[31] His right hand man, Kyne, and his bookkeepers and accountants, Maundrell, Slater and Ayton, turned over to the agents numerous business records, but they denied knowledge of petitioner's personal finances and petitioner himself refused all requests for information. (R. 2559, 2563–2566, 2572). His personal funds appear to have been commingled in Box 48 with cash belonging to the various businesses, but Kyne had no recollection of the amounts in the box and there was no available record. (Supra, pp. 18, 33, 34.) The absence of personal records,[32] together with the [31] With the exception of two small bank accounts and such personal purchases and expenditures as the agents were able to unearth from the records of third parties.

[32] Petitioner was required to keep such records as would enable the Commissioner to determine the correct amount of his taxable income. Section 54 (a) (26 U. S. C., 1946 ed., Sec. 54) of the Internal Revenue Code provides:

> Every person * * * shall keep such records * * * as the Commissioner * * * may from time to time prescribe.

indiscriminate and unrecorded use of the funds in Box 48 as needed in any of the San Francisco businesses, would alone have been sufficient to justify the use of the net worth computation.

Nor were the books of the various enterprises such as would have enabled the Commissioner to determine the taxable income they earned. Weaver, the Government's expert accountant, testified that in his opinion the books were entirely inadequate, and he had expressed this criticism to petitioner's associates during the investigation. (R. 2564, 2715, 2766–2767.) The inadequacy of the B-R Smoke Shoppe books was admitted in the petition for certiorari (p. 22). The only records of this enterprise were a series of books which contained one single figure for each day representing the amount won or lost that day, and this was a net figure from which all expenses had already been deducted. Not even this was available for the eighteen month period of Kyne's absence in the army, since petitioner had ordered the destruction of all records kept during that time. (R. 1349–1352, 1358, 1946, 1964–1967). The records of the 186 Club were examined by a deputy collector during 1944. The club operated 24 hours a day with three eight-hour shifts, and the only records consisted of poker sheets made out at the end of each shift, and a book in which a single figure, representing either win or loss, was entered for each shift. The deputy collector discovered that the entries in the book did not correspond with the figures on the sheets and he directed Kyne, orally and in writing, to keep adequate books of account. (R. 2372–2393.) At the trial, however, the only records available to the Government were some of the daily poker sheets.[33] (R. 1436–1437, 1640–1650, 2421–2422.)

There were no 1945 books whatsoever for the Menlo Club. (R. 1778–1780, 2795–2796.) The 1946 books consisted of a record of receipts and disbursements and a few ledger accounts, and no proper trial balance could be prepared from them. (R. 2518–2519.) Money was put into the restaurant account standing in the name of petitioner and Maundrell and checks were drawn upon it for particular purposes, such as the construction of the general offices at 50 Mason Street, but there

[33] No figure was included in the net worth computation for the 186 Club (R. 3612) since petitioner had made no original investment and since it was operated as a corporation. However, Busterna, the "president", testified that there was a profit every year, and although on cross-examination by defense counsel he attempted to modify this statement, the jury would clearly have been justified in inferring that the club was a source of considerable income which went into Box 48. (R. 1430–1431, 1986, 1999, 2011.)

was nothing in the books to indicate where this cash came from or whether it represented a credit of the club. (R. 1743–1753.) A bank account opened in October 1946 did not appear on the books, and they contained no record of two checks drawn by Kyne, both previously mentioned (supra, pp. 14, 28), in the amounts of $65,000 and $16,000. (R. 2794–2795.) There was no record of cash and the bank accounts could not be reconciled with cash receipts shown on the poker sheets from the gambling room. (R. 2797.) There was no record of the supposed payment of $14,000 to Ditto at the time he withdrew from the business. (R. 2799–2800; supra, p. 28, fn. 24.) The general ledger at 110 Eddy Street was posted only up to October 31, 1945; the inventory account was missing until sometime in 1945; no trial balance could be drawn from the books. (R. 2333.) The revenue agent who examined the El Cerrito businesses never saw any books for the San Diego Social Club (R. 1275), and the books of all three El Cerrito businesses were turned over to petitioner by Pechart two weeks after the filing of the indictment in this case and were not available at the trial. (R. 1102–1104, 1137–1138.)

But petitioner urges (Br. 22) that the Government should not be heard to say that the books of any of the enterprises were inadequate because it still retained some of these books at the time of trial and did not introduce them in evidence. Petitioner, of course, knew which of his records were essential to the presentation of a correct picture of his income, and there is not a shred of evidence to indicate that any record of any value was withheld from him. Whenever during the trial the defense requested the production of specific documents in the Government's possession, they were promptly produced. (R. 813–814, 1794, 2008, 2020, 3182, 3470–3473.)

(b) We have assumed up to this point that Section 41 of the Internal Revenue Code requires the Government to make some independent showing of the inadequacy of a taxpayer's books before it may be permitted to use the net worth method in a criminal case. That section provides:

> The net income shall be computed upon the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in accordance with the method of accounting regularly employed in keeping the books of such taxpayer; but if no such method of accounting has been so employed, or if the method employed does not clearly reflect the income, the computation shall be made in accordance with such method as in the opinion of the Commissioner does clearly reflect the income. If the taxpayer's annual accounting period is other than a fiscal year as defined in section 48 or if the taxpayer has no annual accounting period or does not keep books, the net income shall be computed on the basis of the calendar year.

The Court of Appeals stated in its opinion (R. 3762):

> The net worth method of computing income may be used only where a taxpayer does not keep books or such books are inadequate in that they do not clearly reflect income. See 26 U. S. C. A. Sec. 41.

While it is unnecessary for this Court to reach the question—since, as has been shown, petitioner's books and method of accounting were inadequate, as was found in both courts below—we believe the Court of Appeals erred in regarding Section 41 as imposing a limitation on use of the net worth method of proof in a criminal tax evasion presentation. The net worth method is not a method of accounting; its purpose in a criminal case is not to recompute the taxpayer's actual income, in order to determine his exact civil liability in dollars and cents. It is a method of proving, by relevant circumstantial evidence having probative value, that there is a substantial understatement in the taxpayer's reported income and tax.[34] Even though a taxpayer's method of accounting appears, on the face of his books, to reflect clearly his income, the Government is not precluded from showing that some items of income [34] "While the government had the burden of proof, it was not required to make a perfect case or to prove the defendant guilty to a mathematical certainty. The government did not have to establish the exact amount of unreported income of the defendant. United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 517, 63 S. Ct. 1233, 87 L. Ed. 1546." Schuermann v. United States, 174 F. 2d 397, 399 (C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 338 U. S. 831.

BLURRED COPY

have not been reported. The net worth method is not, as petitioner assumes, a substitute for the cash, accrual, or installment method of accounting. It is simply a means for proving that a taxpayer, whatever his method of keeping books, has failed to show items of taxable income.

Section 41 deals with whether a taxpayer, in view of the character of his business and the nature of his activities and transactions, should be on one or the other basis of accounting or on a calendar or fiscal year basis. Treasury Regulations 118, Sec. 39.41–2. That is a problem of accounting, the kind of problem involved in cases like Lucas v. American Code Co., 280 U. S. 45; Dixie Pine Co. v. Commissioner, 320 U. S. 516, 518–519; and Security Mills Co. v. Commissioner, 321 U. S. 281. But where a taxpayer either keeps no books, or books which are incomplete, inaccurate, or otherwise unsatisfactory, the Commissioner is authorized to use such means for reconstructing his income (including the net worth method) as may establish the correct amount. Treasury Regulations 118, Sec. 39.41–1; Halle v. Commissioner, 175 F. 2d 500, 502–503 (C. A. 2); Harris v. Commissioner, 174 F. 2d 70, 72–73 (C. A. 4); Cohen v. Commissioner, 176 F. 2d 394, 397 (C. A. 10); Richards v. Commissioner, 111 F. 2d 374, 375 (C. A. 5); Bishoff v. Commissioner, 27 F. 2d 91, 93 (C. A. 3). The computation of income by examining increases in net worth involves no change of method of accounting from that employed by taxpayer. As has been noted (supra, p. 7), petitioner was on the cash basis, and the net worth computation was made on the same basis. It is not his method or basis of accounting, but the income not accounted for and reported, which forms the basis of this prosecution.

A solidly based net worth computation may provide sufficient evidence in itself that the taxpayer's method of keeping his books does not clearly reflect his income. For if the Government establishes both the totality of the taxpayer's assets at the starting point, and excessive increases in his net worth, by evidence which, if believed, would leave no room for a reasonable doubt, the only reasonable inference must be that his books do not properly reflect all of his transactions. Doyle v. Mitchell Bros. Co., 247 U. S. 179, 187; Del Marcelle v. Kuhl, 80 F. Supp. 616, 618 (E. D. Wis.).

Section 41 cannot be construed, therefore, to require the Government to prove the inadequacy of a defendant's method of accounting before it may proceed to prove its case by circumstantial evidence. There is no such rule in criminal law,[35] and neither the language of Section [35] Truth may be established just as solidly by circumstantial evidence as by direct. In each case the determination depends, not upon the type of the evidence, but by its convincing quality. United States v. Becker, 62 F. 2d 1007, 1010

41 nor anything that we have been able to find in its legislative history indicates a Congressional intent to make it applicable to criminal cases. It should be noted that the statute refers to computations made by the Commissioner. But the Commissioner is not a party to a criminal case. Civil tax cases are disputes between the taxpayer and the Commissioner, the question is the exact amount of tax owed, and the burden of proof rests upon the taxpayer to show that the Commissioner's computation is erroneous. In criminal cases, however, the issue is whether the taxpayer fraudulently evaded some of his income taxes, and the burden of proof is on the Government. The Government must prove, by competent evidence and beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant has violated Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code, supra, which punishes "any person who willfully attempts in any manner to evade or defeat" his tax liability.

The breadth of this provision has frequently been noted by the Court. Spies v. United States, 317 U. S. 492, 499; United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 515; United States v. Beacon Brass Co., 344 U. S. 43, 45–46. The choice of methods of proof rests with the Government; and Section 41 has reference, not to methods of proof in criminal cases, but to the various recognized basic "methods of accounting", e. g. cash, accrual, or installment, used in computing civil tax liability. See Healy v. Commissioner, 345 U. S. 278, 281.[36] Section 41 simply gives the Commissioner authority to change the taxpayer's method of accounting, where it does not clearly reflect the income, from one basis to another. It does not deal with a situation like this, where the taxpayer, even though his method of accounting may be proper, has wilfully concealed items of taxable income. Petitioner's method of accounting is not challenged here; the gist of the offense of which he was convicted is the failure to report income and pay the tax due thereon. The net worth method of proof in a criminal case is thus used to test the verity of the books, and not the adequacy (from an accounting standpoint) of the basis on which they are kept.

Section 41, as petitioner points out (Br. 21), has been held by this Court to refer "to the general bookkeeping system followed by the taxpayer and not to the accuracy or propriety of mere individual items or entries upon the books." United States v. American Can Co., 280 U. S. 412, 419; and see Schram v. United States, 118

F. 2d 541, 543–544 (C. A. 6). But a criminal prosecution for tax evasion is concerned with an inquiry into the accuracy and proper disclosure of individual items of income, and not with the accounting problem of which method of keeping books—cash or accrual, fiscal or calendar year, etc.—is more appropriate in clearly reflecting the income shown by such books.

This same confusion appears in the two arguments raised for the first time in this Court. Petitioner argues (Br. 20–21, 25) that the Government may not use the net worth method in a criminal case until the Commissioner has made a preliminary determination under Section 41 that the taxpayer's method of accounting is inadequate. No such objection was raised in the trial court or in the Court of Appeals.[37] The first hint of it appears in a doubtful form in the petition for a writ of certiorari.[38] Questions not presented in the petition are not open for consideration in this Court. Helvering v. Taylor, 293 U. S. 507, 511; Gunning v. Cooley, 281 U. S. 90, 98. Even if the argument had been properly raised in the lower courts and in this Court, it is based on a misconception of Section 41 and of the relation between the collection of taxes and prosecution for evasion of taxes, and for the reasons stated above, is without merit.

The second new argument (Br. 23–26) is that no prosecution for wilful attempted evasion of taxes can be brought under Section 145 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code unless the correct amount of the taxes due has first been determined officially by the Commissioner. This was not raised in either of the lower courts or in the petition for the writ. Furthermore, it ignores the fact that our system of income taxation is based largely on self-assessment. Commissioner v. Lane-Wells Co., 321 U. S. 219, 223. The Commissioner does not impose taxes, as petitioner implies. The tax is imposed by the statute. For purposes of determining civil liability, the Commissioner determines and assesses the correct amount when the taxpayer files no return or one which is erroneous or fraudulent.[39] Determination and assessment by the Commissioner is, however, not a prerequisite to criminal prosecution. Guzik v. United States, 54 F. 2d 618, 619 (C. A. 7), certiorari denied, 285 U. S. 545; United States v. Commerford, 64 F. 2d 28, 30 (C. A. 2), certiorari denied, 289 U. S. 759.

[39] Petitioner argues (Br. 24) that a criminal tax evasion case under Section 145 (b) cannot be brought unless the Collector has prepared a substitute return under Section 3612. However, since 1939, when the practice was formally discontinued by order of the Commissioner, no substitute returns are prepared by Collectors even in civil cases. THE EVIDENCE WAS SUFFICIENT TO WARRANT SUBMISSION OF THE CASE TO THE JURY AND TO SUPPORT THE VERDICT

Petitioner challenges the sufficiency of the evidence principally on the grounds that the Government failed to establish a solid starting point and that the partnerships were sham. He also challenges the validity of the computation as to the year 1945 because the Government treated "markers" for unpaid gambling debts as cash items.

1. The starting point was established

The burden of proof, of course, lay upon the Government to show that petitioner had received taxable income in 1944, 1945, and 1946 which he failed to report. And since the Government chose to sustain this burden by showing increases in net worth which could only have come from current taxable income, the Government had to establish petitioner's net worth at the starting point, December 31, 1943. Without this fixed term the whole computation would necessarily fail.

However, it was unnecessary that petitioner's absolute net worth be shown. Capital assets held throughout the taxable period could have no effect upon the determination of his income. Furthermore, since the Government was not required to prove the exact amount of unreported income (United States v. Johnson, supra), other assets held by petitioner at the starting point did not have to be given an exact dollars and cents value in the computation, provided the Government, even though unable to determine their exact value, could show that they were insufficient to account for the unexplained increases in net worth. The burden rested originally upon the Government, and the burden remained upon the Government, to establish a fixed starting point. But what this means is that the Government had to prove that petitioner did not have sufficient assets at the starting point, plus his reported income for the years involved, to account for the increases in his net worth.[40] The theory of such net worth computations was carefully and clearly explained by the Government's expert, Weaver (R. 2554–2558, 2591–2594, 2611–2612, 2805, 2820–2825; cf. 3270–3271, 3291–3293), and the essential elements were repeated in the court's charge to the jury (R. 131–133, 136–138, 155).

Petitioner contends (Br. 17, 26–31) that the Court of Appeals missed the vital significance of the starting point and shifted the burden of proof to the defense by holding that the Government had established a prima facie case despite the fact that it could not determine exactly the amount of cash in safe deposit Box 48. He appears to argue both that the Court of Appeals applied an improper test of the sufficiency of the evidence, and that the evidence was insufficient even if the proper test had been applied.

The pertinent passages of the opinion of the Court of Appeals (R. 3762–3767) clearly indicate, however, that that court understood the significance of the starting point and did not apply an improper test of the sufficiency of the evidence. After briefly outlining the theory of the net worth computation in income tax cases (R. 3762) and noting petitioner's attack on the accuracy of the starting point, the court said (R. 3763):

> It was necessary for the Government to establish appellant's net worth at the beginning of the period during which the alleged evasion occurred in order to compare his increment in net worth with the income actually reported by appellant on his and his wife's tax returns.

The court pointed out that the test of the sufficiency of the Government's evidence was whether reasonable minds, regarding that evidence in the light most favorable to the Government, could conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that petitioner had wilfully failed to report substantial portions of his taxable income.[41] (R. 3763–3764, 3766–3767.) Applying this test to the starting point of the Government's computation the court pointed out that, while petitioner contended that there was a possibility that Box 48 contained a substantial amount of cash on December 31, 1943, there was no evidence in the record of such substantial cash funds, and that there was, in fact, evidence which "tended to show that [he] did not have substantial cash at the beginning of 1944." (R. 3765.) It is clear that the court held that the burden of proof is on the Government to establish a prima facie case, and that when the net worth method is used in an income tax case the Government must establish a fixed starting point, but that possible "assets" which are shown to be either nonexistent or too insubstantial in amount to affect the computation may be disregarded.

The question remains whether the evidence to establish the starting point in this case actually was sufficient under the test applied by the Court of Appeals—i. e., whether, as petitioner contends, the Government's evidence was so inherently weak and unreliable that the case should not have been permitted to go to the jury. Since the only item about which there can be any dispute is the amount of cash in Box 48,[42] the ultimate question is whether the jury could reasonably have concluded that the amount in the box on December 31, 1943, was insufficient to make any substantial difference in the results of the Government's computation. That computation showed an unexplained increase in petitioner's net worth totaling almost $33,000 for the first of the three years involved alone.[43] It would, therefore, require a considerable sum to deprive the Government's case of substantiality. We have set forth in the Statement (supra, pp. 30–35) the evidence upon which reasonable jurors could conclude that the cash in the box at the end of 1943 was only an inconsiderable fraction of $33,000. That evidence falls into two categories: (a) direct evidence of the cash in the box; (b) evidence that petitioner did not have enough cash to satisfy his needs at the close of 1943.

(a) The direct evidence was slight. Kyne testified that the amount in the box was sometimes considerable and sometimes less. He also testified that he put $17,000 in on December 3, 1943, but this was offset by cashier's checks in the amount of $20,000 purchased with funds from the box during the same month.

(b) There was considerable and cogent evidence to show that petitioner did not have, at that time, enough cash to meet his requirements. Unable to pay $178.10 in delinquent federal income taxes in 1937, petitioner did not begin to file returns showing taxable income until 1942. Yet, beginning with the purchase of the B-R Smoke Shoppe in December 1941, he rapidly poured cash into new acquisitions. The comparatively small amounts of income reported in 1942 and 1943 were obviously disposed of in this manner, and petitioner had to obtain money from other sources to make the purchases he desired. During 1943 he obtained $16,000 from Nealis and Kopstick to acquire the 186 Club, and he repaid them in installments as fast as the money came in, the payments being completed early in 1944. He obtained $3,400 from Arthur Pratt to help finance improvements at 110 Eddy Street, and soon bought him out for $6,800, part of which was paid late in 1943 and the remainder in March 1944. He bought a $19,000 home in August 1942, borrowing $5,000 from a bank to complete the purchase. (R. 699–700, 713–720, 3613.) He still owed $4,000 on this loan at the end of 1943; he was still in debt to his brother, although one loan had previously been charged off as a bad debt; he still had not paid the $1,800 Monahan judgment dating back to 1938; and his account at Cal-Neva, Inc., showed a debit of $23,152.77. Petitioner was investing cash as rapidly as he acquired it. Surely, under such circumstances, it could reasonably be inferred that the cash in the box was no more than a small fraction of $33,000, much less $275,000.

Although petitioner conceivably might have had a considerable amount of cash in the safe deposit box, the defense failed to present evidence to that effect during the trial. On the contrary, he refused to permit examination of the box by the Treasury agents (supra, pp. 33–35). Information as to the existence of such cash was peculiarly within the knowledge of petitioner and could easily have been presented by him. He contends, nevertheless, that the possible existence of considerable cash creates a fatal defect in the Government's case. This Court has stated, however, that "The general rule * * * is that it is not incumbent on the prosecution to adduce positive evidence to support a negative averment the truth of which is fairly indicated by established circumstances and which if untrue could readily be disproved by the production of documents or other evidence probably within the defendant's possession or control." Rossi v. United States, 289 U. of an accused taxpayer to produce evidence of the value of assets which he claims are sufficient to deprive the Government's case of substance.[46] The force of a prima facie case may not be defeated by "skillful concealment" (United States v. Johnson, supra, pp. 517–518), or by mere conjecture and speculation as to the possible existence of undisclosed assets. Banks v. United States, 204 F. 2d 666, 672 (C. A. 8), certiorari denied, 346 U. S. 857.[47]

It is clear from the foregoing that the Court of Appeals applied the proper test of the sufficiency of the evidence, and applied it properly to the facts of this case. It held that in a net worth case the accuracy of the Government's starting point must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, but it also held that the amount of cash in Box 48 could be disregarded because the Government's evidence permitted the jury to conclude that it was too small to have any substantial effect on the results of the net worth computation. The case was, therefore, properly submitted to the jury. Curley v. United States, 160 F. 2d 229, 232–233 (C. A. D. C.), certiorari

[47] In any event, under the instructions given in this case, petitioner cannot complain that the jury may have attached undue significance to his failure to testify. The trial judge expressly charged (R. 152) that "no juror in this case should permit himself or herself to be to any extent influenced against the defendant because of, or on account of, his failure to testify as a witness in the case."

> If a defendant could prevent a case of this type from being submitted to the jury merely by stating he had further assets not taken into consideration by the Government, yet refusing to disclose them, enforcement of the tax evasion provisions of the Internal Revenue Code would be completely frustrated. Skillful concealment cannot be made an invincible barrier to proof. United States v. Johnson [319 U. S. 503], at 518.

Here, where the probative force of the Government's evidence has the support of both courts below and of the jury, the latter's verdict should not be set aside by this Court. United States v. Johnson, 319 U. S. 503, 518.[48]

[48] "Evidence which, if unexplained and uncontradicted, will justify a conclusion that a taxpayer had income which he deliberately failed to include in his return, is enough to take a case such as this to the jury. * * * If the skill of the tax evader in concealing income is not to become 'an invincible barrier to proof,' United States v. Johnson, supra, 319 U. S. at page 518, 63 S. Ct. at page 1240, 87 L. Ed. 1546, the federal appellate courts will have to rely heavily upon the sound judgment of the trial courts in appraising the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant submission of a tax evasion case to a jury, and upon the fairness and common sense of juries in determining guilt or innocence when such cases are submitted to them." Schuermann v. United States, 174 F. 2d 397, 399 (C. Nor is there any direct conflict on this point with either Bryan v. United States, 175 F. 2d 223 (C. A. 5),[49] or United States v. Fenwick, 177 F. 2d 488 (C. A. 7). In each of these cases there was an incomplete investigation and the Government was forced to admit that there might well be assets which it had not discovered. See 175 F. 2d at 226; 177 F. 2d at 491. But here the agents' investigation was as complete as it could be, and though barred from direct information as to one asset by petitioner himself, they were able to develop enough evidence to negative the probability of any significant accumulation of cash.

2. The "markers" were properly included among petitioner's assets

One of petitioner's objections to the Government's net worth computation affects only the year 1945. Recognizing that the net worth method of proving income belongs in a different category from the cash and accrual methods of accounting, petitioner argues (Br. 17, 31–33) that, since the Government built up its net worth computation on the theory that he was a cash basis taxpayer, it erred in including alleged accrual items in the computation for the year 1945. For that year the Government included a bank roll of $20,000 among the assets of the B-R Smoke Shoppe (R. 3601), based on the testimony of Pritchett that at the end of 1945 there was $5,000 cash on hand and $15,000 in "markers" representing unpaid bets (R. 1949, 1961, 1962, 1968). Petitioner insists that the markers were accounts receivable, and hence were accrual items which should not have been included in a computation based on cash receipts. Arguing that the $15,000 was improperly included, he points to the fact that the Government's computation showed unreported income of only $11,747.04 for 1945 (R. 3601–3613) and concludes that the conviction cannot be sustained as to the third and fourth counts.

It should be noted that this argument, even if valid, could result only in a cancellation of the $5,000 fines imposed under the third and fourth counts. The general prison sentence of five years (supra, p. 6) would still be supported by either of the first two counts. Hirabayashi v. United States, 320 U. S. 81, 85, 105; Pinkerton v. United States, 328 U. S. 640, 641–642.

We agree with petitioner that when the Government sets out to prove a taxpayer's income by computing the increases in his net worth, it should, in determining how much of this income is attributable to the taxable year in question, stick consistently either to the cash method or to the accrual method of accounting. We do not agree with petitioner that the markers in this case were accrual items. On the contrary there was evidence from which the jury could properly have concluded that they were the equivalent of cash on hand and were so treated by petitioner and his associates. During the cross-examination of the Government's expert accountant, Weaver, by defense counsel the following occurred:

> Q. In computing net income on net worth method is it important to determine whether you are using the cash receipts and disbursements method of accounting rather than the accrual method of accounting?
>
> A. Yes. [R. 2615.]

In computing the net income of a taxpayer on the net worth method, if there was money owed to him on account of business transactions which he had had at the end of the period covered by your net worth computation, the result which you would reach would be different if you used the cash method than if you used the accrual method, would it not?

A. Not necessarily. It depends what the accounts receivable arose from. [R. 2619.]

* * * * *

Q. If accounts receivable arose from the credit extended to customers in the course of a business, then on the cash method you would exclude those accounts receivable in computing the net worth as of that time?

A. If they arose from extension of credit for the sale of merchandise. If they arose from the extension of cash loans, the situation would be different. [R. 2620.] [Italics added.]

Petitioner apparently recognizes (Pet. 25; Br. 33) that accounts receivable which arise from loans or advances of cash are not accrual items, but are actually cash items. Weaver testified repeatedly that all the markers in this case were treated by petitioner and his associates as cash and that they represented advances of cash, i. e., loans of cash on hand. He based his conclusion on testimony which indicated that it was the custom in petitioner's gambling enterprises to advance loans from cash on hand, and to count markers as a part of the bank roll of the particular enterprise and to treat them as cash at the year's end. (R. 2494–2498, 2619–2626, 2722–2724, 2772–2782).[20]

[20] Weaver, the Government's accountant, made it abundantly clear, on cross-examination by defense counsel, that he recognized the distinction between (a) an account receivable representing a mere promise to pay by a bettor who has lost—which is not treated as income to a cash-basis taxpayer until actually paid, and (b) an account receivable representing an exchange of one asset for another, e. g., a loan of cash to a bettor in exchange for a promise to repay—which does not result in taxable income to the lender upon repayment of the loan. He testified (R. 2723–2724):

> A. To explain the difference between accounts receivable that arise as the result of exchange of one asset for another. For example, if you had ten thousand dollars cash on hand at the beginning of the year. During the year some one borrowed that money from you, you would no longer have ten thousand dollars cash in hand at the end of the year, but if we had to show any asset at the end of the year, our statement would reflect a loss of ten thousand dollars, which obviously would be incorrect, since your assets have not changed at all in amount, they have only changed in character. You have substituted ten thousand dollars cash and got ten thousand dollars accounts receivable. That is exactly the same situation with respect to these markers. They have been exchanged for cash. Now if the asset arises as the result of the receipt of income, or if the liability arises as the result of payment [or] in incurrence of an expense, then you have items which are not properly taken into account on net worth basis, if the taxpayer is reporting—the markers were considered part of the bank roll and the accumulated profits. (R. 1298–1300; cf. 1333, 1343–1344.) Kyne also testified that such markers were treated as cash. (R. 1374–1375.) Pritchett testified concerning the markers of bettors who lost to the B-R Smoke Shoppe without indicating how they were treated accounting-wise.[51] (R. 1949, 1961, 1962, 1968.) Both Maundrell and Busterna testified that the markers of losing bettors at the Menlo Club and the 186 Club represented loans of cash, and were treated as cash and included in the amount of the bank roll. (R. 1627–1629, 1751, 1775–1776, 1886–1887, 1895–1896, 2018, 2021–2022; cf. 1445–1449.) Lando testified that bets were sometimes placed at the race track, and that "lay-off" bets were placed with and received from other bookmakers throughout the country (R. 1294–1295). The bets accepted by the B-R Smoke Shoppe itself formed a "pool" in which the amount paid the winners depended on the total amount bet. (R. 1289–1292.) Consequently, as Weaver testified, ceivable accounts and cash payable as to the source from which they arise, and you can not take into account, in determining net income under the net worth method, where the cash basis of reporting is used, any assets or liabilities that arise as the result of the receipt of income or the incurrence of expense, because to do so would give you an incorrect result. the house advanced the amount of cash required to complete the "pool." (R. 2772–2782.) The jury, we submit, were thus amply justified in concluding from the evidence that it was customary in the gambling enterprises to treat markers as cash, and that they were items properly to be included in petitioner's assets, in computing increases in his net worth, as equivalent to cash on hand.

In any event, the evidence establishes a substantial amount of unreported income for the year 1945, even if the $15,000 in markers were eliminated entirely from the computation. There are several reasons for this:

1. Since the Government's computation showed an understatement of $11,747.04, elimination of the $15,000 would result in an overstatement of approximately $3,200. The Government included no figure at all for living expenses in its computation. On the other hand, the Government specifically proved that petitioner spent approximately $3,200 during 1945 for such nondeductible items as clothing, jewelry and hotel bills (R. 615, 619, 824, 843, 986, 1202–1204, 1212), and there was considerable evidence to indicate that his style of living was lavish (R. 615). In view of the necessary conclusion that petitioner must have spent a substantial sum for ordinary living expenses in addition to the $3,200 proved, there was still enough evidence to support the verdict even if the markers are excluded from the computation.

2. Petitioner himself submitted a net worth computation for the B-R Smoke Shoppe which showed essentially the same net worth increase as that submitted by the Government. (R. 3628–3629.) He eliminated the $15,000 bank roll entirely at the starting point on the ground that the Government merely assumed its existence, and he eliminated $15,000 of the $20,000 shown by the Government at the end of 1945. The result is a net worth increase for the B-R Smoke Shoppe of approximately $5,000, almost exactly that shown by the Government's computation. If petitioner's figures for the B-R Smoke Shoppe were substituted in the Government's computation of petitioner's net worth increases, there would be no appreciable difference in the end result. (Compare R. 3601, 3612–3613 with 3626–3629; and cf. 3287–3289, 3322–3334.) Consequently, even on petitioner's own figures, the jury's finding was warranted.

3. The evidence that the partnerships were shams was sufficient and the issue was properly submitted to the jury

The chief underlying factual issue at the trial was the ownership of four of the San Francisco enterprises, B-R Smoke Shoppe, 110 Eddy Street, Day-Night Cigar and Liquor Store and Menlo Club. The amounts ascribed to these enterprises make the essential difference between the Government's net worth computation (R. 3612–3613) and that submitted by petitioner (R. 3626–3628). The Government contended that the businesses were sham partnerships and that they actually belonged to petitioner alone. Petitioner contended that the evidence was insufficient to establish that the partnerships were mere shams (supra, p. 7), and he objected to the trial court's refusal to give his proposed instruction on the issue. (R. 83–84, 3496.) Both arguments were renewed in the Court of Appeals. (R. 3768–3769, 3775.) In this Court petitioner renews his attack (Br. 37–39) upon the sufficiency of the evidence. And he also argues (Br. 17–18, 33–41), for the first time, that the test for determining whether a partnership actually exists is so doubtful and uncertain that the issue should never have been submitted to the jury.

BLURRED COPY

We shall address ourselves first to the latter contention, not raised in the courts below. To begin with, petitioner himself recognized in the trial court that the nature of the so-called partnerships was a question to be decided by the jury. During the argument on the motion for acquittal, while defense counsel was urging that there was no substantial evidence that the partnerships were shams, the following occurred (R. 3480):

> The COURT. The question of whether the partnership is a real partnership would be left to this jury.
>
> Mr. AVAKIAN. Your Honor, that should be left to the jury only if there is some reasonable basis upon which they could infer that the partnerships are phony.

And petitioner's proposed instruction on the issue contained the following language (R. 84):

> Accordingly, unless you are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant and his associates did not intend to operate said businesses as profit-sharing partners, you must treat the income of said businesses as partnership income and compute the defendant's tax only on his percentage share of the profits for each year.

Furthermore, petitioner's contention that the determination of the existence of a partnership is too difficult a question for a jury is squarely in conflict with this Court's holding that the issue simply involves the application of long settled principles of partnership law and is the type of question which triers of fact are constantly called upon to decide. In Commissioner v. Tower, 327 U. S. 280, 287, this Court said that the question is—> whether the partners really and truly intended to join together for the purpose of carrying on business and sharing in the profits or losses or both. And their intention in this respect is a question of fact, to be determined from testimony disclosed by their "agreement, considered as a whole, and by their conduct in execution of its provisions." Drennen v. London Assurance Co., 113 U. S. 51, 56; Cox v. Hickman, 8 H. L. Cas. 268. We see no reason why this general rule should not apply in tax cases where the Government challenges the existence of a partnership for tax purposes.

Three years later, in Commissioner v. Culbertson, 337 U. S. 733, 741–743, this Court repeated the above quotation from the Tower case and said:[22]

> The question is not whether the services or capital contributed by a partner are of sufficient importance to meet some objective standard supposedly established by the Tower case, but whether, considering all the facts—the agreement, the conduct of the parties in execution of its provisions, their statements, the testimony of disinterested persons, the relationship of the parties, their respective abilities and capital contributions, the actual control of income and the purposes for which it is used, and any other facts throwing light > on their true intent—the parties in good faith and acting with a business purpose intended to join together in the present conduct of the enterprise. There is nothing new or particularly difficult about such a test. Triers of fact are constantly called upon to determine the intent with which a person acted. * * * Whether the parties really intended to carry on business as partners is not, we think, any more difficult of determination or the manifestations of such intent any less perceptible than is ordinarily true of inquiries into the subjective.[53]

In this respect again, petitioner fails to give proper effect to the distinction between a civil action for recovery of taxes and a criminal prosecution for willful attempted evasion of taxes. In the criminal case, the burden is on the Government, if the prosecution is based on a sham partnership, to show absence of intent to form a partnership. Furthermore, even after it establishes the invalidity of the partnership, the Government must still show that the taxpayer knew the partnership was a sham and deliberately used it in an attempt to evade taxes. The basic assumption of petitioner's argument is that the offense with which he was charged was based upon his erroneous and mistaken interpretation of technical statutory provisions.[54] Obviously this was not the theory of the prosecution. The jury were instructed on the nature and effects of a partnership (R. 142, 143–144); they were instructed that bona fide mistakes should not be held against petitioner (R. 133); and they were instructed that they could not find him guilty unless they found beyond a reasonable doubt that he consciously, knowingly and intentionally attempted to evade his taxes and knew that he was doing wrong (R. 134–135, 139–141, 142–143, 146, 151–152, 155). The jury must have found against petitioner in all these respects so far as the years 1944 and 1945 were concerned. The issues submitted to the jury were no more difficult than those which must be decided in many criminal cases. Spies v. United States, 317 U. S. 492, 499–500.

The instructions actually given on the partnership issue (R. 142, 143–144), and the rejection of petitioner's proposed instruction (R. 83–84), were [54] According to petitioner, the formation of a nominal partnership would prevent a jury from ever convicting any taxpayer, even though the very purpose for the adoption of the partnership form was evasion of taxes. Petitioner says (Br. 36), "Where, as here, a taxpayer joins with others in the conduct of certain enterprises, his liability to include all of the income in his individual return is so uncertain that there is no basis on which a jury could properly convict him of knowingly and willfully failing to report the entire partnership income with intent to defraud the revenue." [Emphasis supplied.] It seems obvious that taxpayers cannot be afforded such a blanket immunity from prosecution where a willful and fraudulent intent to evade tax is proved, as in this case.

correct. The jury must, of course, be instructed on all the essentials of the offense alleged to have been committed, and there can be no doubt that the defendant is entitled to a clear instruction on the law pertaining to his theory of the defense.[55] On the other hand, the trial judge is under no affirmative obligation to state what the evidence is or to make any comments on the facts whatsoever,[56] and if he does so he should avoid undue emphasis upon any particular phase of the evidence.[57]

The trial court's action was clearly correct in the light of these principles. The jury's attention was specifically called to the partnership theory of the defense, and they were told how to determine under the law whether a partnership actually existed and what the effects would be, tax-wise, if it did exist. There was no need to further particularize by describing the special type of partnership claimed by petitioner, and by telling the jury that this would be a partnership if they found that it met the test. This would have put emphasis upon the evidence for the defense without mention of the overwhelming evidence to show that no true partnership relationship was ever intended.[58] We submit that the Court of Appeals was correct in saying (R. 3775):

> The instruction requested by appellant, requiring the jury to find a valid partnership if certain testimony was believed, unduly emphasized particular phases of the evidence and would violate the rule that the question is one of fact to be decided from all the evidence.

Petitioner asserts (Br. 18, 37–39) that there is no evidence in the record that the four businesses were sham partnerships. He calls attention to the written agreements, the book entries of partners' equities, the withdrawal of cash by some of the partners other than petitioner. The written agreements were drawn up after the Government's investigation had been instituted, and no partner, other than petitioner, withdrew any cash prior to that time except for the purpose of paying taxes or expenses of the businesses. Petitioner does not mention the voluminous evidence supporting the Government's position. We have summarized it in the Statement (supra, pp. 10–30), and there is no need to repeat it here. All the so-called partnership businesses were purchased with funds furnished by petitioner. Pratt, Nealis and Kopstick, the only others who contributed capital, were squeezed out at the earliest opportunity. There was a general manager, a main office, and Box 48 in which the funds of all the businesses were indiscriminately mingled with petitioner's personal funds. The so-called partners were told of their interests by petitioner, received no profits, and had no idea of the amount of "equities" credited to them. They were given only enough to pay the taxes on their supposed shares. Some of them did not even know who their fellow partners were. Cavani and Turner were supposed to be partners in 110 Eddy Street, but Kyne had admitted prior to trial that they were simply employees. Petitioner, on the other hand, drew large sums from the businesses and from Box 48, and no record was kept of these withdrawals. The evidence is overwhelming that the so-called partners were simply employees of petitioner and that the "equities" credited to them were a scheme designed to enable petitioner to evade a large part of his income taxes.[50]

[58] It should be noted, in addition, that petitioner's proposed instruction does not fully reflect the written agreements which petitioner subscribed with Kyne and Maundrell in late 1946, after the investigation had begun. (R. 3582–3583, 3585–3586; Exs. 113 and 130.)

III

THERE WAS NO ABUSE OF DISCRETION IN THE DENIAL OF PETITIONER'S MOTIONS UNDER RULES 16 AND 17

Petitioner contends (Br. 18–19, 41–45) that the trial court erred in denying his motions under Rules 16 and 17 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. (Supra, pp. 4–5.) An attempt is made to raise questions involving the scope of these rules in the light of this Court's decision in Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, 341 U. S. 214. However, the trial court did not deny the motions because of the nature of the documents requested but because of the circumstances under which the motions were made, and the argument is, in essence, that the rulings constituted an abuse of discretion. The Bowman Dairy case, however, did not concern itself with [50] Petitioner makes much of the proceeding in the Tax Court, Remmer v. Commissioner, Docket No. 23486. (Br. 6, 25, 39.) That proceeding has no bearing whatever on the criminal case. The deficiency notices which gave rise to the civil proceeding were issued by the Commissioner early in 1949, and the last Government pleading of any moment was filed in February 1950. As will be seen (infra, pp. 85–86), the investigation continued thereafter, and the indictment in this case was not filed until April 1951. Regardless of the earlier proceedings in the Tax Court, the Commissioner may always send out further 90-day letters asserting additional deficiencies in the case of fraud on the part of the taxpayer. See Section 272 (f), Internal Revenue Code (26 U. S. C. 1946 ed., Sec. 272).

questions of discretion but with the power of the District Court under the rules.[60]

The language of the rules specifically reposes a large measure of discretion in the trial court in dealing with requests for the discovery and inspection, or production, of books, papers, and other objects in possession of the Government.[61] Rule 16 provides that the court "may" allow inspection of such evidence "upon a showing that the items sought may be material to the preparation of his defense and that the request is reasonable." Rule 17 provides that the court "may" issue a subpoena directing the production of such material, but that the subpoena may be quashed "if compliance would be unreasonable or oppressive". We think a review of the circumstances which preceded these motions will satisfy the Court that the trial judge was well within his discretion in denying the motion to inspect and in quashing the subpoena.

As early as the first half of 1946, Internal Revenue agents began an investigation of the income tax returns of the B–R Smoke Shoppe. (R. 2115, 2123, 2152, 2163.) In the latter part of 1946 a special agent, whose duty it was to investigate possible criminal tax evasion, was assigned to the case, and by July 1947 the agents were examining the returns of petitioner and of all the above-named enterprises. (R. 1249, 2423, 2454–2458.) The agents had numerous interviews during 1946 and 1947 with Kyne and with the two bookkeepers, Slater and Maundrell. Kyne, Slater, and Maundrell gave considerable oral information and turned over, freely and voluntarily, a large quantity of business records, although they were unwilling or unable, as has been stated (supra, pp. 18, 19–20, 33–34, 35), to give any information about petitioner's personal finances. The agents took the records to their own offices for study, promising that they would be returned when the investigation was complete and that Kyne and Maundrell could have access to them in the meanwhile. On several occasions Kyne and Maundrell obtained some of the records and then brought them back to the agents. As has been shown (supra, p. 13), a page in one of the Menlo Club books was altered before it was returned. In addition, Maundrell did not return some of the records of the 186 Club. (R. 1528–1530, 1640–1643, 1813–1815, 2123–2126, 2154–2155, 2165–2166, 2199–2200, 2449–2451, 2695–2698, 2783.)

The agents repeatedly pointed out to Kyne that the records of the enterprises were inadequate in many respects, but Kyne could not enlighten them. They sought permission to examine the contents of the safety deposit boxes, but this was refused by Kyne. Finally, at the agents' request, Kyne arranged an interview with petitioner on April 8, 1948, in the office of petitioner's then attorney, Thatcher. Thatcher asked whether the agents had any specific charges and whether they intended to recommend criminal prosecution. He did not ask what accounting problems they were concerned with. When the agents said that they had no authority to make charges and could make no recommendation until they had completed their investigation, Thatcher instructed petitioner not to answer any questions, terminated the interview, and handed to the agents a statement which he had prepared before the agents arrived. There was no claim of self-incrimination. Thereafter, Thatcher, of his own accord, turned over further records of petitioner to the agents. The agents were never able to communicate with petitioner himself during the course of the investigation. (R. 2496, 2558–2572, 3045, 3067–3068, 3619; Ex. G–1.) The special agent did not complete his investigation and submit his report recommending criminal prosecution until November 10, 1949. (R. 2577.)

Several months previously, however, the Bureau of Internal Revenue had begun a civil proceeding for recovery of income taxes, and had issued 90-day letters alleging an understatement of net income for 1944, 1945, and 1946 in the approximate amount of $487,000 and specifying the businesses from which this arose. (R. 30–32.) A jeopardy assessment was levied against petitioner's assets in March 1949. (R. 3059.) On June 2, 1949, Lawrence Semenza, a certified public accountant, filed a power of attorney with the Treasury Department authorizing him to represent petitioner. (R. 37, 909–910.) On July 11, 1949, Semenza, at his own request, was taken into a room where the agents were keeping the records which had been turned over to them; he was told he could take away anything he wanted; he selected those which he thought were pertinent to petitioner's civil liability for underpayment of taxes; and he signed a receipt and agreed to return the records to the agents. (R. 39, 901, 908–910, 919–920, 922.)

On February 14, 1950, petitioner was officially notified by the Bureau of Internal Revenue that criminal proceedings were being contemplated. (R. 3210.) In March he employed two of the attorneys who represented him at the trial, Messrs. Golden and Gillen, together with a second certified public accountant, Friedman. (R. 37.) There was a conference on the contemplated criminal proceeding on May 25, 1950, at which petitioner's representatives were informed that if they prepared a net worth statement they would be allowed to compare it with the one already prepared by the Bureau. (R. 38–39.) Friedman was allowed to see all the records remaining in the hands of the agents; he spent some time examining them and was allowed to take some of them. (R. 39, 184–185, 3212–3213.) Furthermore, petitioner's attorneys instructed Semenza to turn over to Friedman all records pertaining to the San Francisco enterprises, and as late as October 30, 1950, the Government was told that Friedman was making an audit. (R. 39, 910.) In November 1950 Friedman withdrew from the case and left all the records in the hands of petitioner's attorneys. (R. 37, 910, 3224.) Shortly before the case was presented to the grand jury in April 1951, Semenza was asked by the agents to return the records in accordance with his agreement. He appeared before the grand jury and stated that petitioner's attorneys would not return them to him. (R. 911–912.) Petitioner's attorneys refused to give them up on the ground that they were petitioner's property. (R. 173–176.) The indictment was returned on April 9, 1951, and trial was set for November 7, 1951. (R. 8, 447.) Shortly after the indictment petitioner, as has been shown (supra, pp. 19–20), obtained the books of the El Cerrito businesses and they were not available at the trial.

On June 15, 1951, during the course of a hearing on a motion for a bill of particulars, the question of examination by petitioner of the records in the Government's hands was discussed informally, and counsel for petitioner were told to apply to the court if they failed to receive cooperation from the Government. (R. 194, 285.)

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

But no action was taken on the court's suggestion until October 22, 1951, when defense counsel asked the prosecutor, Mr. Campbell, that they be allowed to examine the records which still remained in the agents' hands. (R. 26–28.) The prosecutor agreed to do this, provided a showing was made of petitioner's interest in the records, and provided the written consent of the parties who had turned them over to the Government was obtained. (R. 40–41.) Meanwhile, the records which had been given by Friedman to petitioner's attorneys were returned by them to Semenza. (R. 912.)

On November 14, 1951,[62] petitioner filed a motion under Rule 16, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, to inspect and take copies of the records in the Government's possession. It was alleged that a tremendous amount of accounting work would be required to prepare for trial, and that petitioner had been without an accountant until he obtained the services of Semenza in September 1951. A continuance of the trial was requested until April. (R. 16–34.) After a hearing (R. 157–198), the court denied the motion to inspect on the ground that petitioner had had ample opportunity since May 1950, through Friedman, to inspect all records in the Government's possession (R. 194–198). Referring to Friedman's examination, the court said, "The defendant has had all the benefits that the Court could give, the benefit by an order under Rule 16." (R. 196.) He also pointed out that petitioner had given no satisfactory explanation for withholding until the last minute a request which purportedly would cause a long delay in the proceedings.[63] (R. 197–198.)

On November 27, 1951, the day before the trial, petitioner presented a motion under Rule 17, Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, for production and inspection of the records in the Government's possession, together with a subpoena to produce the records. (R. 42–54.) After a hearing (R. 241–288), the subpoena was quashed and the motion was denied on the ground that, under the circumstances, it was unreasonable to delay making it until the day before the trial (R. 286–287). The court assured defense counsel that they would be allowed ample time during the trial to examine each document offered by the Government. (R. 287–288.)

Upon request by the Government a subpoena was issued to Semenza to produce the records in his possession, but he appeared at the trial and stated that they had again been taken from him by petitioner's attorneys. The court ordered them turned over to the clerk, and they were made available to both sides for the duration of [63] The explanation was that petitioner was without funds to pay for an audit by Friedman. There was no evidence whatsoever to support this assertion. (R. 197–198.) It was merely asserted by counsel.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

the trial. (R. 912–929.) As to the records in the Government's possession, specific documents were, as we have already shown (supra, p. 48), promptly produced during the trial when requested by the defense.

In summary, petitioner knew, at least as early as April 1948, that a criminal proceeding was possible. Two of his accountants, Semenza in July 1949 and Friedman in May 1950, examined the records in the Government's hands, and Friedman had been specifically retained to look into the criminal aspect of petitioner's tax problems. Defense counsel were told five months before the date set for trial to request a court order if the Government would not cooperate with them, but Government counsel were not approached until about two weeks before the original trial date. Then, instead of complying with the simple conditions imposed by the Government, petitioner filed the two motions shortly before trial and asked a continuance of four months. Under these circumstances the Court of Appeals was clearly correct in holding that there had been no abuse of discretion in the denial of the motions. (R. 3752–3758.)

Under Rule 16 the trial court may, upon the making of a reasonable request, permit a defendant to inspect documents in the hands of the Government which belong to him. Petitioner, as the trial court pointed out, had already had the benefits of an order under the rule since all the documents in the Government's possession had been examined by Semenza and Friedman. Moreover, it is quite clear that a further inspection would have been permitted had any reasonable request been made therefor, yet, although seven months intervened between indictment and the date set for trial, petitioner waited until the eleventh hour to approach the Government. Counsel conceded that access to the records had never been denied before November 7, 1951. (R. 2975.) But, instead of complying with the reasonable conditions imposed by the Government at that time,[64] petitioner informed the trial court that a four months' continuance would be necessary to enable him to examine and analyze all the documents. By no stretch of the imagination can this be called compliance with the spirit of Rules 16 and 17 which, as this Court pointed out in the Bowman Dairy case, were adopted in the interest of orderly and expeditious trial procedure. (341 U. S., pp. 219, 220.) See Note, 67 Harv. L. Rev. 492 (1954).

Rule 17 was destined to establish a more liberal policy for the production of evidentiary materials held by the Government, in order to enable [64] Since the records had been turned over voluntarily by Kyne and Maundrell, and since it appeared that they claimed partnership interests, the Government properly requested that their written consent to the inspection be obtained. It is obvious that petitioner knew who his associates were and who had turned the records over to the Government.

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

the defendant to put them in evidence should the Government fail to do so. Bowman Dairy Co. v. United States, 341 U. S., pp. 219–221. "Its chief innovation was to expedite the trial by providing a time and place before trial for the inspection of the subpoenaed materials." 341 U. S., p. 220. If, however, the defendant's action is not a "good-faith effort" to obtain evidence, the trial court may quash the subpoena. Ibid. Petitioner waited until the very day before trial, already delayed for three weeks, to file his motion for production, and he coupled with it a request that a time and place be appointed for inspection of the produced material by his attorneys and accountants. This would of necessity have interfered with the voluminous exhibits already prepared by the Government for the trial. Furthermore, in view of the considerable quantity of the records in the Government's possession (R. 48), petitioner would certainly have insisted that a proper inspection could not be made without a further lengthy continuance. We do not see how such belated maneuvers can profess to be a "good-faith effort" to obtain evidence. The inference is justified that petitioner's object was not to obtain evidence or to prepare a legitimate defense, but rather to cause delay and to sow the seeds of possible error for later harvest on appeal.

This conclusion is fortified by the complete absence of the slightest showing of prejudice. Professing not to know what records the prosecution had (R. 272, 317), petitioner assumes the existence of something beneficial to the defense (R. 3469). His accountants had twice examined the records. Every record specifically requested during the trial was promptly produced by the Government. And surely petitioner would have known, as the trial judge pointed out (R. 3469–3475), what specific records were to his advantage. But there is nothing to indicate that petitioner was deprived of anything that would have materially aided his defense. We submit that both motions were properly denied as unreasonable under the circumstances.

IV

THE GOVERNMENT DOES NOT OPPOSE REMAND OF THE CASE TO THE DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PURPOSE OF HOLDING A HEARING TO INQUIRE INTO THE FACTS CONCERNING THE ALLEGED IMPROPER CONTACT BETWEEN ONE OF THE JURORS AND A THIRD PERSON

In his motion for a new trial filed February 29, 1952 (R. 106–110), petitioner alleged that he "was substantially prejudiced and deprived of a fair trial by reason of the acts and conduct of the jury, the Court, the prosecuting attorneys and the Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation" regarding an alleged incident described in the accompanying affidavit of petitioner's counsel.

This affidavit (R. 111–120) contained the following allegations: That the trial of this case commenced on November 28, 1951; that the jury reached its verdicts on February 22, 1952; that on

BLEED THROUGH– POOR COPY

February 23, 1952, petitioner's counsel first learned of the facts averred; that in December 1951, or January 1952, an unidentified person had a conversation with one of the jurors; that in the course of this conversation it was stated to the juror that he could profit by bringing in a verdict favorable to the defendant; that the juror promptly reported the substance of the conversation to the trial judge, who conferred with the prosecuting attorneys concerning the matter; that as a result the Federal Bureau of Investigation was requested to and did make an investigation of the incident and made a report thereon; that neither the judge nor the prosecuting attorneys related the incident to any of defendant's counsel, and the latter were kept in complete ignorance of the matter until the verdicts had been reached, and thereafter learned thereof only through the press; that, if defendant's counsel had been apprised of the situation, they would have moved for a mistrial and further would have requested that the juror involved be replaced by an alternate juror, for the reason that said juror, having had such conversation, would be apprehensive of being suspected and criticized were he to vote and attempt to have the other jurors vote for a verdict in favor of the defendant, and thus would be and was prejudiced against the defendant by reason of such conversation; and that the omission of the trial judge to bring the facts of this incident to the attention of defendant's counsel at the time criminal cases that "Private communications, possibly prejudicial, between jurors and third persons * * * are absolutely forbidden, and invalidate the verdict, at least until their harmlessness is made to appear." Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 150. Evidence of such communication gives rise to a presumption of prejudice, and the burden is on the Government to establish that the communication was harmless. Wheaton v. United States, 133 F. 2d 522 (C. A. 8). Where it is shown that a possibly prejudicial conversation has taken place during the trial between a juror and a third person, the Government believes that the appropriate procedure is for the trial court to probe the matter by a hearing, so that the question of possible prejudice can be determined on the basis of facts on the record. See Ryan v. United States, 191 F. 2d 779, 781 (C. A. D. C.) and cases cited.

In Glasser v. United States, 315 U. S. 60, this Court held that an affidavit in support of a new trial, alleging improper constitution of a jury, although not formally controverted, need not be taken as true in the absence of implied or actuai stipulation that it may be accepted as proof; and that it is incumbent upon the moving party to "introduce, or to offer, distinct evidence in support of the motion; the formal affidavit alone, even though uncontroverted, is not enough." (315 U. S. at p. 87.) In the instant case there was no "stipulation" that the facts set forth in the affidavit in support of the motion might be accepted as true. Nor was there any offer of "distinct evidence" by the petitioner. His counsel offered, as did Glasser, to prove their allegations, but made no actual tender of proof. Although, according to their affidavit, they learned of the alleged events six days prior to the filing of the motion, the record is barren of any indication that they attempted to secure affidavits from anyone personally acquainted with the facts. Instead, they appeared on the day set for imposition of sentence and requested the court to issue subpoenas for them, including a subpoena to the trial judge himself. (R. 109.)

However, we do not believe that the Glasser rule is controlling in the circumstances of this case. Under the Mattox doctrine, evidence of potentially prejudicial contact with a juror would alone suffice to shift to the Government the burden of establishing that prejudice was lacking. Although there was no stipulation that any contact took place, it was alleged in the affidavit that there was such contact, that it had been called to the attention of the prosecutor and the judge, and that the judge had caused an investigation of the incident to be made by an official investigative agency of the Government. (R. 111–120.) The silence of both the prosecutor and the court in the face of such allegations results in a situation not present in the Glasser case, where it was not alleged and there was no reason to assume that either had knowledge of the facts set forth in the affidavit. Cf. Wolf v. United States, 292 Fed. 673, 678 (C. A. 6); Hindman v. United States, 292 Fed. 679 (C. A. 6).

In view of these circumstances, the Government does not oppose remand of the case to the district court for the purpose of holding a hearing to inquire into the facts concerning the alleged incident.

CONCLUSION

Petitioner was properly convicted and the evidence was sufficient to warrant submission of the case to the jury and to support the verdict. The judgment of conviction should not be set aside. However, the Government does not oppose remand of the case to the district court for the purpose of holding a hearing, in connection with petitioner's motion for a new trial, to inquire into the facts concerning the alleged improper contact between one of the jurors and a third person.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 304.—October Term, 1953.

Elmer F. Remmer, Petitioner, v. United States of America.	On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

[March 8, 1954.]

Mr. Justice Minton delivered the opinion of the Court.

The petitioner was convicted by a jury on several counts charging willful evasion of the payment of federal income taxes. A matter admitted by the Government to have been handled by the trial court in a manner that may have been prejudicial to the petitioner, and therefore confessed as error, is presented at the threshold and must be disposed of first.

After the jury had returned its verdict, the petitioner learned for the first time that during the trial a person unnamed had communicated with a certain juror, who afterwards became the jury foreman, and remarked to him that he could profit by bringing in a verdict favorable to the petitioner. The juror reported the incident to the judge, who informed the prosecuting attorneys and advised with them. As a result, the Federal Bureau of Investigation was requested to make an investigation and report, which was accordingly done. The F. B. I. report was considered by the judge and prosecutors alone, and they apparently concluded that the statement to the juror was made in jest, and nothing further was done or said about the matter. Neither the judge nor the prosecutors informed the petitioner of the incident, and he and his counsel first learned of the matter by reading of it in the newspapers after the verdict.

The above-stated facts were alleged in a motion for a new trial, together with an allegation that the petitioner was substantially prejudiced, thereby depriving him of a fair trial, and a request for a hearing to determine the circumstances surrounding the incident and its effect on the jury.* A supporting affidavit of the petitioner's attorneys recited the alleged occurrences and stated that if they had known of the incident they would have moved for a mistrial and requested that the juror in question be replaced by an alternate juror. Two newspaper articles reporting the incident were attached to the affidavit. The Government did not file answering affidavits. The District Court, without holding the requested hearing, denied the motion for a new trial. The Court of Appeals held that the District Court had not abused its discretion, since the petitioner had shown no prejudice to him. 205 F. 2d 277, 291. The case is here on writ of certiorari. 346 U. S. 884.

In a criminal case, any private communication, contact, or tampering, directly or indirectly, with a juror during a trial about the matter pending before the jury is, for obvious reasons, deemed presumptively prejudicial, if not made in pursuance of known rules of the court and the instructions and directions of the court made during the trial, with full knowledge of the parties. The presumption is not conclusive, but the burden rests heavily upon the Government to establish, after notice to and hearing of the defendant, that such contact with the juror was harmless to the defendant. Mattox v. United States, 146 U. S. 140, 148–150; Wheaton v. United States, 133 F. 2d 522, 527.

*The motion for a new trial was also grounded on many other contentions, several of which have also been presented to this Court. Because of our disposition of the case on the issue treated herein, we do not pass upon these additional questions.

We do not know from this record, nor does the petitioner know, what actually transpired, or whether the incidents that may have occurred were harmful or harmless. The sending of an F. B. I. agent in the midst of a trial to investigate a juror as to his conduct is bound to impress the juror and is very apt to do so unduly. A juror must feel free to exercise his functions without the F. B. I. or anyone else looking over his shoulder. The integrity of jury proceedings must not be jeopardized by unauthorized invasions. The trial court should not decide and take final action ex parte on information such as was received in this case, but should determine the circumstances, the impact thereof upon the juror, and whether or not it was prejudicial, in a hearing with all interested parties permitted to participate.

We therefore vacate the judgment of the Court of Appeals and remand the case to the District Court with directions to hold a hearing to determine whether the incident complained of was harmful to the petitioner, and if after hearing it is found to have been harmful, to grant a new trial.

Judgment vacated.
